(Moscow Correspondent, NBC)

Moscow, Sept. 24.

Although there are no "drive-in" movies in Russia (because there aren't endugh privately-owned cars), the Russians are the first to devise the "walk-in" (and stand-in) movie. Every Saturday night how the Russian can attend a free movie in any one of a half dozen Mescow squares. All it takes is a sturity pair of legs and a resistance to child night winds. When winter comes in earnest it's doubtful whether even the most robust fans will take advantage of the free "walk-ins."

"walk-ins."

It all began with the Communist-sponsored World Youth Festival last summer. Large screens were erected on the sides of a number of buildings to show Soviet, films to some of the 30,000 young people who came to Moscow from 125 countries. Picture thestreet in Moscow are scarce—and none are precisely palaces.

Misstiv film theatres are bare halls

Mostly film theatres are bare halls with straight-backed wooden, unpholstered chairs. Tickets are purchased in advance for showings, but still it's necessary to stand in line.

Russians turn out in droves for the "walk-ins." Boys take their dates and now hold gloved hands while shifting from foot to foot during the three-hour-long Saturday night double, and sometimes triple, feature if you count an industrial film on some aspect of Soviet economic development that's usually shown along with the features.

Ed Sullivan Champions Pay-TV for Performers

Hollywood, Oct. 1.
Pay-tv would be "great for performers," Ed Sullivan opined in a taped interview for Lew Irwin's KPOL news program in which he debunked the "feud" with Steve Allen as something "newspapers have built up." Asked if he thought Allen would last opposite him, Sullivan quipped, "I hope so, for his famility's sake."
Sullivan said performers are "underpaid when you think what they accomplish for sponsor," and said fatly that if he "got a happy little offer" to enter pay-see vided himself "I'd be on my way right now."

'57-'58 ENTRIES

Apparently to the surprise of no one, the new season's entries on the three tv networks, up to and including yesterday, have failed to produce a single new personality or program of major hit proportions. Going even a step turther, the vast majority of those that have already displayed their initial wares before a not-too-breathless U.S. populace are strictly lowerease carbons of shows that have gone before, failing to generate even a modicum of excitement or enthusiasm among the general viewing public.

True, there's an expectancy of sorts concerning some of the still due premieres, as for example the new "Frank Sinatra Show," the new Walter Winchell film series, the hour Dinah Shore series and CBS-TV's widely-heralded "Seven Lively Arts" Sunday afternoon showcase, among others. Thus ABC is pinning high hopes on both Sinatra and Winchell to crash the mediocrity barrier, and the network will lay odds the soon-due Warner Bros-made "Colt 45" will be the hottest action show to come down the line since: "Gunsmoke" (but, then, everybody else, from "Restless Gun" to "Maverick" to "Have Gim Will Travel" to "Californians" were engaged in similar pre-show chest-thumping).

It's also true that the concrete the 57-58 tv flooring hasn't settled yet. But the pattern of the product, nonetheless, is unmistakped. It's a pattern distings" led (Continued on page 54)

Albany, Oct. 1.

Asserting that the American Broadcasting Co. and Phillip Morris cigarets permitted Mike Walace via his recent interview of Margaret Sanger to "give vent to his offensive sensationalism," The Evangelist, official weekly of the Albany Catholic Diocese, editorially declared Friday (27) that the web and the sponsor "pervert the alm of television as a medium of culture, education and entertainment." Wallace, who claimed to explore the economic, moral and religious aspects of birth-control, was the instrument whereby Mrs. Sanger, veteran proponent of barnyard ethics and race suicide: was given entrance into millions of decent homes to taint them with her evil philosophy of lust and animalistic mating."

The program, from the viewpoint of The Evangelist, was "a completely one-sided exposition of a philosophy that, given ascendancy, would destroy mankind morally and physically ... if Margaret Sanger had her way, the ultimate result would be no audience for tv and no rising generation to 'Call for Philip Morris'."

50.000 True Lovers Hit Bayrenth's Wagner Trail; Mild Staging Is Back By HAZEL GUILD

Bayreuth, Sept. 24.

Bayreuth's cycle of Wagnerian operas played to over 50,000 customers in 1857, a new high. Always a solemn occasion, performances start at 4 p.m. when the audience arrives in evening attire. Tickets are hard to come by, mostly booked months ahead. Perhaps start at 4 p.m. when the audience arrives in evening attire. Tickets are hard to come by, mostly booked months ahead. Perhaps half are purchased by French, British and American addicts. Range of admissions is $6.25 to $12.50 but despite sellout, and scale, the setup requires underwriting from the Society of Friends of Bayreuth, due to famed singers and tricky production.

Visitors came singly and in mail groups from the East Block countries, and more than 500 journalists, including the top papers of the Soviets, were present.

Wieland Wagner, considered the more imaginative of the two brothers, will stage next year's "new" production, of "Lohengrin." "Tristan and Isolde," "Parsifal," and the "Ring of the Nibelunger" will complete the 1958 cycle.

Following 1956's revolutionary, and highly criticized, super-modernization of the classic "Meistersinger of Nuernberg," Bayreuth's "new" production this year was a quiet, toned-down and refined version of "Tristan and Isolde," which drew musical raves for the outstanding singing of Wolfgang Windgassen and Birglt Nilsson, and polite applause for its far-less-than-novel staging.

"Emperor Norton" ballet, keyed to the sixth anniversary of UNESCO, is based on a San Francisco legendary figure. Norton was an English Jew who made a fortune, lost it, became demented, declared himself Emperor Norton I, Protector of Mexico and San Francisco, issued proclamations—such as one about wanting to "marry Queen Victoria for international amity"—which were played straight and in detail in the Frisco press. His legendary renown is tied so vividly to the growth and development of San Francisco that he's still copy there. still copy there.

Duke is also working with Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee on a new musicalization of 'Dillly,' from the Theodore Pratt novel. Locale has been shifted from Hollywood, on the premise that the film base is not as "commercial" as a broader canvas.

OLIVIER-LEIGH-MARCH IN YUGOSLAV FILM?

Yugoslavian film interests, pressing for more co-production deals with other (but not Iron Curtain) countries, may be coming up with pictures starring the Laurence Olivier-Vivien Leigh combo and Fredric March. This was passed along this week by Sidney Kaufand, head of Grand Prize Films and key figure in United States film dealings with the Tito country. He didn't have any details.

Kaufman said he'd also like to correct some popular misconceptions about the Yugo picture business. Country has eight studios and these are not governmentowned, as is thought in many quarters. The Riviera Lounge policy also makes possible the wider use of comedians who would stand little

Since the quest of most of the

MORGAN'S GALLERY OF HOLLYWOOD HEELS

Al Morgan, whose radio-tv background stood him in good stead in fashloning "The Great Man," a behind-the-mike closeup of You-Know-Who has not quite achieved the same thing with his Hollywood novel, "Cast of Characters" (Dutton; $3.50). Almost, but not quite, It's as racy. It is as compellingly easy to read. Morgan's flair for dialog is again to the front. His obvious skill as a trained reporter with a quick ear and eye to each new canvas he surveys is manifest. But the title itself, "Cast of Characters," perhaps answers why this is more diffuse a novel than his sardonic closeup of "The Great Man." Being a cast of assorted (mostly)-heels, they are not dull people. They may be heels, lechers, opportunists, phoneys, but dull (Continued on page 22)

THE 'LIE-OGRAPHY'

Did Jeanne Eagels steal the script of "Rain" from another actress? The film biography says she did. Showfolk take a dim view of this angle, for which all verification seems lacking

Related to the whole biopic thing, with its distortion and myth-peddling facets, is Polly Bergen's recent thoughtless and ill-informed (who told the youngster?) crack that Helen Morgan, whom she is now impersonating, was "a very ordinary singer of extremely limited fame," so just the right size for Miss Bergen. There are admirers of Miss Morgan's talent who will be waiting to see how she matures.

Then there is "The Joker Is Wild." While Joe E. Lewis would be the first to agree that he's a man who loves the sauce, the film puts more accent on those two brothers, Haig & Haig, than on the many hoodlums backgrounding his Chicago cabaret start.

In short, the showmen are starting to wonder how far some of these "lie-ographies" can and should go.

Famous Artists Associates lured away his client Dolores Hicks professionally known as Do lores Hart, agent Carlos Alvarado charged in a $236,200 Superior Court suit.

Court suit.

Alvarado claimed he signed a one year contract with Miss Hart last December and a month later got her a seven-year deal with Hal Wallis which started her at $250 per week and raised her to $3,000 per week at the termination of the options. According to the complaint, Famous Artists induced Miss Hart to breach her contract last June and to refuse to pay his commissions.

Alvarado estimated her income for the next six years under the Wallis pact with be $362,000 and asked for 10% of this amount plus $200,000 for injury to his reputation and goodwill, unfair competition and punitive damages. In setting forth the claim for injury to his reputation, Alvarado said the Wallis contract was of great value to his reputation and that Miss Hart's switch to Famous Artists gave the impression that Alvarado lacked the ability or integrity to represent her properly.

Gold Medal Wants Stockholders To Be of Show Biz

In an unusual twist.

In an unusual twist, a motion picture outfit floating a stock issue has a policy of being selective about who can buy the shares. Company is the Gold Medal Studios, Bronx, N. Y., and, in selling 100,000 shares at $3 per, retains the right to okay or reject any potential customer.

Angle behind it is this: GM is particularly anxious to have show business names on its stockholder roster, the theory being that professional talent, having such an investment, would be more inclined to endeavor to push film-making ventures GM's way whenever possible. Outsiders obviously wouldn't have any influence along these lines.

Brightened Outlook In Philippines on Problems Of Tax & Remittance

Settlement of tax and remittance problems in the Philippines within the next few weeks was predicted in Gotham last week by Irving Maas, the Motion Picture Export Assn's Far East supervisor. Philippine Internal Revenue, Bureau originally assessed MPEA members for 15,000,000 pesos (close to $5,000,000), arguing the distributors should pay 24% of the revenue credited to the U.S. companies as withholding tax. It applies to the U.S. companies as withholding tax. It applies to the U.S. companies as withholding tax.

While still following with interest (and some concern) discussions re Europe's own proposed commor film market, the American compa-nies now are taking a more re-laxed attitude vis-awis this "threat." There are several solid reasons for optimism.

The most important one is that American film reps on the Continent now have begun to report back to New York that there appears to be quite a disparity between what European film people are saying, and the position taken by their respective governments.

by their respective governments.
Furthermore, the rapid settlement of the Anglo-American film pact, and its one-year extension as well as the reelection of the Adenauer regime in West Germany and the assurances the Motion Picture Export Assn. has obtained there that the status quo will be observed, has contributed to a more optimistic view.

The most important members of the ECM "pool" are Italy, France, West Germany and Belgium. Some in Britain, including J. Arthur Rank, have expressed definite interest, though Britain would fit in till a free trade zone rather than direct partnership in ECM. Yet, the British Government, via the Board of Trade, has not taken a definite position and, if anything, is opposed to any moves tending to "discriminate" against the U. S. Industry.

The last European film market meet was held at Ischia, Italy, immediately following the Venice festival. How important is the film com How important is the film com-pany branch manager? For years exhibitors have been saying he's an unautonomous soul, best familiar with his local territory but, in li-censing deals, always subject to the dictates of the homeoffice. The test in first part will come where the b.m., via the conciliation practice, actually sides with the exhib. The way the system is written out, this could come to be. Part 2 comes when it's time for the home-office brass to sustain or overrule the b.m.

Red-Run Unions Of Paris Studios Under Attack

Hollywood, Oct. 1

Hollywood, Oct. 1.

Employment preference to members of anti-Communist film unions in France has been promised to Raymond Le Bourre, secretary of Force Ouvriere, confederation of French labor groups, he told AFL Film Council last week.

New policy was worked out between LeBourre, here on a State Dept.-sponsored trip, and General Manager E. J. Mannix of Metro and Fred S. Mayer, industrial relations director of 20th-Fox.

This marks apparent reversal of situation which last month drew strong charges from Pat Somerset, Screen Actors Guild exec, following a European trip. At that time, Somerset charged that partyline unions held a stranglehold on French studios, and that both Metro and 20th hired their workers through known Reds or fellow travelers.

In report to Film Council, Le Bourre declared that agreement "will in no way constitute a union monopoly, which is against the law in France. The Force Ouvriere union are open unions, and the producers have the right to hire whom they wish."

Film Council has taken vigorous stand against use of Red-tinged unions by American producers, in liming abroad. At time of Somerset charges, council started policy of publicly naming the Yank producers who allegedly use such workers.

Chicago Wants Film Festival Bad In 1959 St. Lawrence Seaway Year

Agitation for a 1959 film festival here has gained momentum since originally proposed by the mayor's commission despite lack of recommission despite lack of response from Eric Johnston and the Motion Picture Association of America. Several offers of cooperation with the project have been proferred locally and by foreign trade councils and consulates but the mayor's office has so far declined to take further action on this aspect of the projected 1959 St. Lawrence Seaway celebration here, feeling that the success or fallure of such a move depends upon the okay of the American film industry.

Teitel claims that the series of Italian, Finnish, Greek, Austrian, English, Yugoslav and French films he has scheduled for the immediate future is a test of public interest here in this product. The heavy influx of tourists in '59 he feels will augment this interest considerably. Teitel says that the U. Greene developed another worry. "With the comings and goings what would the film exchange think?" His situation would confuse any checker. "They might report I was operating a loose door." There's now a sign out front proclaiming "Our Crusade is Now Over—Live Modern—Buy Your Coffin Nails at Our Lobby Stand." Greene says that personally he's given up smoking and has persuaded others to do so. But he can't buck a nervous nation's habits. He remarks cynically that while the rest of the stock market has slumped Lorillard stock is at a new high. "During the two months of my no smoking policy, I couldn't really s'op the addicts although I did reduce the vibration in the theatre from tobacco cough."

But Violence, Including Rock 'n' Roll, Strictly Out for Indonesian Film Audiences

By FRED HIFT

It is Communist pressure, or the fear of it, that sometimes forces Indonesia's film censor board to be tougher than it would normally be an American pictures, Maria be tougher than it would normally be an American pictures, Maria Santoso, secretary to the Prime Minister of Indonesia and chair-man of that country's film censor board, declared in Manhattan last

Mrs. Santoso (now on the Coast and heading for home) said Americans generally failed to recognize and appreciate the developmental level of her country and the impact motion pictures make on the masses. "We simply cannot allow scenes of violence and cruelty to pass," she said. "We would be criticized, and justly so. We don't want our people to see these things and have them copied, as unquestionably they would be."

It appears that the board at times scissors U.S. plx, or bans them outright, for fear of Communist press reaction which manages to stir up popular sentiment against the West and against the U.S. particularly. "We are trying to avoid that where we can," she said. Mrs. Santoso said Communist penetration was strong in the areas of Indonesia where religion wasn't taken seriously, but had made little headway in areas where the Moslem faith was observed strictly.

In her private opinion, the In-In her private opinion, the Indonesian masses must "grow up" some more before they can be served with a balanced motion picture diet that includes all types of subjects, including films on colonial-sum. Mrs. Santoso confirmed that the Soviets for a while brought films into Indonesia via the diplomatic pouch and showed them, but said that this had been stopped. May Table Cable Gabfest at TOA

Split has developed in the ranks of the Theatre Owners of America

Split has developed in the ranks of the Theatre Owners of America leadership over the cable theatre topic at the TOA convention next November in Miami.

TOA has had evidence that the membership is more than mildly interested in the topic and in the results achieved at Bartlesville, Okla. Several TOA leaders want the subject to be given a thorough airing at the convention. Others don't see it that way.

Among those who can't see paytv being whooped up at the confabits Mitchell Wolfson of Miami. The Wolfson circuit runs a local tv stion. Ernest Stellings, TOA prexy, has come out strongly against subscription video over the air, but has never gone on record as to his views on the Telemovie idea. It's said that Stellings, who operates in the South, has more than a passing interest in the cable theatre possibilities and may install onliness? Walter Reade Jr. is pictured as favoring full discussion of himself. Walter Reade Jr. is pictured as favoring full discussion of chibition generally. Most theatre exees are basically suspicious of anything having to do with pay-tv. On the other hand, so much has been said and written about the potential of tolleasting, particularly if done by wire, that many have begun to consider it as a possible extension of their business.

Before the Federal Communications Commission, exhibs have steadfastly battled any recognition or test of fee-tv using the air. This same tenacity has not been apparent in relation to systems using cables, mostly because the theatres feel that they stand a chance to control a closed-circuit medium via franchises or otherwise. This split personality approach to pay-as-youse, in the opinion of many, has seriously weakened the overall exhibit ones against pay video.

ISSUE HOTS UP

San Francisco, Oct. 1.
Home-toll video took a shellacking from the finance committee of Frisco's Board of Supervisors last Friday (2) and now appears locally more distant than it did three rooths are months ago.

Part of this was precipitated by an attack on the pay-see parlor medium from film exhibitors, and part came from the finance co mitteemen suddenly deciding take a second look themselves.

The committee was prodded into asking these questions by Arnold C. Childhouse, secretary of the 100-theatre United California chain and the Skouras Brothers' board representative among the Naify circuit directorate. Childhouse broke into a long discussion of the latest of a series of franchise drafts prepared by the Frisco city attorney's office. He criticized efforts he said were being made to the Skiatron in with the move of the New York Giants to Frisco next baseball season.

He claimed it would be necessary to black out video coverage of Ciants' games altogether in order to come anywhere near filling the 45,000-seat stadium now on the drawing boards for the ballclub. One committee member, Supervisor Francis McCarty, clashed with Childhouse on this point.

McCarty, who's been an important leader of the drive to bring the Giants west, said any statement linking the ballclub and payses is "absolutely false and unjustified." He added: "The issue here is whether we should protect one industry by not admitting another. I object to your slurs, insults, mistatements and inferences..."

Skouras on Home-Toll Promoters: Where Are The Rent Guarantees?

Greek Flag Flies at Cameo There'll be no cooperation with any home-toll experiments "unless we know what we get for our films," Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, said in N. Y. this week.

Cameo Theatre, N. Y., occasionally a showcase for Soviet product, will rely more on Greek films for the 1957-58 season. House, operated by David Fine, last week inked a deal with Chelly Wilson's Greek Motion Pictures Inc., involving some 24 Greek language features.

Most of the films will have English titles or narration. Among the 24 are "The Shepherd's Daughter," a spectacle in Ferraniacolor, and "Madame Sousou," a romantic comedy.

Position of IATSE Film Technicians, that a new employee must tender his initiation fee within 30 days (as required in Taft-Hartley Law) or be discharged, was upheld by Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco over weekend, in overturning a National Labor Relations Board order.
Court's unanimous opinion denied enforcement of the NLRB order in the case of Hayden Balthorpe, former Technicolor printer, which had ordered that Balthorpe be reinstated to his job with full pay since his discharge in 1955. Case was complicated by fact that Balthorpe had finally submitted his initiation fee some time after union's ultimatum, Technicolor that he be fired, but before his discharge. Take Away Bell System Bill And Cable Theatre Grin Broadens

Elimination of the telephone company in future cable theatres of the type now operated at Bartlesville, Okla., is seen drastically reducing costs but also raising a crop of new problems.

Home-appy film scheme proponents evinced considerable interest last week in the statement by Henry S. Griffing, head of Video Independent Theatres, when he told Variery that he planned to create future wire setups without tying in with the phone company.

Griffing acknowledged that, in order to show a profit, the cable at Bartlesville would have to be extended to cover additional sets. He said he did not plan to use the phone company to undertake such an expansion and that, in other towns, there was no reason why Video couldn't lay its own cable. In Bartlesville, Video Iaid the main cable under contract from the telephone company, and the leased back five channels for a five year period. Cost is $3,300 me to the population of the costs. "Les Girls" is an exceptionally tasty musical morsel that should help to satiate the somewhat emaciated Metro lion and, at the same time, provide the necessary fodder to satisfy hungry theatre turnstiles. The tinted tuner is in the best tradition of the studio, long known and honored for its songand-dance contributions.

It's an original and zestful entry that would have been greeted with critical handsprings if it had been originally presented on the Broadway stage. As it now stands, it represents a major effort in the art of the film musical and, as such, should rate prominent attention when the annual year-end acco-ades are passed around. It's almost certain to receive the approval of the film appraisers; it's sufficiently sophisticated to attract the more discerning film patrons; and it has the entertainment ingredients that will appeal to mass audiences. The parlay represents sock bo. all the way.

First-rank creators have combined their talents to make "Les Girls" a brezy and polished film. They include producer Sol C. Giegel, scripter John Patrick, director George Cukor, composer-lyricist Cole Porter, and Vera Caspary, who provided the story. The framework they have supplied lends itself perfectly to the international cast Siegel has assembled to execute the contributions of Patrick and Porter. Gene Kelly, Mitzi Gaynor, Kay Kendall and Taina Elg whisk through the proceedings in uncommonly appealing fashion and each one contributes almost equally to the ultimate success of the picture.

The musical is set in London, Paris and Granada, Spain. It's the story of a song-and-dance team made up of Kelly and the Misses Gaynor, Kendall and Elg. Known as "Barry Nichols and Les Girls," they are a popular Continental act Many years after the act has broken up, Miss Kendall, now the wife of an English per, has writ-

The court trial provides the setting for a series of flashbacks as three members of the "Les Girls" troupe—Kelly and the Misses Kendall and Elg—testify as to what took place in the past. Each gives a decidedly different version of what happened and it leaves the question of "what is truth?" completely up in the air. It's not a case of deliberate falsehoods on the part of any member of the trio, but on indication that the same incidents can look different to different people.

Miss Kendall, as the British member of the troupe, pictures Miss Eig as a forward, brassy, and grasping member of the act who deliberately sets out to attract Kelly, two-times her future husband, and attempts suicide when Kelly eventually turns her down. Miss Eig, as the pert French member of the act, tells the court that it was actually Miss Kendall who had carried on with Kelly and tried to commit suicide. Kelly's concept differs materially from that of both girls. He wasn't interested in either one of them, he says, and actually had his eye on Miss Gaynor, who is now his wife Neither of the girls attempted suicide, he testifies, and that both were accidentally overcome from the gas fumes of a faulty heater.

Spain. Porter has created seven new songs for the picture. While they may not represent his most distinguished score, they nevertheless fit the context of the picture perfectly. "Ca C'est L'Amour," sung by Kelly and Miss Elg, has a pop hit. Other sock routines include "Ladies in Walting," sung and danced by the three girls, "Your Just Too, Too," sung by Kelly and Miss Kendall; "Why Am I So Gone About That Gal?" danced and sung by Kelly and, Miss Gaynor; and "The Rope Song," danced by Kelly and Miss Elg. The lyrics of the song have the unmistakable Porter stamp.

Miss Kendall, heretofore known of U.S. audiences as the trumpetblowing model in the British import "Genevieve," emerges as a delightful comedienne in her first American picture. Her performance in "Les Girls," a truly blockbuster contribution, marks her as a star of the first magnitude. Her services will be much in demand from now on by Hollywood producers.

Miss Elg, the Finnish actressballerina who portrays a French girl, more than lives up to Metro's hopes for her in her first important role. She has a quality that is exceedingly appealing and it will come as no surprise to see her importantly cast in future Metro productions.

Miss Gaynor, as the American member of "Les Girls," is enjoying what appears to be a rebirth of her young career. Her performance as the wholesome, uncomplicated member of the troupe contributes greatly to the new faith the industry has shown in her ability and which has been marked by her selection to play the coveted role of Nelie Forbush in "South Pacific."

The frictions and subterranean strains and stresses of suburban living are expertly though unpleasantly explored in this slick Jerry Wald production. No question that, with the current migration to the suburbs and the boomproduced mode of modern living and buying "on credit," this film should provide the base for immediate identification on the part of many couples who find themselves in similar circumstances. And such self-identification should help the ticket sale. ticket sale.

Director Martin Ritt (moving over from tv) has done his best to deal realistically with the assorted characters from the John McPartland novel. The flaws of the book are, to a degree, aggravated in the picture and the revamping of the ending—almost everyone ends upgoing to church—adds an incongruous contrivance. Yet, the picture makes its point, and in-between the dramatics there is a glimmering of the predicament of the new mortgaged middle-class, groping for security and struggling hard to afford the luxuries and conveniences made attractive via the "No Down Payment" come-on.

If this is a social documentary, the "No Down Payment" come-on. If this is a social documentary, the pill has been properly sugar-coated by writer Philip Yordan. He as concentrated primarily on the problems of a number of couples, living at uncomfortably close quarters in a California housing development. Yordan can't be blamed for making this nucleus of society as diverse as possible to achieve story contrast. Unfortunately, this makes it difficult to believe the affinity of the protagonists. They are—with a single exception—unpleasant characters.

animy of the protagonists. They are—with a single exception—unpleasant characters.

The film has been very well cast and the performances all are strongly on its credit side. Joanne Woodward as Leola Boone, wife of the cruel and tyramical Troy, etches the film's best portrayal. She makes the childish, loyal Leola, covering up her deep hurt over having given up an illegitimate child, a moving character and she is far and away the most real of all the people in the picture. Here perhaps is one of the screen's top talents in the making.

Tony Randall also does a sect top talents in the making.

It's a distinct change-of-pace for him and he makes the most of a juicy role. He handles the comedy lines with deft assurance and sub-ordinates them to the more desperate aspects of the man he portrays. Sheree North as his wife offers an agreeable surprise in a straight nart.

In the book she resents the attack, but reacts positively to Mitchell). Hunter is goodlooking, but that's just about all.

Pat Hingle, the only sane, sturdy character in the plot, is strong in the role of the anchor man, and so is his wife, Barbara Rush. It will occur to some that this is a motley crew of characters, thrown at one another's mercy by dint of their proximity to one another and the similarity of their economic circumstance. Similarity to real-life situations would be coincidental and not wholly real, since people aren't wholly dependent on their neighbors.

Entir's direction is crisp and effective, with many endearing little thuman touches. Yordan's script, with some soap opera overtones, has retained the essentials of the McPartland novel. Probably due to the Code, Mitchell has to die in the end after an exciting slug-leasing effect.

wane. This one was produced under the Bel-Air banner for United Artists release.

Story by Richard Landau and Arthur Orloff, as screenplayed by the former, has a novel, interesting beginning: A brief, 16m run-off of a film turned out by master-mind criminal John Russell, partially shows an ingenious plan to steal war surpus narcotics worth over $2,000,000 from a ship in L.A. Harbor Russell has turned out the film so as to get "backers" for his scheme, which he does via gangster Frank Fenton. Latter, to insure his investment, sends along June Blair to act as one of Russell's accomplices. Plans go according to schedule until Miss Blair falls for Stuart Whitman, ambulance driver who unknowingly becomes involved in the crime. This leads to a series of events which end with Russell's death, safe delivery of the dope and a loving Whitman at Miss Blair's side.

Russell is convincing as the brutal criminal leader; his violent "roughing-up" of some of the cast members, however, will not appeal to the squeamish. June Blair subsequently term-pacted by 20th-Fox) is a looker with above-average dramatic ability, while Whitman makes an extremely good impression as her later vis-a-vis. Margo Woode, fourth "co-star," is good as the nurse whom Miss Blair replaces in the "plan."

The Howard W. Koch production, on which Aubrey Schenck functioned as exec producer, is well directed by William J. Hole Jr., one-time script supervisor-turned tw director who herewith makes his feature-film debut. The action is especially well staged, and makes fine use of some off-beat backgrounds.

McCullough's New Book Reveals Resort's Place In Film History as Well as in Americana

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

Edo McCullough, the son of a concessionaire, has written out of boyhood memories and diligent research an admirable compilation of Americana entitled "Good Old Coney Island" which Scribner's has placed in the book stalls at $5.95 a copy. The history ranges from the 1880s when Coney was under the absolute dictatorship of an amazing political scoundrel, of the deepest cynicism, one John Y. McKane. At that time Coney operated, by primitive rock 'n' roll, referring to what first hit some of the customers and what then happened to

The chippy-cheaty period came to an end when McKane, to his own utter dishelief that it could happen, landed in Sing Sing. Thereafter there were different sporting events at Coney, Brighton, Sheepshead Bay and environs—but still outside the law, though now stylishly so. These diversions were horseracing and prize fights and a good deal of colorful anecdota embroiders both phases, as author McCullough reconstructs the Gay '90s. Coney has always had a peculiar broiders both phases, as author McCullough reconstructs the Gay '90s.

Coney has always had a peculiar affinity for the newsreel cameras and as cinematic background for boy-meets-girl. Film men will read with engrossment how William A. Brady in promoting the Jeffries-Sharkey champlonship bout of 1899 worked out an elaborate technique with Biograph only to have his own cameras buckle at the crucial last (25th) round while in the audience, perpetrating an unabashed piracy, Albert Smith of Vitagraph and a party of conspirators, of whom the still-living vaudevillian Joe E. Howard was one, successfully photographed the events, sans license, sans royalty and not even as courtesy card of thanks for the use of the hall and Brady's then pioneering system of arc lights.
Competition of this hustling kind was typical of the old Coney and the book details the exuberances of such latterday Barnums as Sam Gumpertz, Fred Thompson, George Tilyou, George Hamid, and Paul Boynton, the latter the first to enclose a lot of concessions within a central admission gate via his Sea Lion Park, belleved the first in the States.

Several of the Coney impresari,

Several of the Coney impresari, notably Boynton, are far more visually promising screen "action" than many a biographical subject taken on in Hollywood's quest of real people. Boynton's fame was based on his rubber floating suit. Wearing this patented garment he dropped overboard on a black night in gale-whipped Atlantic seas and paddled from a liner to Ireland. Not counting the long roster of vaudevillians who played regular weekly change dates, Coney was part of the story of Marle Dressler who had a concession there and loved a handsome can-trainer. Another film star-to-be who cavorted (as an acrobat) at Coney was Cary Grant.

Probably not many Americans of Several of the Coney impresari,

(as an acrobat) at Coney was Cary Grant.

Probably not many Americans of the present period know that the now "standard" tune, "Meet Me Tanight in Dreamland" was originally the official, commissioned theme song of Coney's most pretentious but ill-fated venture, a $3,500,000 competitor to Luna Park. The heartbreaking destruction of Dreamland by fire in 1910 is vividly recounted in the book—with methodical estalling of the personal losses and tragedies. Handdrawn fire equipment from New York came galloping down a road lined with thousands of sightseeers who cheered widdly. But the high-pressure pumping station, only a few months old add supposed to banish the dread of fire from Coney forever, flopped almost completely.

The 1910 fire put the lights out in Coney and they never again shone so brilliantly after that exciting final night of agony and melo drama with wild beasts screaming in death and two lions (Continued on page 25)

"What fight?" asked the man.
"I wanted to see Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis" (in "Jumping Jacks").

DeVictoria explained the theatre was shut for closed-circuit of the title scrap and asked, "Didn't it seem odd to be paying $4.40 for a motion picture ticket?"

"A little," replied the customer, "but with prices the way they are these days, I just figured film tickets were up, too."

Frisco Festival Gets Film Co-op From Overseas

Half a dozen countries already have signified they'll submit films to first International Film Festival to be held in the U. S. and a date for the two-week event has been set. Festival, non-sanctioned by the film industry, will start Dec. 4, according to Harold Zel-lerbach, industrialist and head of the local Art Commission which is sponsoring the affair.

Countries whose consul-generals have committed films are Italy, Britain, Japan, India, Denmark and Spain, and eight more nations are expected to submit entries shortly.

Coordinator for the festival is Irving M. Levin, who runs San Francisco Theatres Inc., the Frisco arm of Michael Naify's United California-Golden State circuit.

Invitations to 14 film-making countries asked to participate wentout over signature of Mayor George Christopher, who is assoiated politically with Spyros Skouras (and who only last week tossed his hat in the ring for the Republican nomination to succeed William Knowland as a U. S. sepator) senator).

Festival will be held at the 1,000-seat Metro Theatre, close to down-town area. Competition rules are that each nation submit a list of pictures which it feels suitable, which carry English subtitles and which have English subtitles and in Northern California.

Industry's famed highspeed "grapevine" re boxoffice results of pictures just going into release is not only often incorrect, but can be decidedly misleading in distort-ing a film's real value.

That's the complaint of Jack Ellis who heads Ellis Films, distributors of imports. In the says too many exhibitors and bookers are too easily influenced by the gilb word-of-mouth concerning the performance of given pix, without bothering to find out the circumstances under which the gross has or hasn't been achieved.

"When a film opens out-of-fown."

stances under which the gross has or hasn't been achieved.

"When a film opens out-of-town, within days' the industry 'knows' that it's a hit, a lemon or a so-so grosser," said Ellis. "This information is taken as gospel and used without any qualification. No one hothers to inquire into the special circumstances of the date, what the weather was, which competition the attraction had to buck, etc. All that counts are the boxoffice results reported via the grapevine."

Ellis said quite a few pictures of definite potential, particularly in the foreign language field, hadn't gotten their due for the simple reason that the "grapevine" had condemned them on the strength of an out-of-town preem.

Problem holds true also for the off-beat American entries. If a company opens that kind of production out of Gotham for a "test," and the results are negative, yery often the distributor simply won't bother much further with the pic on the theory that it isn't worth spending time and effort on it. Actually, argue some, the out-of-town test isn't worth box strength the picture may show in New York, or other parts of the country.

One quick example would be in New York, or other parts of the country.

One quick example would be "Love In the Afternoon," the Alied Artists picture, which was vastly disappointing outside N Y., but has been doing a thriving biz at the Plaza Theatre (if not the Paramount) in Manhattan.

Krishnamachari May Aid U.S. On India Vexation

Faint glimmer of hope for an improvement in the situation facing the American film companies in India came last week following a talk between Eric Johnston and T. T. Krishnamachari, India's Minister, in Washington.

Minister, in Washington.

Since their discussion, in which Krishnamachari expressed interest in the plight of the industry due to Indian restrictions, the Indian Government this week issued new regulations covering the six months' period ending March 1, 1958. Under these restrictions, American (and other foreign) film imports are cut to 10% of their former high.

In 1955, the II S, shipped some former high.

In 1955, the U, S. shipped some 250 pix into India. Figuring it on the half-year period, this would mean a reduction from 125 to 12 or 13 films. There may be loopholes allowing a couple of more imports, but on the whole it's felt in N.Y. that the companies can't keep going with this kind of allotment. Some of the distribs are in a better position than others since they can draw on old licenses.

While the results of the business while the results of the business-building campaign on the radio in Rochester and Denver are still un-der scrutiny, it's already clear that it hasn't netted any noticeable up-swing at the boxoffice.

Campaign lasted eight weeks in both cities, cost $6,000 in toto, and utilized all available stations, most-ly via the disk jockeys. It was institutional in character, but even-tually was switched to plug the best releases.

Theatremen were pleased with the intengibles of the drive, i.e., the overall impression about good pictures and the word-of-mouth created, but there was no outstanding reaction among the public, and the b.o. failed to register the effects. and Rodney Bush of 20th-Fox.

Suggestion is made that, based on the Rochester and Denver experiences, a new radio drive might most effectively be launched via a national radio show, such as MBC's Monitor. Radio stations in Rochester and Denver cooperated to the hilt in putting the film message across. Aim, primarily, wasn't to plug individual attractions, but to stress the pleasure of going to the movies, getting out of the house, etc.

One example of this concept, he said, was his own "Ten Commandments," which "will outgross any picture in the world—it's already grossed $26 million in 44 weeks," Asked if Hollywood would "clean house" as a result of the "Confidential" trial, he replied, wryly:

Using large and effective newspaper ads which in the smallest possible type stated their former titles, thus practically concealing the fact they're ressues, the Lyric on a Thursday opened with the pair to $1,000, an excellent mid-week gross for the house.

Local big-time football season's opener, the Minnesota-Washington game, pulling a capacity 62,500 crowd at $4 per, brought plenty of weekend transients into the Loop apparently without helping film biz, other than the two with hardicket pix. Lineup of newcomers almost nothing to draw hometowners downtown. One of weakest within recent memory, it includes twin bills of lesser fare at three houses. TOMLINSON BLASTS VOGEL, WANTS HIM TO PREVENT LOEW 'LEAKS' TO PRESS

Joseph Tomlinson, the Canadian road-builder, who, with Louis B. Mayer and Stanley Meyer, mapped and mounted the attack of recent months upon the Joseph Vogelergime in Loew's Inc., has now filed in Delaware, under his own sole signature, an all-out criticism of Loew's, its leadership, past performance and anticipated profit position.

I that he should be replaced. Transcript and minutes of this July 12 descript and rormance and annexpated profit position.

This is essentially the formed embodiment in legal brief of the seven points reported in VARIETY of Aug. 21 under the streamer headline, "Tomlinson's Side of Story"

It is also especially significant that Tomlinson is now asking the Delaware court to stop Vogel from "leaking" news to the press. It is thought doubtful that any judge would deny any corporate official the right to talk to reporters, or employ p u bil r relations counsel, but Tomlinson's sensitivity to the potshots (and indeed the Wall Street community distaste for the whole mutual "scalping party" situation) will hardly surprise the close students of this chapter of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The Delaware filing of Tomlinson was timed with his declaration that he personally coveted no job or title, had no wish to dominate or control Loew's Inc. (The big job-seeker heretofore has been identified by Vogelites as Stanley Meyer and the power-seeker as Louis B. Mayer.)

Tomlinson's fiercely-worded complaint filed in District Court seeks, ultimate'y, to have Vogel ousted as Loew's president. His immediate prayer is that the court declare as invalid all proxies collected by Vogel and his associates for the annual meeting which is now set for Oct. 15.

Hits at Loew's PR

He also wants Vogel, et al., enjoined from issuing any "false or misleading" statements to stockholders of the press (sie).

Tomlinson claimed that "so many false statements" have been made about him that he now wants to "make my position crystal clear." He's the largest individual stockholder (180,000 shares) and, he insists, his "sole interest is and has been to assure competent and able management for the company so as to protect my investment."

Tomlinson's Federal Court action names as defendants the corporation, Vogel and directors William and John L. Sullivan. Charge is they violated regulations of the Securities & Exchange Commission in proxy solicitations.

Proxy material included statements which strayed from material facts, Tomlinson alleges. He asid the financial condition of Loew's was not accurately dis-said the financial condition of Loew's was not accurately dis-closed, pointing to an April 17, 1957 report by the Booz, Allen & Hamilton management consultant firm which found corporate ineffi-ciency, management indifference, etc. Also it forecast annual studio printure losses of $11400,000 and ciency, management indifference, etc. Also it forecast annual studio picture losses of $11,400,000 and reported that 50% of the profits over the past 10 years came from "Gone With the Wind."

Tomlinson goes on to say that Arthur Anderson & Co., public accountants, hired to survey company practices, on July 12, 1957, presented to the board a report which "exposes the unbusinesslike and wasteful financial practices of Loew's management." The Anderson report, states the plaintiff, included a forecast that by Nov. 21, 1957, Loew's will have a cash deficit of $4,912,000. It also noted: no invantory, improper inclusion of $3,262,500 of television film rentals in income for the year ended Aug. 31, 1956, an overstatement of income for 1956 of $3,762,000 and improper inclusion of $500,000 of 16m film rentals in 1956's income.

Vogel is charged with numerous' other "misrepresentations." There was no basis for Vogel's assertion, as contained in an Aug. 9, 1957, letter to stockholders that Tomlinson and his associate, Stanley Meyer, hindered the president's announced program for rebuilding the company, "no measures proposed by Mr. Vogel during this period failed of passage" and minutes of board meetings will prove this, Tomlinson declared.

this, Tomlinson declared.

The plaintiff continued: Wrong is the assertion made by Vogel that Tomlinson and Meyer made "baseless accusations" against him; important actions taken by Vogel for the benefit of the company resulted from the "constructive criticism" contained in Tomlinson's letters to all board members.

Vogel is guilty of misleading the stockholders, states plaintiff, about the function of the board. And it's not true that certain directors wanted to prevent him from telling the "full story" of how they interfered with management and he's going to reveal it at the annual meeting. There's no such "full story" to tell, claims Tomlinson, and the annual meeting, if it comes off, will be a mere formality.

Defended, too, is Louis B. Mayer who, relates Tomlinson, helmed the studio over a period when the company had profits of over $250,000,000 and a gross of $3,500,000,000.

000 and a gross of $3,500,000,000. Vogel is accused of "leaking" to the press reports that important banking interests are supporting him, whereas this is not the case, claims Tomlinson. Vogel's July 22 press statement that four directors resigned because of Tomlinson's activities was branded a misrepresentation. They bowed out, as per the Tomlinson version, because they couldn't reach agreement on a successor to Vogel.

'Conciliation

New system of conciliation adopted by the major exhibitor organizations and the distributors opens the door for exhibitors to iron out grievances about any particular licensing contract even before such contract is signed. This was stated in New York this week by Herman M. Levy, general counsel of Theatre Owners of America. In other words Levy soid

In other words, Levy said, the theatreman may go into conciliation if he's offered a better run but does not want to go into competitive bidding, or if he feels the rental for the new run is too high. TOA's top attorney stressed that all controversies, whether arising out of signed contracts, or out of arrangements in process of negotiation, may be submitted to the newly-adopted conciliation machinery.

System provides that the exhib can take whatever beef he has to the branch manager of the film company involved. If the complaining theatreman fails to find satisfaction in this, he can go up the ladder to the office of the film company's general sales manager in pursuit of conciliation of differences

Levy believes there's no reason why exhibs should not put the system to use widely and, if it proves successful, need for an arbitration process would be rare. Idea behind the conciliation program is to cut down on court suits as well as reducing the need for arbitration.

"The objective of conciliation," as he puts it, "is to try, sincerely, to dispose of grievances amicably, informally, and quickly, and to try to avoid arbitration and litigation wherever possible."

As for the mechanics, the exhib with a squark is to state the nature of same, not necessarily in legal language, via letter to the branch manager. A meeting is to be set up and the exhib is permitted to bring someone with him—not an attorney but presumably an adviser. Third parties, such as those who may be affected by the outcome of the conciliation, also may sit in at the meeting on coadition that both the exhib and the distrib's branch manager concur.

Failing satisfactory results, the exhib may go "on appeal"—that is, take his case to the general sales manager and in this instance may be represented by an attorney. Sales chief similarly is permitted to have a legalistic standin.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Martin Poll, president of the Gold Medal Studio, New York, is out plugging Gotham as a production centre in much the same fashion that performers beat the drums for pictures in which they're participating. His schedule, as set up so far, include these radio-television shows: "Night Life," "Monitor," "Night Beat," Barry Gray, "Memory Lane," Wendy Barry and Dave Garroway programs.

Poll-also is seeking to get his message across via press interviews. Message is that N.Y. offers economy and efficiency as a film-making site. Among the pictures made in the east within the last few years are "Marty," "12 Angry Men," "Stage Struck," "The Goddess" and, currently, "Never Love a Stranger." Further, "Stranger" producer Harold Robbins has two more to make in Gotham under his deal with Allied Artists and Hi Brown is producing three for RKO, Poll is among the numerous residents of the east who dispute telefilm "producer Robert Altman's published assertions that N.Y. production is economically unsound because of the "payola." No need to pay anyone for anything beyond services rendered, he insisted.

Soundtrack album tieups, more in evidence than ever, get a new slant with the release of Folkways Records' "The Cannonsville Story" ahead of production of the picture from which it is taken. "Cannonsville Story" is one of three sequences in the film "Kinfolks," a feature-length backcountry drama being lensed by Jules V. Schwering for release by Film representatives in the late spring of 1958. Pic tells the story of "vanishing Americans," tied together via an itinerant worker who wanders from one area to the other. Cannonsville is in upstate New York and is being abandoned to make room for a N.Y. City Reservoir.

A click entry in the picture business can go this way. "White Slavery," made in Tangier by J. Barrett Mahon, under the Exploitation Films banner, was brought in at a negative cost of $30,000, it's strictly a sensationalism offering, offering no names and no production values, In other words, all sexploitation. Film in its first II weeks at New York's Rialto Theatre grossed $80,000. And after the usual against-the-picture charges, chances are that Mahon, formerly an Errol Flynn production partner, will go even with the conclusion of this single run.

Three main international film fests at Cannes, Berlin and Venice are of such importance to the industry that co-operation is imperative. That's the view of the Executive Council of the Federation of British Film Makers, taken at a meeting last week which considered reports on all the main European junkets. They also favor support for the Edinburgh festival. The Federation, however, appears to be unhappy at recent British entries, and has decided to explore the possibilities of a new selection method.

Seven new camera lenses, at cost of $20,000 each, have been developed by Panavision Inc., for the new Metro camera 65, Culver lot's widescreen process which bows with "Raintree County." Gottschalk, process for first time provides a negative in 65m from which can be supplied prints for any theatre screen in world regardless of shape or size. This includes superroadshow prints which utilize full 65m frame in 3-1 ratio.

Allied Artists personnel this week got the orders from the Command Post: Stress the company's new "major league" status in all trade dealings. Morey Goldstein, AA's vp.g.m., listing a number of pictures above the "B" budget bracket coming up, says he wants to "serve notice" that AA is now representing a "major source of motion picture product."

Jerry Kerr, artist in the Columbia homeoffice advertising department, who suffered a stroke recently, is working at home but instead of receiving his salary in the normal way bills the company for his services. It's in this manner that he receives his regular pay-check. His weekly bill is charged against whichever picture he happens to be working on.

Metro is abiding by the "Commandments" policy with "Raintree County," which represents a $5,000,000 investment cost in the negative alone. Add to that outlay the expense for prints, promotion and distribution and the reflection obviously is strictly blue chips. "Raintree" will play on the hardicket basis in six theatres at the start, following the premiere run which begins tonight (Wed.) in Louisville.

"Raintree" in view of the fiscal statistics, would be important under normal circumstances. It takes on greater significance in light of M-G's private warfare (Vogel vs. Tomlinson) with the attendant spotlight on the desperate need for money-making pictures.

Prominent artists in their fields have been chosen by Menotti to head the four branches of the event. Thomas Schippers has been named musical director, the dance department will be led by John Butler, Glovanni Urbani will be in charge of the fine arts section, while Jose Quintero will head the drama department.

So far, Menotti says, only the skeleton of a program for 1958 has been decided on. Jerome Robbins has been given "carte blanche" for a dance evening which will include two original ballets as well as a new adaptation of Stavinski's "Les Noces;" Italian director Luchino Visconti will present an evening of Italo theatre, again of his own Visconti will present an evening of Italo theatre, again of his own choice; Raymond Rouleau and a French troupe will stage the Daudet-Bizet "Arlesienne;" there will be a new opera by a young composer and probably a "rediscovered" European Opera; finally, a standard repertoire classic will be performed by new faces.

Menotti admitted he would like nothing better than a chance to stage one of his own works at Spo-leto, but added that this might hapleto, but added that this might happen only in a few years time—or perhaps not at all. It depends on gaps in the programs: if no other worthwhile vehicle can be found, a Menotti work might be inserted into the program. Menotti is personally busy prepping a project for the Paris Opera, as well as a Stateside TVer, which will preem at the Bruxelies Fair next year and will be "a love story," titled "Maria Golovil".)

Composer, who calls his project a "simple, unsensational festival," says he chose spaleto for various reasons, including its quietness, its relative accessibility from Rome and Florence, as well as its two theatres, which he feels are excellently equipped. One is a 1,000-seat Opera House, while the other is a 300-seat chamber theatre. Prices will be low, and attendance by youth will be fostered in an attempt to reach a relatively new music festival audience from that which yearly makes the rounds of Salzburg, Venice, Bayreuth, et al.

In order to preserve his event's "independence," Menotti plans to avoid all petitioning for government assistance in a country where the musical field practically lives off official handouts (which this year have been cut.) He hopes to convince his rich friends to help sponsor the event, which he admits is an "easier task than trying to convince rich strangers to do the same." Even in this field, however, he has already received some generous aid from such sponsors at the Catherwood Foundation of Philadelphia (which is paying for the Jerome Robbins evening of dance) and the Montecatini Company of Italy, which will sponsor production of an Italian opera with an International cast.

Menotti leaves soon for the USA, where he plans to continue his fund-raising campaign through the winter, returning to Italy in February. While there, he will also make final arrangements for next year's program, which he hopes to announce before the end of October.

Irish Lensmen Asking Jobs on 'Visiting' Sets

Dublin, Sept. 24.

An international problem looms over relations between visiting film units and Irish cameramen following refusal of a visiting unit to use services of local cameraman because not a member of the British Assn. of Cine Technicians. Unit involved was lensing sequences on "Rooney" for J. Arthur Rank Organization. Cameraman Vincent Corcoran said he was willing to become a member, but was told that membership is not open to "aliens." It was later reported that one Irishman is already a member, and according to British law Irish citizens are not aliens.

Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, strongest union in Ireland, controls all workers in the cinema here, and may retaliate against visiting units unless arrangements are made to lift the bar, already reported to the Irish government. Problem may develop further with establishment of the new Ardmore Studios at Bray, about 12 miles from here, which will be offering studio facilities for visiting units. Irish Actors Equity and British Equity operate on a reciprocal basis. Current hiatus may be resolved on same basis if existing small group of Irish cameramen and directors establish a group independently or allied to ITGWU.

Eady Drops To All-Time Low

London, Oct. 1.

A steep decline in the collections for the Eady Fund in the five-week period ended last Aug. 31 has led to a 25% distribution or the lowest in history. The yield to the Fund was $634,527 as comparable period in 1956. To aggravate the divvy distribution, gross rentals earned by British pix were up by 57% at $1,957,558, as against $1,247,016 in the four-week span to Aug. 25 last year.

The Eady Fund is now in its final stages as a voluntary scheme and becomes a statutory operation later this month, when it is expected to yield around $10,000,000 in the next year. On current earnings this should justify a distribution of between 40% and 50% on the distributors' gross in the domestic market.

Net profit last year of Keith, Prowse & Co., before taxation, soared 90% to a total of $131,012. Three Top German Film | Pinewood Tosses Directors Form Indie Pix Producing Outfit

Pix Producing Outfit

Berlin, Sept. 24.

Three top German film directors, Helmut Kaeutner, Wolfgang Staudte and Dr. Harald Braun, have founded an independent company, Freie Filmproduktion GmbH (Free Film Production Ltd.) in Hamburg. This setup has drawn considerable attention because the company's three founders are regarded as some of the most prominent pix directors in the country.

Two of the founders (Helmut Kaeutner is currently in Hollywood) revealed the new outfit has nothing else in mind than making of good (art-slanted) films. They were pleased that they are now able to go their own artistic way and that they haven't to quarrel any longer so much with problems outside their artistic work. Apparently, they haven't much to worry about as to who is going to finance their first pix.

Some of the reasons why Hamburg was picked as headquarters are the convenient location and the up-to-date Hamburg Real studios in which interiors for their films are to be made; the friendly relationship between them and Real chief, Walter Koppel; and the fact that Europa-Film, which is going to release their product, is also located in Hamburg.

Another important reason which led to the setup of FPP was based on the three directors' intention to avoid the situation of changing producers from one film to the other. Part of the three founders' working program will have each of them directing at least one film for the new company per year.

The undertaking given by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1955 to review the whole structure of the tax had led them to hope there would be a substantial cut, but the relief granted was almost nullified by the increase in the Eady levy and a recent wage award. The Shipman and King topper stressed the strong need for a further slicing of the duty which now discriminates against the cinema and is virtually a film theatre tax.

Court Dismisses Plea of 200 Exiled EASIER COIN TO Exhibs Seeking Relief in UFA Case FAVOR HAMBURG?

Berlin, Sept. 24.

The Fourth Civil Land Court of Duesseldorf today (24) dismissed the case brought forward by seven exiled cinema owners against the liquidators of the former Reichowned property (Ufi). The complainants, who also spoke on behalf of 200 more exiled exhibitors, had asked that the sale of the UFA studios at Berlin-Tempelhof and 48 UFA theatres to two banking groups be annulled. The exiled cinema owners had argued that, according to the decartellization law, no person is allowed to purchase more than one studio or three theatres, and also that the exiled German cinema owners have to be fully taken into consideration.

The court pointed out in its verbal decision that it undoubtedly would have been desirable had the lawmakers explicitly made clear that also a comprehension of the UFA theatres were within the bounds of possibility. But the history of the decartellization law it held, makes it clear that the foundation of new companies is reconcible with the will of the lawmakers.

The complainants had also argued that behind the banks there is as buyer of the UFA practically the Federal Government and this is strictly against the decartellization law as according to that an independent film industry had to be guaranteed. The court decided that such argument is lacking the necessary legitimation.

The lawyers of the exiled cinema owners want to wait for the court's written verdict and then decide whether to lodge an appeal against the court decision. During the year long lasting court procedure, the complainants have kept pointing out that they have not been compensated for loss of property beyond the Oder-Neisse line to the degree provided by the Bundestag. beyond the Oder-Neisse line to the degree provided by the Bundestag. The new UFA, however, has always pointed up the fact that, with regard to the decartellization law, the rebuilding of an economically healthy film industry in the Federal Republic and West Berlin is of utmost importance.

Just returned from Germany, he said the emphasis in Germany production was rapidly gyrating towards Berlin and Hamburg, and away from Munich, partly because the financing possibilities in Bavaria are so limited. He cited the fact that, both Berlin and Hamburg, subsidize local production.

"I believe the German industry can be fully competitive in the world market if only the Government took some real interest and moved to aid national production," Lustig opined, adding that he was thinking in terms of production funds such as are set up in France and Britain.

Paris Concert Season Tees Off

Paris, Oct. 1.

This year's concert season will see most of the big world longhair music names in attendance. It began with a turnaway conducting and violin stint by Yehudi Menuhin at the Salle Pleyel this week. Menuhin worked with the chambre orchestra of the Concerts Lamboreux in a Mozart and Bach program. Igor Stravinski is due in next week for a conducting chore at the Salle Pleyel and seats already are at a premium with seats at $7 top. Among works he will conduct is a new ballet, "Agon."

Also due are Igor Markevitch, with the Concerts Lamoureux Orch.; 'Artur Rubinstein, 'SirThomas Beecham, with the Royal Philharmonic; singer Irmgard Seefried, pianist; and Nicole Henriot and such conductors as Leonard Bernstein, 'Raphael Kubelik and Pierre Monteux. A supposed revelation is expected with a new young pianist, Alain Bernheim, due at the Salle Gaveau Oct. 29. Hence a big season is in store for the classical music setup, and there is a solid audience here than can always be counted on for support.

Szokoll Plans More Pix Carrying Int'l Appeal; Maria Schell for Next?

Berlin, Sept. 24.
Carl Szokoll, Austrian pic producer ("The Last Bridge," "The Last At"); currently here for biz talks, revealed that he is trying to get Maria Schell for his next film which he is going to make for a German company next year. He is going to meet Horst Haechler, Maria Schell's director-husband, who recently returned from Hollywood, in Munich shortly. A big problem, Szokoll admits, is to find a suitable international name star for Miss Schell. Possibly, he will make this film in both a German and an English version.

As to the recent success of his film "Last Bridge" in N. Y., Szokoll said that this is "all quite remarkable." He referred to the fact that Columbia, which released this film in Europe, didn't want to take over its American distribution and also didn't use its option for the America. Also, that for two years negotiations have been going on with other major U. S. distribs, but none would handle it. Now a small firm is doing the biz with the film. Also "The Last Act," which Szokoll produced, emerged as a good bargain for the U. S. Szokoll believes that this film will gross about $100,000, an unusual sum for a German-language film currently in the U. S.

Leo Hochstetter, Far East resident rep for the MPEA, reshuffled his plans and planed to Manila to nurse along a previously settled $1,-800,000 Philippine deal which threatened to flare anew. Hoch-stetter had been set to go to N. Y. on home leave and possible reassignment when technical formalities jeopardized the remittance accord.

The rep reached agreement on the $1,800,000 figure for the fiscal year 1957 when in Manila, but later learned that the sum still had to be appropriated by the Central Bank of the P. I. The snag Hochstetter was told was that the bank would yet the find only on the condition vote the fund only on the condition that tax claims against the MPEA had been satisfied.

Since Hochstetter had reached that tax claims against the MPEA had been satisfied.

Since Hochstetter had reached a settlement with the Philippine government earlier on back tax claims, he did not have the required paperwork to flash before the bank. Bank officials finally agreed, however, to accept a letter of clearance from the Bureau of Internal Revenue, in lieu of tax receipts. But the Bureau then set up conditions, demanding to examine the MPEA books and suggesting a drawn out series of protests, pleas and appeals.

But the bureau finally agreed to assign two special investigators exclusively to the MPEA case. In what could have taken several months, the investigators were satisfied after two days of fingering MPEA books with culmination of the deal apparently in sight. Hochstetter decided, however, to fly to Manila and personally supervise the action. He figures it could be wrapped up in a week.

Double the Old Amount

The new deal doubles remitances of old agreement. MPEA companies will benefit to the tune of $1,350,000 for fiscal 1956, with $450,000 being remitted under old accord for second semester of last year and $900,000 for the first six months of 1957. New formula was made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1957. MPEA had not remitted since July, 1956. Future remitances will be made on a monthly basis with a backlog always remaining in the accounting. Remitances through Aug. 31, 1957, will leave an estimated $8,000,000 in blocked pesos.

Hochstetter also revealed that MPEA attorney Herbert Erlanger was winging to Manila to complete

Hochstetter also revealed that MPEA attorney Herbert Erlanger was winging to Manila to complete finalization of a deal with the Philippine Gold Mining Producers Assn. involving 12 million pesos a year. Deal would return $3.38 to the peso. Legal rate of exchange is 2.1 and the operational rate is 3.50 Hochsletter regards the agreed rate as "realistic and favorable."

The troubleshooter also told Variety before leaving that indications point to a reduced remittance formula in Japan. He said he learned from the Ministry of France that the nation's declining foreign trade position has necessitated a consideration of a reduction across the board. Hochstetter then registered protest and asked adequate advance notice of any such action. A possible answer would be another electric power loan deal similar to two previous dollar releasing agreements. The troubleshooter also fold gum, evew test, et al., and the constantly used word "okay" and what's left?

Nearly 60% of all pix shown here are of American origin. Sweden herself produces 35.40 pix annually and one of the biggest problems is still the high (38%) amusement tax. However, since the big four companies (SF, Nordisk, Sandrews and Europa) have a substantial number of cinemas of their own, which supply them with the necessary profits, this problem is actually not so critical.

Biggest, Yank success in town right now is "Funny Face" (Par) currently in its 13th week at Saga, the Paramount stronghold. "Twelve Angry Men" (UA) was just released here with superlative reviews but not too good biz. With "Island In Sun" (20th) another recent release, it's just the other way round, Not too good reviews but superlative biz. As usual during the summer months, many old pix are now out on reace, notably Greta Garbo and usual during the summer months, many old pix are now out on re-lease, notably Greta Garbo and Charlie Chaplin reissues. They also have Stan Laurel & Oliver Hardy pix here. These two are called "Helan & Halvan" which here means "the whole and the half one." Gallic pix are also doing good bix here.

Germans Seek Film Outlets

Germons Seek Film Outlets
The Germans are taking trouble to exploit the film market.
But they are not too successful.
Quite a few Teutonic pix are complete flops. A surprise German hit is "I Often Think of Piroschka," now here in its 13th week. One of the few Teutonic star names here is Romy Schneider.

Stockholm's television, which officially started one year ago, is on a tremendous rise. Current number of local tele set owners has hit 50.000. Exact figures are not avail-able because many tv set owners don't let themselves register in order to escape the comparatively high tele fee. Stockholm's programs can also Stockholm's programs can also be received in Goeteborg, which started tv earlier. There are daily programs running two to three hours. Program also includes state-sideshows and old films. Fed local producers, however, are willing to sell their pix to tele. An exception is Svan-Film (until 1945 UFA-Film, releasing company for Germany for Company for Com is Svaa-Film (until 1945 UFA-Film, releasing company for Germany UFA pix) which supplied local video with several German pix. Also Russian-made films are shown on the Swedish tele.

Jazz-Conscious Swedes

Much can be written about jazz here. After all, Sweden is Europe's foremost jazz nation. Names like Bengt Hallberg one of the world's best jazz pianists), Lars Gullin (some crix call him the best baritone player today) or Arne Domnerus foutstanding alto-sax player) are already familiar to every jazz fan. Sweden's latest pride is Harry Arnold and his radio studio orch. This big modern band already has gained the rep of being one of the best in Europe in less than a year. These American jazz musicians who have played as guest soloists (Tony) have played as guest soloists (Tony Scott, Herbie Mann, etc.) with the Arnold band compare the latter with the best in their own country. This 18-piece ensemble is not a permanent organization, but made up of leading Swedish jazzmen for radio appearances only Harry Arnold, incidentally, is now on an American promotional tour. Metronome Records, with whom he is under contract, is sponsoring the trip.

For a jazz fan or musician, it will always pay off to go to Stockholm's 'Nalen' (popular expression for 'National''), a unique jazz establishment. It's not alone Sweden's foremost jive establishment and where all the best jazz bands play, it's also the favorite hangout for everybody in the trade. Topsy Lindblom, an ex-Olympic champ (1912) and owner of 'Europe's most famous jazz stronghold' has gained an astonishing popularity with both his jazz-conscious clientele- and educational authorities. Latter see in jazz, something that attracts the For a jazz fan or musician it will educational authorities. Latter see in jazz, something that attracts the juveniles and keeps them from street brawls. His "Nalen" is a very inexpensive spot, about 25c admission. It also has cabaret shows and offers various specialities (jitterbug contests, etc.). Like in all other local dancing spots, no alcohol is served here. served here

The Recording Industry
The disk biz here can't complain either. There were 4,000,000 units sold in Sweden in 1955, 7,000 000 last year, and it's estimated that 9,000,000 will be reached in 1957.
There's a tax on every disk and if latter runs for more than six minutes (EP) this tax is tripled.
Most important diskeries here are Decca, which also handles British Decca; Brunswick and London Records, Metronome (Mercury, Atlantic, Prestige), RCA Victor (Telefunken), HMV (British Columbia, MGM, Parlophone, Capitol, Odeon), Deutsche Grammophon (Coral) and Philips, which also has American The Recording Industry Philips, which also has American Columbia. There's strong competi-Columbia. There's strong competition between these companies. It's always a neck-by-neck race, with Decca (15-20% of all sales) on top, followed by Metronome, Philips, RCA and HMV (about 10-15% each), DGG (around 10%), and then the various smaller outfits.

Best-known Swedish names are on Metronome, such as Alice Babs, Ernie Englund, Harry Arnold, Charlie Norman, Bengt Halberg, Arne Domnerus, Jack Lidstroem and Lars Gullin. Boerje Ekberg, Metronome's export manager, says

On the pop song side, the Swedes zee in "Walking in the Rain" (Johnnie Ray) the top tune currently. Curiously enough, this Philips EP brings two different name singers: One side has Ray singing two songs (including "Rain"), the flip side brings drum with the Willips EP brings two different name singers: One side has Ray singing two songs (including "Rain"), the flip side brings drum with the U.S. where it stahl, head of Stockholms Musikproduktion AB Succemelodier and Kassner Musik AB, top publisher here, is making strides by selling Swedish (also Germany songs to America, and vice versa. He also is a successful song composer. Stahl sold the German tune, "Muetterlein," to the U.S. where it became "Answer Me," and back in Germany it then became "Glaube mir." He also brought the German song "Dui, Du, Dui" (You, You, You) to the U.S. Of the Yank songs with which he did the best biz in Sweden, he mentions "Lullaby of Birdland," "Unchained Melody," "When Saints Go Marchin' In" and "Rock & Roll Waltz." One of his recent own compositions is "Küingaling" which Moonlight Music (Ray Anthony) is going to publish in the U.S. He made other deals with Mills Music in the U.S.

Caterina Valente scored a huge success at the Berns Salongen, Stockholm's "Lido," in recent weeks. This 1,442-seater registered sellout biz all through August. Currently, Berns has the Nicholas Bros. as toppers.

Next to the Berns, there is the

Not Much Nightlife

There is not much that one call nightlife here. As a matter of fact, nightlife here. As a matter of fact, there is practically none at all. Most restaurants close around midnight, and alcohol is off limits in most spots anyway. Still dance-conscious people find a lot of opportunities here, but also these spots close their doors at midnight or shortly thereafter.

One of the best dancing establistments is the Ball Palais which is owned by Sven Hakansson who also operates the Zanzibar. a more intimate spot, the Restaurant Herrgarn and the ultra-modern and huge (2,000 seats) Bjoerkna-spaviljongen. Latter, however, is closed during the winter. The Ball Palais has currently the Fred Bunge band, with Ruth Fischer, his wife, doing the vocals. Zanzibar has Peppo Birks (an Austrian) and his band with Inga Brandenburg (German vocalist) making the music. There is also a Swiss bandleader by the name of Kurt. Weill' in town. His authentic name, he says. Boyd Bachmann's band (Holland) is also in Sweden.

Quite obviously, foreign musics with the says in Sweden.

Quite obviously, foreign musicians like their stay in Sweden, They are well paid, have to play only four hours (five on Sundays) daily. Since there is no nightlife anyway, they get a lot of sleep here.

Prod. DeLaurentiis Plus. Fellini Due in N.Y. Soon On Co-Production Deals

Rome, Sept. 24.

Producer Dino DeLaurentiis and director Federico Fellini expect to arrive in New York Oct, 6 to continue talks with U.S. companies regarding the Italian producer's upcoming co-production projects with RKO and Columbia. Fellini, who will direct some of these films, is accompanying DeLaurentiis also to help choose some Yank actors for his pix.

DeLaurentiis, who already has one project, "Fortunella" with Giu-lietta Masina and Paul Douglas, on the fire in Rome, and plans another with the same actress next spring (both to be released here by RKO), illustrated his plans for two more productions, details of which he'll talk over with RKO and Columbia while in the U.S.

One of the Fellini-directed rix is "Viaggio D'Amore" (Voyage of Love) and deals with two people, a cool intellectual type and a warm, a cool intellectual type and a warm, sensual woman. Depending-on the availability of a lead actress (Fellini would like Sophia Loren or Kim Novak), DeLaurentils would make the pic with one or the other of the U.S. companies with which he's linked. Fellini hopes to find his male lead in N.Y. and wants a relatively unknown actor. He added that no such type could be found among current Italian actors. Pic would roll early next year.

Rome, Sept. 24. Rome, Sept. 24.

Some sequences will employ some 10,000 extras. No cast or director have been set as yet on the Sam Zimbalist production, which is slated to start shooting next spring. Also favorably viewed here is fact that the pic will employ a large number of Italian technicians in all fields of the filmmaking. Pact is said to allow some studio space for. Mex Film Producers

Mex Film Producers To Give Up 'Cheapies'

Mexico City, Sept. 24.
Only worthwhile pix, with all "cheapie," shoddy and fly-by-night films eliminated, is the new policy of the Mexican film industry, according to Gregorio Wallerstein, head of the Mexican Assn., and Eduardo Garduna, prexy of the trade's own bank, the Banco Nacional Cinematografico.

Wallerstein averred that the day of the "churro" (crueller), a cheap, more or less immoral imitation of more or less immoral imitation of a film production, has gone forever from Mexican screen subjects. Garduna claimed that only those producers who present satisfactory stories can get the financing of the bank. He declared that policy is already paying off at home and in the U.S. Over the border, more than 1,000 cinemas are now regularly playing Mexican pix, the banker said.

Regarding censorship, Powell opined that "television is getting away with murder" compared with motion pictures, and he thought that a slow easing into a general Code, similar to the one pertaining to Holjwood's theatrical pix, was inevitable. Germans Placing 30 Features For Sensational Market Jump in Spain

By HANK WEIRBA

Madrid, Oct. 1,
Local film observers are Impressed with the penetration in depth of Gerna n films in the Spanish market. In '55-'56, imports from across the Rhine could be counted on one hand. The number increased slightly the following year. This coming season, in distrib programs already revealed, Spanish distribution companies will release a minimum of 30 German pix.

Germany is now with par with France, both in close runner-up position behind America and Italy, in providing film product to the local market.

Gunter Schwartz, head of Germany's Film Export Union, told this Variery reporter that his country's success in Spain should not be considered a temporary occurrence stemming from the Motion Picture Export Assn. suspension of film shipments to Spain. German film industry, he felt, has attained a pre-war artistic and technical matirity and that Spain was just one of the many world areas where German films were gaining in favor.

He conceded the MPEA embarge opened Spanish doors to give German pix prominent playdates that would otherwise not be available, but insisted that Germany's big advance in Spain is the result of great popular support given Rhineland entries during the past two seasons.

This viewpoint is shared by many local observers who cite Germannade "Sissi" as the top grosser in Spain by a wide margin in 1956.

High rating of German pix here is the property of the property o ingn rating of German pix nere is made in terms often used when mentioning merits of Hollywood filmfare. As a result, almost every major distrib has at least one programmed for the coming months. One of the problems arising from the brisk German expansion in Spain concerns the energiage for

One of the problems arising from the brisk German expansion in Spain concerns the question of reciprocity. Local producers are freting at difficulties in getting native pix on German screens. There is no German market for Spanish films, explained Schwarz, because in the present free Germany economy, 50% of the distrib gross is taken up by German product, 35% goes to U. S. companies which leaves a very small competitive margin for all other film nations. Spain participation in an eventual European Film Pool would guarantee reciprocity but nothing could be done to alter the situation as it exists today.

As a soft-currency nation with no Deutscher Mark film earnings, Spain continues to have an unfavorable balance of firm payments and will he hard put to meet hard-currency exchange obligations aristrade between the two countries.

STILL GRUMBLE VS.

Flaws that have developed in the makeup of the Motion Picture Export Assr's global master license formula have cued new wrangling among the companies over permit division in Burma and some other tarritories.

Formula runs out Dec. 31, 1957 Formula runs out Dec. 31, 1957 when the original two-year "contract" among the companies expires. Chances for an extension, possibly with some minor teclinical changes, are held good, but it's acknowledged that there is the possibility of some distributors pre-ferring to go it the hard way, i.e, wrangle over each batch of licenses.

Purpose of the system originally Purpose of the system originally was to set up a composite yardstick on the basis of which licenses could be fairly allocated among the com-panies. What has created a problem is that the number of countries is that the number of countries where imports are restricted has grown since the formula was first established and they are now not covered. European Film Union Closer to Formation Via Ischia Meetings

Rome, Oct. 1.

A further important step towards the formation of a European Film Union was made during the threeday session (Sept. 24-26) held on the island of Ischia by the permanent committee charged with setting up the tripartite production scheme. Germany, France and Italy were repped by members of their film inrepped by members of their film in-dustries and governments. A new, three-nation tripartite co - produc-tion pact was set up and approved by committee members on Iscina. Scheme is said to "absorb and com-plete" the current bilateral co-productive agreements between the three nations t now goes up for ap-proval by the respective govern-ments under the clauses of the Common European Market scheme.

ualized, it would work to the detriment of Hollywood product.

Increasingly, the Americans feel that such a unity of thought and action as visualized by the Common Marketeers, and particularly Jacques Flaud, head of France's Centre National du Cinematografie, is (a) impractical and (b) unlikely. During his recent visit to London, Flaud again pitched an exchange of films to the British, proposing that French productions would come in under the British quota, with the French reciprocating. Indications are that the proposition—already made to the British at Cannes in May—was nixed. Here, as elsewhere in Europe, the question arises of how much business exhibitors would be willing to sacrifice in order to play Continental rather than American product. It's worth noting that, when in London, Flaud again specified hat his proposed "reciprocity" wouldn't take in films—British or otherwise—released by the American companies.

With Britain and West Germany Flaud again pitched an exchange of films to the British, proposing that French productions would come in under the British quotation that the process of the British quotation are that the proposition—already made to the British are already made to the British quotation—already made to the British are already made to the British are already as a specific of the Backyard". Allied Artists repens and vaude vet Militar Frame than American product. It's wouldn't take in films—British or otherwise—released by the American companies.

With Britain and West Germany now settled, the current problem in Europe for MPEA is France. With Flaud in Ischia, negotiations have been at a standstill. While some feel that the French deal will be renewed, others are less sanguine, fearing French insistence on a quid-pro-quo, under which the U.S. indistry would have to come un with some ald to the French in America if it is to retain its-current permits in France.

DST prevalled over the entire state as the result of a law passed by the state legislature. In this exchange area there also was DST in western Wisconsin and in a number of North Dakóta towns. It was ended here by edict of the governor last Saturday (28)—too late to help the drive-ins.

Because the state legislature doesn't meet again until 1958 there'll be another summer of DST in 1958 at least in Minnesota.

Ozoner owners point out that family trade—young couples with children—is the backbone of outdoor theatre business. Because DST necessitated such late starting times, much of this trade was lost, they say.

There are some honest characters, too, notably Pancho, the promising Mexican prizefighter, and his Anna whom he loves deeply, and vice versa, and whom his juvenile star despoils in a sinister intrigue—and gets his romeuppance, the reader will note with understandable glee. (This chapter appeared in Playboy Mag.)

There are the stooges, the intrastudio apple-polishers, the general insecurities. There is also a now too familiar griping by a couple of writers about this lap-of-luxury brand of creativeness, a canvas which somehow is not as contemporaneous and authentic as most of the rest of it. The pattern is a Grauman's Chinese telecast of a "special premiere" of an "epic" Civil War picture and, as the titular "Cast of Characters" fall into the focus of Characters" fall into the focus of the image orthicon camera, their Hollywood backgrounds take shape. Morgan has skillfully tied them together in a series of long and short vignettes. The titles of the chapters more or less spotlight each subject. Several of the vignettes could—and in the case of at least two did—stand separate and apart, yet Morgan has made it all tie together. On the whole, Morgan has done an entertaining job. Without indulging in odious comparisons, his is certainly much easier reading than a contemporaneus novel having to do with the Bever Hills set.

The engineer centered his attack on reports that Skiatron plans to use relatively cheap twin-lead wir-ing instead of shielded coaxial

He claimed that use of open wiring "would make their franchise exclusive" and felt there was "a strong chance" such wiring would cover other cables near it with a sort of electronic fog whici, would smother other transmissions. So McCarty said:

So another committee member, Supervisor Harold Dobbs, got sore. "I think it is an insult to tell our controller that the presentation of these figures is of no consequence," he said.

Lane, however, kept cool, pointing out Skiatron had paid Giants' president Horace Stoneham $500.

Hadn't Seen 'C' On Art Films, Exhib Cancels

San Francisco, Oct. 1.

A tie-in film promotion with the open-air Frisco Arts Festival backfred for a neighborhood house when the Mothers Club of Saints Peter and Paul Church, a block-away, protested last weekend that three of the pictures scheduled to be shown were on the Legion of Decency's condemned list.

The 400-exhibit art festival is in Washington Square; smack-dab in the center of Frisco's Italian (and Bohemian) sector. Facing the square on one side is the Golden State circuit's Palace Theatre; facing the square on another side is the church.

The Palace ordinarily plays subsequent-run fare, but at the request of Martin Snipper, the Arts Festival director, manager Joseph Schwartz ordered 10 art films which were advertised as "Arts Festival Hits" for the duration of the open-air show.

Among the films were "The House of Pleasure," "The Bed" and "Woman of Rome."

Editor, VARIETY:

If I may, I would like to commen on your Sept. 25 story about "Catholic Church & 'Good' Films" (p.11).

The "independent distributor in New York" quoted in the story is, I believe, somewhat unfair when he says that the Church "does next to nothing to support the so-called 'good' pictures . . ." Surely the widely published Legion of Dewidely published Legion of Decency classifications can be taken as a form of "support" for good films, particularly in the A-1 section, "Unobjectionable for General Patronage." In the current issue of THE PILOT, e.g., 98 current films are thus recommended to moviegoers. In addition, 84 others are listed as "Unobjectionable for Adults" (A-2). These 182 pictures are obviously boosted.'

Differences in approach between American and European activities in the film field are pointed up vividly in an article by Erik von Kuehnelt-Leddihn in the Jesuit weekly, America. Piece, entitled "Rating Films in Europe," says it is one of the guiding principles of European Catholic film work to worry more about supporting good films rather than fight bad ones. "European Catholics concerned."

Article, in the Sept. 28 issue of the mag, is noteworthy in the light of the contention by some that the Roman Catholic Church, as guided by the National Legion of Decency, take a largely negative point-of-view vis-a-vis films and appearation than with encouragement.

Kuehnelt-Leddinn notes that the International Catholic Film Office (OCIC) puts out reviews in various languages (but not in English "owing to misunderstanding in America"). Many films which, in the past received OCIC awards or citations "never came to the United States, because they would shock and dismay the public, or were failures in New York."

shock and dismay the public, or were failures in New York."

"We have to face the fact that a number of highly distinguished Catholic films such as "Le Defroque". (The Unfrocked), if imported to America, would pose a series of real problems," the author states. He cites a climatic scene in "The Unfrocked" in which an apostate priest pours a bottle of wine into a pail and consecrates it. A Catholic, in order to prevent profanation, kneels down and drinks the Blood of the Lord from the pail. the pail. U.S. Angles

European Catholics were ecstatic about the picture. But, holds Kuehnelt-Leddihn, "To the American non-Catholic . . . the whole scene would seem to be pointless; some Catholics, believing it to be a gratuitous blasphemy, would walk out in protest. Yet it is precisely the type of film that would benefit from organized Catholic support."

Article says Catholic rating in benefit from organized catalone support."

Article says Catholic rating in Europe is of a quality that members of the faith know that the artistic value of a morally dublous (or even reprehensible) film should never be concealed. If says, further, that, even in Europe, differences arise, with the Church sometimes more liberal than the State. For instance, in Austria, the Government decreed that the Hallan picture on the life of St. Maria Goretti was for adults only. The Austrian Catholic Film League was particularly anxious for youth was particularly anxious for youth to see it.

Another guiding principle of Catholic film rating in Europe eited by Knehnelt-Leddilm is to "Keep in mind all the qualities of films. Do not praise a badly produced film because it has a positive message; do not ignore the positive aspects do not ignore the positive aspects of otherwise unworthy films. Always be truthful." Fact that the Legion of Deceney in the U.S. appears to rate films solely on their moral value, not taking into consideration art-or ethics, has earned the Legion some sharp criticism, even from Catholics.

ECM Not Anti-Yank, So Screen Chaplin's 'King'

Economics Is Confusing

And here's another reason why film theatres are finding it tough: there are no longer any convenient trolley cars, only infrequent and costly (20c) buses, planned for maximum crowding against the lowest possible number of union driver man-hours, this is considered to be a major deterrent to the public "going downtown" to a film show.

Then, of course, those who own cars and drive to the loop must pay extra for parking, only one downtown cinema providing cuffo facilities.

U.S. Anti-Trust Lawyer Phil Marcus Contradicts Ricketson and Pirosh

Sam Goldwyn was supposed to have completed his case against 20th-Fox, National Theatres and Fox West Coast before Federal Judge Edward P. Murphy last week, but the judge took sick.

As a result, only action in the $1,755,000 antitrust suit, which is now almost seven and a half years old, was the taking of a deposition from a U. S. antitrust lawyer, Philip Marcus.

Both sides agreed to the deposi-tion procedure in the judge's ab-sence and defense lawyers Arthur B. Dunne and Fred Pride both cross-examined Marcus after Goldwyn's lawyer, Joseph Alioto, had finished,

Most noteworthy point devel-Most noteworthy point developed, from the film industry's view, was the witness's declaration that the Justice Dept. is still against product splitting. Marcus contended this has been the department's attitude all along, ever since he first worked on the Schine case, switched to the Paramount case in 1944 as assistant to prosecutor Robert Wright, and for the three years (1949 to 1952) he headed all the film work of the antitrust division.

Questioned specifically about earlier testimony in the Goldwyn case, Marcus flatly contradicted both Frank H. Ricketson Jr., National's general manager, and FWC buyer. Bert Pirosh. Pirosh had testified he talked to Marcus about product splitting and that Marcus knew all about it. But Marcus denied ever hearing anything about it in conferences with National-FWC executives during 1950. He further denied, as Pirosh had intimated, that the Justice Dept. had no objections to product splitting.

Marcus also denied, as Ricketson had testified, that Justice Dept. had, given Fox-Intermountain a "clean bill of health" pegarding what Alioto called "a collusive agreement" between Fox and exhibitor Paul Demourdaunt at Idaho Falls, Idaho. The Government Idayer said he'd submitted an amendment concerning the Idaho Falls situation to the Government's proposed consent decree against National in January, 1950. The Government hadn't known about the Idaho Falls deal until Goldwyn had complained in December, 1949; said Marcus, and a hurry-up Federal investigation of the complaint was made. On the basis of the investigation Marcus wanted to prosecute.

National Theatres' fourday con-vention for 100 "delegates" from the chain's 350 theatres in 21 states at Alisal Ranch, outside the pic-turesque Danish hamlet of Sol-vang, near Santa Barbara, was termed a "most successful" one by the company toppers.

Matters of poent interest to the atremen were thrashed out and discussed in a series of "work-shop" groups, and generally in ses-sions presided over by prexy Elmer C. Rhoden.

In addition to general subjects under discussion, it was revealed by Rhoden that NT will produce three pictures annually for the next five years and one-half in company's new wide-screen process, Cinemiracle. He simultaneously disclosed that New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and Miami had been selected as showcase cittes for early 1958 preem of the first feature in this process, "Cinemiracle Adventure."

The delegates asked distribs to set up "reasonable" clearances in film contracts so that proper advertising may be developed—to help prospective audiences "in realizing that new movies can be seen only in Theatres."

In another resolution, theatremen asked producers for "more clean and wholesome pictures" that will appeal to family groups.

Additionally, National's theatre operators pledged a reduction of $1,000,000 during the next 52 weeks in expenses and elimination of NT's new Clinemiracle widescreen process, and company's first film in this system, "Clinemiracle Adventure," some of which the delegates were shown in L. Cheery Notes

The forward look was given theatre business in a series of reports made at final meeting. Chairmen of workshop groups reported on findings in a wide variety of subjects, leading off with progress being made in the removal of city admission taxes.

"More and more city fathers are coming to realize the important

Vanity Billing
Reeder also applauded the renewed drive started in certain quarters of the industry to reduce the excessive billing now required by pic advertising for "vanity" purposes.

This, John Denham, Salt Lake City, commented, will eliminate unnecessary waste and expenses and will result in a savings of several thousand dollars for theatres.
The importance of children's shows also was stressed by Bob Apple, Berkeley. With a potential of 33,000,000 moppets throughout the nation, these shows today are a necessity and should prove highly profitable, he said.

Fred Glass, Los Angeles, speaking on parking, recounted methods of theatres acquiring new facilities either through the rental or purchase of property, and tieups with merchants and discount parking fees.

On the "plus" side, he listed population growth of the nation; a possible reduction or elimination of admission tax; novelty of television wearing off; a shorter work opportunity to draw greater patronage; and for NT exhibs, "the integration of Cinemiracle" "Minus" factors were enumerated by Rhoden as the acute shortage of film product; Government restrictions which have unfairly hampered the industry as a whole in both time and money; free tv films; lack of unity among industry leaders, although he praised industry's Academy Awards derby.

"Despite this rugged resistance," Rhoden said, "National Theatres in 1957 will gross about $59,000,000, and will earn over $2,000,000.

Hollywood, Oct. 1.

Trend to filmed dramatics—away from live—will be reversed before this television season is over as bankrollers climb back onto the live bandwagon, it's predicted by David Susskind, prexy-owner of Talent Associates, N.Y. Company packaging six dramatic shows for the DuPont series of spees on CBS, two Rexall spex, and 26 Armstrong Circle Theatre dramas—all live.

Susskind said his company has Circle Theatre dramas—all live.

Susskind said his company has already been asked by two advertising agencies to come up with live shows to replace filmed series not even on yet. "They told me they looked at seven or eight films in the can, and they expect bombs. They want replacements to go on either in January or April," said Susskind.

"Everything that has been great."

"Everything that has been great on tv has been in live, not film. The memorable shows were the live 'Patterns,' 'Marty,' '12 Angry Men,' 'A Night to Remember.' But who Patterns, 'Marry, '12 Angry Men, 'A Night to Remember.' But who can recall a great filmed drama? Playhouse 90 had fine dramas last season—Requiem for a Heavy-weight,' The Miracle Worker' and Winter Dream,' to name a few. But the filmed Playhouse 90's were slick and sterile. They did not have the same quality. In a film, time is of the essence; in live tv, quality is. How can you establish depth of character when you're watching the clock every minute? If you don't get 30 takes in a day, it's an economic disaster in film. I believe the audiences will demand a return to live, because they will be overwhelmed by mediocrity of film this season.

"The sponsors and ad agencies were suffering from psychoses of insecurity and fright when they went to film. They reach out for quality, and feel the easy answer is film. That's because they're thinking they can always rerun in the summer. They have all kinds of specious arguments for it. What they sacrifice doesn't equate with what they get. They sacrifice quality. Everybody will be a millionaire, and entertainment will be miserable.

"I hear this talk about residuals "I hear this talk about residuals being the reason so many stars go into filmed tv. I think it's a shocking reason. If in this business the sole driving force is making money, then you're in the wrong business. If you're not interested in quality, then you're a show biz prostitute. I don't mean to include situation comedies or mysteries. But in filmed drama, I see a definite cutback ahead. back ahead.

"Burned sponsors and ad agen-cles will lash out and look elsewhere —and that will be in the direction —and that will be in the direction of live. Filmed shows have eight or more pictures made before they go on tv. By that time, they have perpetuated their mediocrity and mistakes, and nothing can be done to correct them until about the eleventh show—after they're on tv. In live, if there's a mistake it can be corrected the next day. But the public meanwhile is sated with this lacklustre material, and tires of it long before that eleventh show."

Toll-TV & Com'ls Compatible: Lewis

William Lewis, prexy of Kenyon Eckhardt, told the Broadcasters Executive Club here last week that he saw the possibility of running toll television in tandem with com-toll television in tandem with commercially sponsored programs. He was surprised that the recommendation had never been made before.

"There is no reason why ty, like the print media, should not receive income both from commercial interests and the general public which the producers are serving," the agency exec opined. "No one stops to consider that it would cost the public severa. dollars a copy—not five or 10 cents—for their daily newspapers were it not for advertising revenue."

Lewis said the people do not dis-

Lewis said the people do not dis-like advertising; they "simply and rightfull' resent bad advertising."

The first direct live telecast from Moscow to London is scheduled for New Year's Eve. Associated-Rediffusion, London's comercial tv weekday programmers, have closed a deal with the Soviet authorities for a show to be beamed from the Bolshoi Theatre with Ulanova as the principal dancer.

lan, A-R's program controller, is due to visit Moscow next month to settle outstanding questions.

The Moscow-to-London telecast will be made without recourse to the Eurovision hookup. The program will be sent via cable from Moscow to Helsinki, and will then span the route to Stockholm by microwave link. The rest of the journey will be covered by post-office cables direct into London.

As part of the special New Year's Eve program, A-R is hoping that Britain's prima ballerina, Margot Fonteyn, will consent to dance the same number that Ulanova will be doing from the Bolshoi. This would give British balletomanes an opportunity of making a comparison between two of the world's leading dancers.

The New Year's Eve date has been agreed at the request of the Russians. A-R had originally asked for a Christmas Day telecast but that holiday has little or no meaning in the Soviet calendar. New Year's Eve and New Year's Day, however, are important celebrations.

Steve Allen Booking Of CBS' Jimmy Dean Doesn't Sit Too Well

Drop Minoff, Murray As Polly Bergen's TV Writers: Stewart Stays

Life of a television scriptwriter, non-dramatic variety Life of a television scriptwriter, even the non-dramatic variety, can be confusing at best. Take the case of the three writers originally signed by MCA for the Polly Bergen show on NBC-TV. All three got screen credits on the first show, but only one of them had anything to do with the script. And when the preem got slammed critically, the two who hadn't worked on that script were released and the sole author retained.

Trio of writers, hired individually for the show, were Phil Minoff, Cue mag tv editor and free-lance scripter, Tom Murray and Mike Stewart. Instead of putting them together on the script, MCA asked them to write two scripts apiece. Soon Minoff and Murray found themselves collaborating, while Stewart went it alone. Scripts were submitted and then Minoff and Murray heard nothing at all. After calling MCA to find out what gave, they found that Stewart's script was to be used, and that they wouldn't be getting any screen credit. Pair raised å fluss because press matter already released through NBC included their names as scripters, so MCA relented and gave them credit, even though they hadn't even seen the script. Then, after the premiere, MCA advised Murray and Minoff that they'd been released from their contract, which had guaranteed them two shows. Stewart, MCA informed them, had been retained on the basis of his opening script,

Looking for Trouble

Chicago, Oct. 1.

ABC-TV's intramural competition for the solidest local publicizing of "Maverick" got slightly more than it bargained for in Peorla, Ill., where WTVH's stunt hit the big print. As often happens in such newspaper coups, the part that was sheer ingenulty mattered less than the part that was plain accident.

Andy Amyx, station's promotion manager, staged a fake holdup with four assistants at Community National Bank in downtown Peorla. Bank, of course, knew it was a stunt, and so did the police department—that is, all but one officer of the law. While local citizens were ducking out of the way of cap pistol fire, a motorcycle cop charged down a one-way street to save the bank, smacking into a moving car enroute. Getting there on foot, he drew his pistol, meaning business until the police captain, fortunately on the scene, talked him out of it.

The "bad guys" were then carted off to the station (WTVH) in the paddy wagon, per the script.

Price Is Right But Clock Is Wrong

One of those rare freaks in the highly mechanized art of television occurred a week ago Monday (22), when some NBC-TV master control engineers allowed "The Price Is Right" to run over—right past the 30-second 8 p.m. station break and another halfminute into the opening of "The Restless Gun."

Network says that it was all the fault of the control room clock an aging piece which apparently developed some sort of groove around the 7:59 area. The minute, hand, the story goes, slipped into that groove and got stuck. The master control engineers didn't notice the non-movement of the hands until they saw the cameras on the monitors go dark and realized the show was more than finished. Then they found they had allowed it to run one minute over. That's the NBC story, but talk has it that the engineers got so engrossed in the climax of the show they forgot to push the button.

Not much harm done, however, since they only ran into the opening Warner-Lambert billboard on "Gun," without reaching into the commercial. All that was missing was the billboard and opening credits. As for the station break, most of the affiliates broke away into their local commercials anyway; the few that didn't will understable moles the product he hard. oubtedly make themselves heard.

Successful experiments in paytelevision would force the networks to abandon their opposition to toll-tv and enter the field in self-protection, with "disastrous consequences for the viewing pub-lic," Rep. In contrast to his speech only a week earlier at the Academy of Television Aris & Sciences, in which he bitterly attacked the networks for their current programming fare, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee yesterday restricted himself to toll-try and its potential impact on free television. He warned against permitting, "in the popular name of experimentation and progress," a situation to develop "in which the American people will wake up one day to find that their rights in the precious frequency spectrum will have been encroached upon, and that the best of the programs that have been coming to their television sets without cost have suddenly become encoded—to be unscrambled only upon payment of a fee."

Rep. Celler registered outspoken opposition to follvision experiments, arguing that such experiments cannot be kept "within controllable limits." If tests are held and prove financially successful, he asked, "how is the new technique to be kept within bounds," in view of their "extraordinary profit potential."

He envisioned a "chain-reaction," in which pay-tw would prove successful with a few stations and would immediately spread to others and eventually the networks. CBS last week consumated a $4,000,000 deal for the assests and physical plant of KWK-TV, its affiliate in St. Louis. At the same time, it reached an agreement whereby its construction permit to Channel 11 will be turned over to competing 220 Television Inc. and pending litigation against the web by 220 and two other contestants for the channel will be dropped.

Entire deal, of course, is subject to FCC approval, but the $4,000,000 expenditure breaks down into a $25,500,000 payment to KWK Inc. for its television assets (Channel 4 franchise plus equipment), along with $1,500,000 deal with the St. Louis Globe Democrat (part-owner of KWK Inc.) for the studio and real estate used by the station in its operations. TV INDUSTRY OVER A BARROW

All 3 Webs in Feature Production

All three television networks are now in the motion picture production business, as the result of CBS-TV's decision this week to finance and coproduce a theatrical version of its "Navy Log" series. Situation is a logical extension of the "one big show business" development wherein the various entertainment media have diversified and cross-pollenated into other areas of the business. In two of the three instances, the decision to move into theatrical production came as extensions of the fact that the two webs were already in half-hour film production. In the third, it came via an earlier diversification, that of a theatre company into the network business, with the decision to go into theatrical production cued by the product demand of its theatres but buttressed by its production experience in networking.

"Navy Log" is a CBS subsidiary's effort. Series is produced by indie Sam Gallu, but financed and distributed by CBS Television Film Sales, the web's syndication subsidiary. It airs on ABC-TV (still the sole example of a show owned by one network telecasting on a different web). CBS and Gallu are dickering for United Artists release on the film.

Just a week earlier, California National Productions, NBC's telefilm subsidiary, revealed it would produce theatrical versions of its two current syndicated series "Boots and Saddles," and "The Silent Service." As for ABC, its parent American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres has been making features for some months now and plans to upbeat its production schedule.

Bad TV a Hypo for Radio

Minneapolis, Oct. 1.

Minneapolis, Oct. 1.

One of the reasons wb radio during recent months has made such a strong comeback here, as well as elsewhere, may be the fact that tv programming the past summer had more of a seasonal quality letdown and included so many repeats, in the opinion of such local video-audio station toppers as Stanley Hubbrad and F. Van Konynenburg of KSTP and WCOO, respectively.

This probably induced many people hereabouts to turn from tv. to radio even during the evening periods. And, when they found that radio has livened up its programing substantially and gone in for human interest to a much greater extent than ever, they again became radio fans, Hubbard feels.

came radio fans, Hubbard feels.

In local broadcasting circles it's believed that one of the reasons for radio's present popularity upsurges to be found in the new and now numerous shows that permit dialers to express their opinions and gripes directly over the air via telephone calls or interviews.

Also, the fact that radio has come so much to life with various gimmicks that spell showmanship, including prize contests, has been audience builders, it's pointed out.

However, there also apparently is no fear that tv here will want for audiences or will backslide as far as attracting dailers this fall and winter here is concerned. At least, KSP-TV has all of its after 6 p.m. video time sold.

Stations Swing Back to Paar

The patient extracurricular work put in at the NBC Television Affiliates meet a couple of weeks back by Jack Paar and the web's station relations department is beginning to pay off. Weh has cleared three key markets for "onight," in one case moving in where the show had never been carried before, in another recapturing an affiliate who had dropped during the "America After Dark" flasco, and in a third, moving into a major market via a non-affiliate. Stations are KSD-TV, St. Louis, WSM-TV, Nashville, and WHDH-TV, Boston. St. Louis had never carried "Tonight," even in the Steve Allen days, but the combination of Paar's successful critical reception, along with the NBC sales job and the imminence of additional competition in St. Loo, convinced the Post-Dispatch outlet to take the show. By JACK LEVY

Washington, Oct. 1.

What's expected to be a tough staff report which will have wide-spread repercussions will probably be issued by the Federal Com-munications Commission Thursday (3) on its two-year study of net-works operations under the direc-tion of Dean Roscoe L. Barrow of the U. of Cincinnati College of Law.

A 1,200 page document which will include recommendations for changes in network regulations in the light of the advent of television, the report will be submitted to the Commission's Network Study Committee which is composed of Chairman John C. Doerfer and Comrs. Rosel H. Hyde and Robert Bartley. Final adoption will be up to the full seven-man Commission.

crack down on at least three areas of the television broadcasting industry—multiple ownership, option time and must-buy. The Barrow committee had previously interceded to prevent the Commission from relaxing its station ceilings. Its report this week may go beyond maintaining the station go on station ceilings. A possibility that changes affecting network ownership of stations may be recommended is indicated.

Elimination or modification of option time practices of the networks and revision of must-buy in the interest of furthering opportunities for independent program producers are likely to be prescribed by the report.

The report will also address itself to network operations in the field of talent, programming and production; access of independent producers to network facilities; competition between networks and non-network organizations; joint ownership of radio and tv networks; and network interests in other enterprises, such as manufacturing and recording.

Question of whether the networks should be placed under direct regulation of the FCC, as proposed by Sen. John W. Bricker (R-O.), will doubtless be discussed in the report.

Although the report will not concern itself with subscription ty, it is expected to have an indirect hearing on the outcome of the industry's battle to stop the Congressional edict. The immediate threat of the report, it's believed, will tend to keep the networks occupied resisting its adoption by the Commission. So great will be the impact of the document, it's felt, that the nets won't risk spreading themselves too thin by trying to tackle both subscription and re(Continued on page 54)

ABC-TV scored a stunning Trendex upset over the weekend, its Kaiser-sponsored "Maverick" easily dominating the 7:30 to 8 time period and then clobbering Steve Allen at 8 to 8:30. This topped "Bachelor Father" on CBS, which scored a 13.5, and NBC's "Sally," with a 13.6. In contrast, at 8:30, when ABC aired "Bowling Stars," the bottom dropped out of its audience and it scored a 4.6, vs. 27.8 for Sullivan and 22.1 (a full 10-point jump) for Allen.

S-MILLION MOVIE'S' CUMULATIVE 57.5

WOR-TV kicked off its fourth season of "Million Dollar Movie" with a healthy Telepulse rating, garnering a cumulative rating corring 14 showings, of 57.5. NTA Top Echelon Reshuffle; Landau As Bd. Chairman

National Telefilm Associates, which has grown from a gross business of $350,000 in 1954 to a sales volume that passed the $18,000,000 mark in the fiscal year just ended, has reshuffled its top echelon to make room for further expansion. Ely. A. Landau, co-founder and prez, in order to free himself from the company's daily operations, has given up the presidency to become chairman of the board and chief exec officer. Oliver A. A new Internal Revenue Bureau

A new Internal Revenue Bureau edict disallowing cost recovery as a basis of taxation for indie telefilm producers has brought a storm of protest from telefilmers, who charge the move threatens the life of the indies. In fact, one vidpix exec has already appeared before the U.S. Senate Small Business Committee, in protest at change from the cost-recovery-over-a-year basis and expressed fear the Bureau plans to replace it with amortization over a period of years.

An Internal Revenue Department source said "this is a matter of local policy. We have instructions not to permit cost recovery." He said the Bureau was concerned because "a taxpayer shouldn't be permitted to recover cost and then turn around and sell his series on a capital gains basis." He conceded that no definite policy for replacement of the cost recovery has been formulated, indicating this would depend on individual situations.

Maurice Morton, y.p. of McCadden Productions, testifying before the Senate committely meeting here last week said existence of the indies is threatened by the tax structure which "unknowingly and unwittingly is designed to drive the independent film producers out of the-field and place the concentration of production in the hands of only a few companies—those companies whose chief merit and qualification for the role would seem to be the possession of the largest reservoir of capital." He asked for legislature lintent.

Morton, who is also prexy of the Alliance of TV Film Producers, pointed out the risk taken by vidpix producers by saying 200 pilot pix were made the past season, with only 19 selling. About $8,000,000 was spent in an effort to sell 19 shows, he stated. And some companies' record of pilot saies is pathetic, one firm producer is caught between two forces. He cannot, in view of the risk, afford to invest too heavily in new pilots lest he be wiped out—yet if he doesn't invest, he cannot expand.

The indie tv producer is taxed too heavily to survive. The average life expectancy of a filmed vt series is highly

INDIES' RELIANCE ON ALLIANCE

Stars for Blurbs Cost Little More

Several weeks ago, Variety noted the rise in use of name performers in tv and, particularly, in ty film commercials. As both sides to the negotiations for a new codified contract for filmed commercials prepare their briefs, the reasons for the switch from "no names" to "big names" became increasingly apparent.

Since unknowns—a large number of whom make their living almost entirely out of acting in commercials—can and do earn sums as high as, $15,000 for one or two blurbs by means of residual payments, agencies have adopted the attitude that they might as well pay a couple of thousand more on a flat fee to a bigtimer. That way, they believe, they get more impact out of the commercial, avoid intricate bookkeeping standards and are able to capitalize on publicity resulting from using names.

Though it has not been verified by any agencies, there is ample talk that stars are offered sometimes as much as $25,000 for unimited use of a blurb in which they appear.

Incidentally, James Daly, on behalf of Camel cigarets, is among the latest of name performers to add himself to the pitchman roster.

There is evidence that another trend in commercials is making itself felt. Because residuals eat up so much of a commercial film budget, agencies are beginning to cut down on the number of per-formers they use in each one. Barely, it is contended, will anyone see more than three actors in a blurb, whereas once small armies of performers were used.

Hackett's 'Can't Sell 'Em Without A Pilot'; 5 New Ones in Preparation

Official Films, with three series currently making the syndication rounds, expects to come in with five pilots for national sale next season, about the same number as last year, despite the fact that Official, like so many other syndicators, failed to land a network berth the past selling season with pilots.

a $1,500,000 for a series on the basis of a presentation.

Hackett also skeptically views so-called policies of intensive 'talks with advertisers and agencies before going ahead with pilot production. His contention is that sponsors and agencies are too busy watching the successes of the current season, looking for a carbon copy for the next season, only to find that everyone and his uncle has the same "carbon copy" mentality in the biz and there's a slew of shows in the same category, the stampede of the westerns this season for example. Then, there's no assurance that once an advertiser or sponsor expresses interest in a series, he will follow through with an order once the pilot is made.

Making a sale directly to a network is possible without pilots, as evidenced by some of MCA's long list of shows it delivered this current season to NBC-TV.

This wheel, brought into function by Screen Gems and later greased by Official Films, has all the characteristics of moving to broader horizons, partially underwriting properties, not so much for investment reasons, but for other motivations. How far the loosely knit association of KTTV, L.A. WPIX, N.Y., Westinghouse and Storer will go depends on the participants, but as one syndicator acknowledged the group has enough large markets to bring out most any telefilm property. They could be the Vitapix that never was realized-

But some of the factors motivating the "Decoy" deal are a key to the current situation in the two prime seven-station markets. Repped in New York and Los Angeles are the o&o's of RKO Teleradio and DuMont. If RKO Teleradio buys for its five o&o's, as it did on the Mickey Spillane project, what chance has an indie such as WPIX against such group buying, unless it joins with other indies and groups. The same holds true of KTTV, buying, for example, against KTLA, one of three DuMont o&o's.

N.Y. Location Shooting On Spillane Series

Location and exterior shooting on MCA TV's "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer" has begun in New York under the directorial aegis of Dick Irving.

Irving, following the completion of location shooting, will take his unit to the Coast, where filming of the skein, starring Darren McGavin, will get underway at Revue Studios Oct. 14. Series is expected to be available for regional and local sponsorship early in 1958. It has already been purchased by RKO Teleradio's five o&o's in New York. Los Angeles, Detroit, Boston and Memphis, as well as a number of other stations.

Negotiations between Screen Ac-Negotations between Screen Ac-tors Guild and producers and ad-vertising agencies for a new filmed commercials contract begin in Jan., 1958. The dickers, for which both sides are now carefully preparing, stand to overshadow both in intensi-ty and importance the ones that took place last year between the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists and broadcasters in radio and live television.

There is particular dissatisfac-tion among telefilm producers over the codified contract for filmed commercials signed in 1955. It's commercials signed in 1955. It's a feeling shared by several agencies, and it stems almost entirely from the residual payments being made to SAG members who make commercials. Feeling is that the contract simply gives actors an earning potential that may perhaps be disproportionate with the amount of work they do.

Hollywood, Oct. 1.

Decrease of live dramatic tv shows could impede the introduction of exciting new writing talent, according to director Vincent Donehue. Donehue, director of current Mary Martin-John Raitt "Annie Get Your Gun" company in Frisco—next slated for the L. A. "Few important writing talents ever have been uncovered in the tv film field, and with demands for action subjects such as they are, it is unlikely that many will be discovered in the near future."

Television, according to the FCC, "belongs to the people." If this is so, Donehue declared, it is incumbent upon the networks not to shut off the source of supply for its talent. The sponsor, he thinks, although of utmost importance, should not dictate to the extent that quality material on the tv screen may be endangered seriously.

In the so-termed "special" telegasts such as "Playhouse 90," the NBC spectaculars, etc., Donehue believes audiences will still enjoy first-rate writing. "Yet," he said, beneves audientees win still enjoy first-rate writing. "Yet," he said "most of this material will emerge from established writers and these shows certainly will not be employed to build up new talent of this sort."

Workshop, 'Indictment'
Two of CBS Radio's major prestige shows, "The CBS Radio Workshop" and "Indictment," were quietly dropped over the weekend. Decision to drop the programs was cued by scheduling problems on Sunday afternoons, and the web hopes to restore the programs to the lineup in the future. "Workshop," revived in January of 1956 after several years on the shelf, was dropped because Longines-Wittnauer extended its "Symphonette" to a full 55 minutes at 2:05. Philharmonic-Symphony broadcast was then moved up to 3 to 4:30 p.m., faking over the 44:30 "Workshop" time. TV for Wales To Bow on Dec. 17

Britain's latest Britain's latest commercial to outlet, which will cover Wales and the West of England, is skedded to go on the air on Dec. 17. This will be the sixth transmitter in operation on the new web and will be followed next summer with the opening of a further station in the Isle of Wight.

be followed next summer with the lopening of a further station in the Isle of Wight.

The new Welsh operating is being undertaken by a company known as TWW (Television Wales and the West) of which M. Chapman-Walker is managing director. Bryan Michie, until recently with the Hylton Organization, has joined the outfit as program controller.

Recently, TWW made a deal with Granada-TV, whereby the new station will take a substantial proportion of programs which go out normally in the northern areas. This is the first time in Britain that two provincial programmers have combined in this way.

Like the recently inaugurated Scottish outlet, TWW will operate on a seven-day week basis and anticipates being on the air about 50 hours a week. At least seven-and-a-half hours programming time will be of local origination, either filmed or live.

Of the 500,000 receivers expected to be in the area by the end of November, at least 70% will be able to receive both BBC and commercial programs. They anticipate a viewership of well over a million within a few months. Advertising rates, which, of course, are based on audience potential, will be $616 per minute for peak viewing periods and down to $22.40 for five-second flashes.

Pitt's 'Amateur Hour Folds After 7 Years

Pittsburgh, Oct. 1. City's oldest continuous sponsored tv show, the Wilkens Jewelry Co.'s "Amateur Hour," which has been on the air every Sunday for seven years barring usual summer layoffs, isn't going back on this season. Program started on WDTY season. Program started on WDTv when it was DuMont-owned and continued on station after it was taken over by Westinghouse and became KDKA-TV.

"Amateur Hour" had a regular 6-7 p. m. spot through that entire period but when KDKA-TV became a basic CBS affiliate on Sept. 1, Wilkens people were offered a dif-ferent time slot an hour earlier. Problems of sufficient rehearsal time and other complicated matters caused an impasse between bank-roller and station, however, and when they became irreconcilable, Lew Silberman, head of Wilkens and longtime watchdog of "Ama-teur Hour," decided to pull out.

While there's to be no change in the station's basic rate structure, new card is eliminating a difference between basic rate for liye and film (or remote) programs with the live program rate of $1,800 per hour basic prevailing for all.

LONGTERM DEALS VEX CLIENTS

It's Cocktail Time

Television's annual autumn party circuit, though diminished in intensity from years past, is beginning to gather up steam. After a slow start (only real party was CBS' shindig at Danny's Hideaway three weeks ago for "The Big Record"), past week has seen a slew of them, even with conflicts.

The duplication occurs tonight (Wed.), when Danny Thomas holds forth on the preem of his show on CBS-TV at the Sherry-Netherlands, while Lennen & Newell gathers 'em in to meet the "Court of Last Resort" people at "21." On Monday (30), American Women in Radio & TV held their first meeting of the season at Toots Shor's, with John Houseman telling them about his "Seven Lively Arts." Yesterday (Tues.), CBS public affairs dept. screened its upcoming "The Twentieth Century" at the Waldorf.
On Sunday (29), Ruth Hagy held a reception for India's V. K. Krishna Menon at the studios following the telecast of her "College News Conference." On Friday (27), NBC played host to Bob Cummings at the web's private dining rooms. Day before, it was the champagne breakfast bit for CBS-TV's "Leave It to Beaver" entry.

ABC-TV's 'Hideaway Theatre'

Patricia Munsel, Pat Boone Shows To Originate From Collapsible Studios

ABC-TV, which wants a live audience for some of its New York emanations this season but faces a theatre shortage has developed a usable "tv theatre" for somewhere under $5,000. Web has built a mobile seating unit—a "hideaway theatre," they call it—for the Pat Boone and Patrice Munsel shows that takes care of 300 pewsters.

the Pat Boone and Patrice Munsel shows that takes care of 300 pewsters.

ABC has placed chairs on a telescoped platform, which can be electrically opened up and operating in the matter of an hour. The unit, when collapsed, takes up less space than three-rows of bleacher seats, and was designed to be rolled into Studio TV-2 at the main ABC plant. Web has gone so far in developing a real theatre atmosphere that it built a simulated proscenium arch at the far end of TV-2, and the wall between TV-2 and, TV-1, two of the larger studios in town, can be taken away, giving the audience the impression that TV-1 is nothing more than a giant stage.

Only reason ABC does not want to do either the Miss Munsel or the Boone shows in one of its two theatres (a third was turned over to the radio network), is that neither provides enough acting space. For that matter, few, if any theatres in town, are as well equipped technically as most regular to studios. Now, ABC has enough room to stage a fullscale production and, at the same time, present it to a reasonably large live audience. The combined floor space of the two studios is 11,700 feet, with only a relatively small portion given over to seating arrangements.

portion given over to seating Arrangements.

The telescoped chairs, when opened, rest on different levels to afford good views. When not in use, it is, the network claims, a simple matter to roll them into a tight storage space. ABC-TV director James McNaughton designed the "theatre."

R. J. REYNOLDS SOUNDS CAUTION

Greensboro, N. C., Oct. 1. A top executive of the R. J. Reynolds Co. asked the television industry at a meeting at Asheville to do something about the costs problems facing advertisers.

Bowman Gray, of Winston-Salem, executive vice president of the tobacco company, told radio and television station executives at a tuncheon the only way he could see to preserve continuing efficiency in the medium was to hold the line on facilities cost.

It's a Lot Different To Trust Your Wife' in the Daytime Than at Night

James Morgan, who is producing "Do You Trust Your Wife?" formerly a nighttime CBS-TV once-aweeker and which began Monday (30) as a daytime strip on ABC-TV, had some attitudes about the different psychology of the daytime homescreener as opposed to those at night. His feelings, shared by his boss Dan Fedderson, brought about a taboo for the new daytime half-hour.

Morgan said that, where the former nighttime version sought name stars, e.g., Harry James and Betty Grable, the Cornell Wildes, Corinne Calvet and John Bromfield, the Buster Keatons, the ABC show will emphatically avoid the same pursuit. "The people who watch daytime television," the producer believed, "vicariously put themselves in place of the confestant and resent the intrusion of big performers, who have nothing in common with them. At night, as a family group, viewers are more concerned with being entertained, and putting oneself in the place of the contestant is no longer of such great importance."

Morgan indicated that nighttime

But Saturday ayem, immediately before the game, the sponsor decided to go ahead and use WCKY for coverage, after officially notifying the station it had been dropped. The sponsor and the web were unable to clear time elsewhere and the market coverage was essential.

AFTRA struck in late August, after negotiations with the Indie, over establishment of a performer contract, broke down. WCKY fired seven of its 12 gabbers when they failed to show up for work during the walkout. It hired seven new broadcasters to take their place. Lack of creativity is stifling British television, producer - director Bud Yorkin reported on his return from England, where he staged the first of a series of hour-long variety shows for Granada TV. "Real talent, writers, actors, don't go into tv," he said. "They have no incentive. Networks buy successful American shows and put them on air."

Morgan indicated that nighttime once-weekly costs were higher than five-times a week during the predark hours. "Wife" used to cost in the vicinity of $$5,000 a week though Morgan noted that at least part of the disparity was in the added cost of filming the nighttime show. ABC's version is live.

IN MOMENTS OF HISTORY

At nine p.m. on Tuesday, September 24, all three television networks carried simultaneously President Eisenhower's address on events in Little Rock. An estimated 30 million Americans watched him on NBC. NBC's audience was 32% greater than the second network's and 69% greater than the third network's.*

In the fifteen minutes following the President's address, NBC news commentators did a special analysis of the integration crisis. Over 20 million people tuned in this program, more than watched the competing entertainment attractions on either of the other networks.

Recently, a Capitol Hill poll† showed that more members of Congress watch NBC for news than any other network. The reason the nation's law makers gave for this preference: NBC offers the most complete news coverage and, in Chet Huntley and David Brinkley, the most popular, most objective news commentators in network television.

The nation turns first for news and coverage of great events to the network with the world's most comprehensive broadcast news organization.

He's merely enlarged upon his old show, added a few more guests continues with the same style that put him into the upper bracket. Gobel's humor is still wry & dry and easy to take. He's an extremely entertaining gent, backed by careful preparation and good writing.

On his preem 224, Gobel came up with a lot of good lines and a gimmick which enabled him to tie in the proceedings and introduce the guests logically. His treatment of cool reevee, surveys, and a lighter treatment of some of the technical aspects rarely discussed en comedy shows, did much to confuse the situation and produce a lot of laughs which made the whole venture worthwhile.

Boyer, Jack Lemmon.

Opener was a fairly dull, obvious little so-called suspener with Ryan as an amnesiac who thinks he's a fugitive killer instead of the prosecuting attorney he really is and Beverly Garland as the girl in whose home he seeks shelter and who falls for him right quick. There was nothing to separate this one from the multitude of "old look" film dramas inundating television.

Still there were plenty of funny lines from both roles, and the oldtimer promises to add comedy fuel to future editions if he's used subordinately to young Bob, as the other fine assistant characters are. NBC-TV should get plenty of Tuesday night value from the series, which has moved over from CBS-TV this term.

Opener (24) had young Bob getting orders from the Air Force Reserve to report for two-weeks active duty smack in the middle of his wooing Miss Sweden (Ingrid Goude). Grandpa, who has the same name and who flies a ludierous World War I bi-plane, thinks the orders are for him, and he reports ahead of young Bob. He gets away with it for a time because the general (John Hoyt) thinks young Bob has aged from dissolution. But it never gets to be too serious a mixup, and young Bob straightens it out easily Performances by the regulars were all good, as usual, and though her part was small Miss Goude—in a bathing suit, of course—handled her lines like an actress.

NBC's Courageous Editorial

Chet Huntley and the NBC-TV "Outlook" show Sunday afternoon emerged with considerable stature in the half-hour appraisal of the Little Rock situation, giving the lie to the frequently-espoused belief that the networks are afraid to editorialize. For Huntley's was a clear, unequivocal statement of facts—more than that, a courageous, honest and forthright editorial of strong convictions as he set straight the issues and emphasized the importance of the laws of the land, not sullied by the conficting passions of the segregation problems.

Coming at a time when so many panel discussions or interviews have lost sight of the main issue in their failure to see the ominous forest for the trees, Huntley's "Outlook" recap brought the explosive constitutional point into sharp focus. Yet at no time did he militgate the momentous and far-reaching aspects of integration. Putting first things first, he highlighted some telling film clips to prove how easy it is to incite a riot and encourage mob violence, films that were frightful and awful in their unbridled feelings. There were interviews and questions to round out the total picture, the whole standing out as a searing indictment of Gov. Faubus for fomenting racial tensions and faunting constitutional law.

But first and foremost, Huntley's preamble and conclusion were masterly pieces of editorializing.

"Robin Hood" got off to a talky start for the new season, but there was sufficient costume color, good old fashioned chivalry, and a bit of derring-do to retain interest. Initial episode dealt with the nefarious plot of Lord Guthrie, played by Manning Wilson, to create an artificial salt shortage at Nuttingham, thereby raise his prices for the salt he holds. Before the half-hour ends, to be sure, he gets his comeuppance from Robin Hood and his men.

Story by Carey Wilber was good in one respect. Within the first few minutes, the characters and the situation were apily skelched out, but the rest of the episode became bogged down in talk, some of which was not too interesting, especially the humor which fell flat.

Judging from the opener, "Harbourmaster" is an outdoor action adventure series, dealing with the activities of Barry Sullivan, playing the harbourmaster of Scott Island, a fictional island off the coast of New England. But the first outing was light on action and adventure, the plot weakened with a lot of superfluous talk, the story by Carey Wilbur, who also is story editor of the entire series, a repeat in broad outlines of so many similar stories dealing with narcotic smuggling.

Advance reports on this Sheldon Reynolds made-in-England filmed series were some what bullish. It was an optimism hardly borne out by what the viewer witnessed on the premiere viewer witnessed on the premiere installment over CBS-TV Saturday (28) night. All the celebrated British underplaying and accented accents (however, the London-brand laughtrack sounds no different or less irritating than the Hollywood product) couldn't conceal the fact that "Dick and the Duchess" is in the established groove of situation & adventure comedy shows long since familiar to American audiences. Except, perhaps, that they've been done better before.

The show has in its favor a couple of attractive leads in Patrick O'Neal and Hazel Court, the latter a promising British actress. In fact all the acting supports were good, including the talented Richard Wattis from London legit. But there was very little else to commend the premiere segment of the series, which concerns the tribulations of a young American insurance man assigned to his firm's London office and married to the daughter of a British peer.

Harry Kurnitz, who should know better considering his film-legitradio-ty contribs in the past, is credited with scripting "Dick's" first entry. He really went overboard on putting a collection of stereotype characters through a lot of cliched material bordering on the slapstick.

Among the several witticisms red by Groucho Marx on the fired by season's initialer last Thursday (26) was a crack that NBC was going to give him a gold watch ("just the case") after his third decade with this quiz-comedy vehicle. In this day of isolation booths, dramatic think mustc, and six-figure prizemency this show is not merely an antique, it's an annehronism. The Benny production touch was quite apparent on the preem stanza. It was slick and well-conceived by production chief Charles Isaacs. It faulted, however, in the attempt to enlarge her comedic scope. Miss MacKenzie has style and knows how to handle a line but the lines weren't on hand. The patter and sketches were molded from tired ideas and gueststar Art Linkletter did her no good in the comedy department, either. His "People Are Funny" approach was out of place in this format.

The boyish, grinning Johnson was a song & dancer in his prefilm days, but he's not a finished product in either class. As a picture star, he perhaps got by on twith what he had. He can't carry a tune successfully and his dancing is almost an illusion, with an old-fashioned kind of tapping, fialling of arms, etc. It's possible he was mocking his own stuff, at least his grin seemed to suggest that what he was doing wasn't to be taken seriously, whether singing straight or in the hillbilly diom, complete with bearing a guitar.

Miss Stafford did a couple of standards competently and joined Johnson in a folksy styled "You're Just in Love." Ames Bros., a crack quartet, were on for a trio of numbers including "Couldn't Sleep Wink Last Night" from their "Sweet 17 Album."

"Sweet 17 Album."
Gardner has two functions. He serves as cuer-in of commercials and as dressing-room interviewer of the star. In this case it was a hard-breathing Johnson, just after his session, and it came out a quickie that made little sense as to dialog. If these end-up interviews are to mean anything—and they could—there should be more time allowed, whether or not they want to ad lib it or conform to the rehearsal pattern. Johnson hardly seemed aware of what was expected of him and Gardner wamt; able to cover up the blank spaces.

The opening gun seemed very promising when a couple of acrobate were put on—a la Ed Sullivan, no doubt—but the nearly 100% singing stint made the show a one-note thereafter. Jimmy Durante was at Gardiner's table but played mum. The idea was to show both the calibre of upcoming guests and the composition of "tingsiders" Okay flash but that's all. With Miss Wyman guesting on the opener, Ford got in some nice licks at folk humor via a routine about superstitions, following this through with a "Cool Cool Cool of the Evening" duet (which she did in pictures with Bing Crosby). Up front, he sang "In the Middle of an Island," and as a closer, a hymn. Nothing sock in any of this, but Ford's got the kind of presence that leaves the viewer with a pleasant glow at the end of his 30 minutes, and that's the kind of talent that television durability is made of. Even with a $300,000 production budget, it's a thankless job to fit so many personalities into such a framework while at the same time framework while at the same time justifying each performance. Yet the concept evolved by writers Peter Ustinov and Leslie Stevens will probably do until a better one comes along. The Britisher-on-a-U.S.-musical-tour idea was a clever one, albeit a bit too precious and talky at the start. It could have been smart, sophisticated and caricatured. Only occasionally did it come out that way. Serving chiefly for bridges, the book stretched to hard and was awkward.

ly for Dringes, the book stretched too hard and was awkward.

It was only after "Crescendor disposed of the country music and Latino segments in the first part that the show caught fire, with Louis (Satchino) Armstrong taking Harrison in hand for the cleffing excursions into New Orleans jazz (Lizzle Miles rendition of Bill. Balley") and subsequent spotlighting of Benny Goodman and a delightful dueting by Armstrong and Harrison—in fact one of the show's more memorable moments. The tempo generally was maintained through most of the religioso-blues bits with Stubby Kaye, Mahalia Jackson, Dinah Washington, Dishann Carroll, Peggy Lee and Satchmo's trumpeting, culminating in Harrison getting a fast gander at musicomedies (Carol Channing's "Diamonds Are A Giri's Best Friend" and his "Fair Lath" com-'Diamonds Are A Girl's Best 'riend" and his "Fair Lady" com-Friend Friend and his "Fair Lady" com-patriots), and with Harrison sign-ing off with "Accustomed To Her Face." Not all good with Peggy Lee a distinct disappointment, but with the finer bits balancing the deficits.

ing off with "Accustomed To Her Face." Not all good with Peggy Lee a distinct disappointment, but with the finer bits balancing the deficits.

"Crescendo" was most rewarding when it captured the magnetism of a distinctive personality, as in the lazz dut with a "real gone" Harrison and Satchme, or the beautiful yet simple production number with Mahalia Jackson, or Diahann Carroll, and especially Julie Andrews' "Wouldn't It Be Loverly" and Stanley Halloway's "Get Me To the Church On Time." At such times it had class and quality. It could be, since these particular faces are comparitive strangers to week-in-week-out programming, that they were therefore welcome and fresh.

Paul Weston's musical backgrounding was quitstanding. The tint values gave the production a zing and breadth and the Dul Pont color commercials, extolling the virtues of chemistry's fiber and fabrics in the world of fashion, were the season's best. Rose.

Alfred Hitchcock and NBC will have to be slightly more inventive than this if they want to translate the "Suspicion" series into more meaningful programming. This, of course, is the series with which the network figures it's got its best chances in years to downgrade the ratings on the competing "Studio One" on CBS-TV (a feat it tried unsuccessfully to accomplish via "Robert Montgomery Presents" for more years than it cares to remember). If the initial offering, Hitchcock's filmed production of "Four O'Clock," is any criterion, the competition can rest at ease.

This 60-minute suspense drama
starring E. G. Marshall and Nancy Kelly was designed to combine the same ingredients and elements as the "Hitchcock Presents" Sunday night half-hour series on Columbia which has long been championed by Top 10 audiences. Probably on the assumption that a good thing when doubled in size becomes twice as good, the new entry in essence comes out a glant scoopful of the same thing-different night, different station but, unfortunately, inferior product.

Not only was there nothing particularly unique or different about this premiere presentation, but in trying to create the desired momentum and mountling tensions, the Hitchcockisms were all of the cliche variety. The viewer couldn't really get worked up because the cliche variety. The viewer couldn't really get worked up because the time-tested, tried & true tricks had been thrown at him perhaps once too often. If there was an itch, it was not from goose pimples but a desire to see the thing ended and done with.

The story concerned a watch repairer who, suspecting his wife of cheating, plants a bomb in the basement of his home to go off at the title hour, only to find himself bound and gaged (by burglars) minutes and inches away from the deadly timepiece in his otherwise deserted house. Too late does he learn that the "lover" of the accused wife is only her brother.

Thus far the last half-hour or so E. G. Marshall, as the long-suffering plotting husband, is practically subjected to an acting four de force as he endures "agonizing" moments of waiting subconscious lamentations and pleas, always punctuated with those inevitable "on the brink" rescues. Unfortunately, Marshall's inner voice which represented the mainstream of dialog, failed to capture the fears of impending doom (there were times when it never even seemed distraught). The clock, incidentally, never goes off (a house fuse had been blown earlier in the day), but Marshall's inner voice wince had been blown earlier in the fear of impending doom (there were times when it never even seemed distraught). VARIETY - ARB City-By-City Syndicated Film Chart

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and national spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 toprated film shows listed in each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This VARIETY chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time-day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quix; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the sta-tion's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. Those ad agencies listed as distributors rep the national sponsor from whom the film is aired.

Those Border Affiliations

Washington, Oct. I.

Federal Communications Commission cannot allow networks to affiliate with stations of border countries without considering the overall effect of such affiliations on the American audience. This, in effect, was what the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia circuit ruled last week in setting aside an authorization to ABC to affiliate with XETV in Tijuana, Mexico. Case was remanded to the Commission for reconsideration.

The Court, composed of three judges (David Bazelon, George T. Washington and Walter M. Bastian), unanimously held the Commission in error in refusing to consider the "character" of XETV's operation in determining whether an affiliation with a network would be in the public interest. "Obviously", the Court held, American network programs would make XETV a more attractive station to its San Diego viewers and the larger audience it would attract would also be available to it for its locally originated programs."

In the opinion, written by Justice Bazelon, the Court asserted: In the opinion, written by Justice Bazelon, the Court asserted:
"While the Commission has no power to prevent XETY from broadcasting to San Diego locally originated programs which are objectionable by American standards, it has power to refrain from issuing a permit which would give those programs a larger American audience."

court declared that it was not suggesting that "such programming imperfections as would militate against an American station applicant in a comparative proceeding are necessarily relevant in deciding whether a foreign station is to be permitted to affiliate with an American network.

"We hold only that . . . the Commission may not altogether exclude from consideration such serious defects of the foreign station's programming as would effect the public interest."

Pending reconsideration, the Court said the Commission may take any lawful steps to maintain continuity of ABC service to the San Diego area. It's expected, therefore, that the grant will be put on a temporary basis until the final determination.

Appeal of the Commission's authorization issued nearly a year ago, was brought by Wrather-Alvarez Broadcasting Inc., which operates KFMB-TV in San Diego, Calif.

Cash said tv has become "quite daept at answering fiction with fact," and added that "Carr stole the MPA spotlight while amusing its members, but he must have this fact brought forcibly to his attention: of the top 100 national advertisers, 45 spend more money in tv than all other media combined. Court Puts Curb On Re-Use of TV Designer's Set Important ruling covering the re-use of scenic design in television was handed down in New York Supreme Court last week in a confirmation of an arbitrator's ruling that no independent packager could re-use a designer's set without his consent.

Decision stemmed from an action brought by United Scenic Artists Local 829 on behalf of scenic designer Samuel Leve, who several years ago had designed a Christyears ago had designed a Christ-mas set for Fred Waring. Same set subsequently was used by Waring last year on the Jackie Gleason show without Leve's permission. the designer's consent.

Issue was submitted to arbitration via the American Arbitration Assn., as per procedure in contract disputes, and Prof. Paul Hayes of Columbia U., the arbitrator, upheld the union and awarded Leve $750 for the re-use of his set. Waring's attorneys appealed to N. Y. Supreme Court, and last week Justice Arthur Markewich upheld the arbitrator.

Ruling applies only to re-use by independent packagers, since a parallel case has never come up with the networks.

TYPICAL OF U.S.

Chicago, Oct. 1.

With all the recent ado anent 'creative radio" and live AM programming on both the network and local levels, it's ironic that the electronic jukebox stations still leading the radio herd—at least as far as Chicago is con-cerned. And the picture here is seen indicative of the situation generally.

Latest Pulse gives WIND, the Westinghouse station here, clear domination in all three divisions of the day, while Hooper finds that station first in the morning break-down and WJJD, a dark-horse juke-boxy station, first from noon to 6 p.m.

Despite an almost solid daytime lineup of live shows, which in-ludes Arthur Godfrey's and Art Linkletter's stanzas and a power-house of soapers, CBS' WBBM has to settle for second place in most divisions of the day and third on divisions of the day and third on the Hooper afternoon index. And WLS, the ABC station, doesn't rate a call in the top five for all that network's accent on "live-ness," although it is still too early to tell whether the web's new concept will pay off in this mar-ket.

Pulse gives WIND 25% of the audience share from 6 a.m. to noon, with WBBM second (18%), NBC's WMAQ third (12%) and WGN fourth (10%). Afternoon and evening it's virtually the same story, with WIND and WBBM running first and second in that order, save that WJJD is rated third from noon to 6 p.m. (same period that Hooper rates it first). According to the August-September Hooper WIND heads the week-day mornings with 35.7% of the audience and gets edged out by WJJD in the afternoons, 21.7 to 20.4. Hooper gives WJJD third place in the mornings. Pulse gives WIND 25% of the 20.4. Hooper gives WJDP third place in the mornings.

WIND, a 5,000-watter with a seven day music-news-sports format, has been a longtime kingpin in Windy City radio, but the suden rise to prominence of WJJD is surprising. Plough-owned station was a seventh placer here about 15 months ago when it installed a new more-music-less-talk programming formula, the same as adopted by the three other Plough stations, WMPS in Memp his, WCOP in Boston, and WCAO in Baltimore. The cry of the reps is that they have spent much time and have earned no coin in building up a small station only to have another rep come along when the station proves productive and by using the rebate and sliding scale, pilfer the station station.

Every rep in the biz claims filly white hands but he "knows of others employing these practices."

The rebating business, coin given back to station and sales managers, is no small thing and estimates say that 50% of all stations in the higher income bracket indulge in it.

A national advertising newsletter states that the reps are throwing back from one-third to three-fourths of their commissions to the stations

The few reps who don't indulge in this practice are finding it tough sledding because they can't compete with the others but for the most part the system has become a standard practice and assumes the air of respectability.

Station owners are not blind of the "goings-on" but many use this method for paying as much as one-half of the manager's salary.

Most reps don't knock the sys-tem unless they are undercut, then the name calling, mutterings and hollerings of unethical practice are heard from one end of Madison Ave, to the other.

The stepping-up of NBC's toprated programs into full-color production is more in the same direction. "Since most people look at the most popular programs, then why not further pique their interest by putting more of them

The "Milwaukee experiment" has proved highly satisfactory, says Burns, in that where color

He feels that color should be-long somewhat in "the Cadillac class" because there are enough homes and sufficient family budgnomes and sunicient family budg-eting to afford the color set as that "extra" set instead of the low priced portables, although that soon proved itself an important market. Only shortcoming was its very alim margin of profit.

Burns is attuned to the dollar-and-cents perspective on cost-in-put and profit-result, and he con-cludes that, as labor and material mounts, any price increases only half-recover the added expenses from labor and material (which he really groups as one unit—labor).

Variety's weekly chart, based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau's latest reports, on feature films and their competition covers 120 cities. Each week, the 10 top-rated features in a particular city will be rotated.

Factors which would assist distributors, agencies, stations and advertisers in determining the effectiveness of a feature show in a specific market have been included in this Variety chart. Listed below is such pertinent information regarding features as their stars, release year, original production company and the present distributor included wherever possible along with the title. Attention should be paid to such factors as the time and day, the high and low ratings for the measured leature period and share of audience, since these factors reflect the effectiveness of the feature, and audience composition, i.e. a late show at 11:15 p.m. would hardly have any children viewers, but its share of audience may reflect dominance in that time period. In the cities where stations sell their feature programming on multi-stripped basis utilizing the same theatrical throughout the week, a total rating for the total number of showings for the week is given, the total rating not taking into account the duplicated homes factor. Barring unscheduled switches in titles, the listed features for the particularly rated theatrical filmed show are as accurate as could be ascervated from a multiplicity of station and other data.

while it has not lost affiliations in other major markets, is having trouble getting live clearances for its new shows in some owned & operated cities. For one, its Detroit o&o, WXYZ, run by James Riddell, is bucking ABN, it is said. Nonetheless, despite the several obstacles, ABN station relations men have managed to clear somewhere in the vicinity of 100 livestations and about 80 d.b.'s for Anderson's show. That is, however, less than given to the former drama block at 10 ayem, the one kicked off to make way for the totally rewamped program setup of ABN. ABN has slightly over 300 part and fulltime stations who have affiliate contracts.

Only Two Radio Networks Can Survive: McLendon—Appalled By Ex-Giants 'Dangling 3 Gold Balls'

Only two networks can survive in radio. The one thing the webs still offer as a "primary utility" is national-international news and smallonal-international news and special events. In a few short months an "American Broadcasting Network affiliate will occupy the same lowly stature in its community that it generally enjoys today." NBC Radio's a giveaway, its new rate card is "a complete farce." CBS attempted "unprecedented" pressure to force stations to clear for the Ford contract, but some affiliates "positively refused to clear." Network "rate slashing" will weaken the rate cards of high-yregarded indies. Networks are "producing few sales results." Car radios belong to local stations, not networks. networks.

ABC Radio Loses

3 Major Affils In

Program Revamp

Three important radio affiliates have relinquished their American Broadcasting Network feed in the past few days. WSGN, Birmingham, Ala., quit ABN on Sept. 20, and KBON, Omaha, Neb., has given notice that it is ankling Friday (4). In Tuisa, Okla., KOME quit the day after WSGN.

Trio of departures was taken as a sign of dissatisfaction with ABN's new live music format, which began several weeks go with the 10-11 ayem Herb Oscar Anderson strip, and which is continuing presently with at least three other new across-the-board hours.

Network, it was learned, is alegotiating with WAPI, in Birming-ham, to take up where WSGN letf off. It is also dickering with mean that ABN cannot get its full lineup into the market, except on a delayed basis, since CBS is also tied to the station.

The situation in Tuisa appears to be a difficult one for ABN. There are six stations in the market, KRMG, which once carried ABC Radio shows (ABN's predecessor in name), is a 50,000-watter which might not be available again. KYOO might be likely, but it means sharing with NBC, and the other stations are all to feed the other stations are all of weaker power than KOME, except KTUL, which is CBS.

Same kind of problem exists in Omaha, where the five established stations are either affiliated with other webs or avowedly independent.

"Marginal Utilities"

"The utility of networks as providers of drama, comedy, variety and major sporting events. Is at best, at marginal utility." McLendon said. "Television has usurped these functions." The station operator questioned whether the "narrow services" of news and special events coverage by webs were enough to sustain four national hookups, particularly since there was not enough coin to go around to all four and since, with an alleged imbalance of audience among web affils, sponsors cannot control the flow of their network advertising the way they can be picking and choosing markets and stations in national spot.

stations in national spot.

The preceding address was delivered by Labunski, who said ABN was translating the "same basic values" of strong local radio into a network listen. He concentrated on the live nature of ABN programming, aggressive and ingenious selling and the "extremely attractive advertising values and agreat simplicity of one buy to achieve national coverage" as the chief means of giving web audio new life.

McLendon retaliated by saying that he "cannot believe two competing networks cannot satisfy the residual needs of the public for network service." He would not disclose which webs he thought would survive, although elsewhere in his speech he complimented CBS Radio for maintaining a "unique schedule, non-competitive to local stations— the only remaining talk network." He said CBS had an "overwhelming lead in network radio," though he abhored work radio," though he abhored with the said that efforts to find new programming by three of the four webs are not new to him. He re-called for his audience that ABC tried a "new sound," .Mutual a "companionate radio" and NBC a

He said that the revenue left will only support two webs, hence there has been a "dilution of network only support two webs, hence there has been a "dilution of network rates that threatens the whole economic future of radio." He said there was no use in ABN trying to disguise straight spot selling as a "five-minute unit." "NBC's invasions (of spot) are even more flagrant, CBS' just as bad, and Mutual makes no bones of its spot carrier practices," he charged. "It is a little pathetic to see these once great network giants hang out the great network giants hang out the three gold balls."

three gold balls."

McLendon said that an ABN advertiser was paying $4.75 (time and talent) per announcement per station. He suggested that this was an undermining, among other stations, ABN's own New York flag, WABC, which could not compete. He noted that network radio listenarship was depression may not be supported by the said of the sai tenership was decreasing more and more. As an example, he cited figures which showed all web radio got less than 25% of the audience in Houston.

Always forced to seek smaller and smaller affiliates, as one after another goes indie, the networks, McLendon stated, are missing any kind of tieup in "market after market" and in still other cities they often have to "share the same bed" with two or three other networks.

"Network advertiser is faced with "Network advertiser is faced with the problem of distribution." Mc-Lendon said. "After all, instant coffee sales have an index of 141 in the East Central and 59 in the West Central states—more than a two to one difference. The network two to one difference. The network advertiser must buy equal impressions in all markets and thus loses the flexibility of spot radio—where he can put his emphasis in whatever markets he wishes, And just as important, the network advertiser must be content with a national average rating—he may buy a 4 rating, but that average could be composed of a 62 in San Antonio and a 1.2 in New York, Yet it may be New York where he needs sales the most.

"Still another vital deficiency of

"Still another vital deficiency of "Still another vital deficiency of network advertising is the inability of the network to get its affiliates to do everything for the advertiser. At $4.75 a spot, of which the affili-ate may get 10 cents, the station hardly receives enough money to make it worthwhile for him to mer-chandise or lend any other sup-port."

Ventriloquist Paul Winchell, familiar turn to viewers for the half-dozen years, is now heading a weekly variety series bearing his name on the ABC-TV net. On the basis of Sunday's (29) initialer there's nothing pretentious about the show. However, it has a folksy, family quality that may lure a fair slice of the late Sabbath afternoon audience.

Not only does Winchell manipulate his dummies, Jerry Mahoney and Knucklehead Smiff, with good results but he also doubles as emcee, does impressions and works in sketches. A guest policy, which this half-hour entry apparently is pursuirg, obviously will be a convenient breather for Winchell. Visitors for the opener were comedian Frank Fontaine, singer Judy Scott and The Hambones, a novelty turn.

Fontaine's - contribution was largely pegged around a bit of business in which he was to "help" Winchell in developing a "style." It was a case of stretching too far for an angle. Miss Scott wrapped for an angie. MISS Scott wrappes on her iarryux around a couple tunes—and it may be said that she had plenty of volume if nothing else. Guests joined with Winchell in a comic western sketch that cast Winchell as a rancher, Jerry Mahoney a cowhand, Fontaine as a marshal and Miss Scott the inevitable femme. It was a weak finale. Tele Follow-Up Comment

Trouble with most two-part television dramas is that they spend so much time setting the stage in the first segment that there's little else in the he way of plot development and action that week and a crammed-full progression and denouement in the second part. In the case of Max Ehrlich's "Mutiny on the Shark," presented the past two weeks on "Studio One," the reverse was true.

Ehrlich turned in a masterful first part—he set the stage, developed his conflicts and ended in a moment of strain and suspense. Came the second part Monday (30), and the hour consisted of needless repetitive incidents which rather than butressing fils characterizations; and story harmed them by

Came the second part Monday 1301, and the hour consisted of needless repetitive incidents which rather than butressing his characterizations and story harmed them by overstatement. And then, he provided an ending so pat as to scutte all the good work that had gone before.

Theme of "Mutiny" was intriguing, a picture of the skipper of an atomic sub and his effect on the people who work under him. Richard Basehart played the captain, a tough perfectionist who's never made a mistake and who makes life miserable for any of his men who do. William Smithers, who becomes exec officer on the sub, starts to emulate his boss and before he's through, his wife, Betsy Palmer, has left him and he's cut his best friend's throat by not fighting for him with Basehart. So what happens? Smithers, a perfect officer in Basehart's estimation, goes to pieces after his wife has run out, and makes mistake after mistake, with Basehart impling down his back. And then Basehart immself finally makes a mistake, and emerges from the experience a shattered, but wiser officer and human being. After setting things up to deal out a royal flush, Ehrlich came up with a pair of deuees.

In spite of the repetitiveness of the second part and the unsatisfactory ending, "Mutiny" stood up well most of the way. Basehart contributed an impressive performance, in spite of a few speaking lapses, as the tough-minded skipper, and Smithers was excellent as the impressionable execulies as the impressionable execulies as the beleaguered wife, and others in the cast, Robert Loggia as one of Basehart's victims, Ann Hillary as his wife, and Larry Gates as the sub's doctor, were uniformly good.

Tom Donovan's direction gave the entire play a sense of reality, and at least in the first part, provided a mounting tension that lost impetus later only by overstatement. With the U.S. Navy and General Dynamic's Electric Boat division helping out on the technical end, the settings, equipment, procedures and other technical aspects of the action seemed highly authent.

ton did okay as Slezak's grandson, also intrigued by the theatre biz: Virginia Kaye had a brief and nasty bit as the daughter, and Alan Hewitt and Mark Roberts gave standard performances as the sons-in-law. Herbert Hirshman directed, but he—like the actors—was handicapped by the script.

And thus fades the Goodyear series. Over the years, it presented some of the best drama tv had to offer and many a Sunday night were brightened by its talents. It's too bad the last show couldn't have provided a worthier exit. Hift.

Look Here

Martin Agronsky had the distinction of doing the first over-the-horizon live show from Cuba to the U.S. on his "Look Here" segment Sunday (29), and the somewhat more dublous distinction of having Cuban president Fulgencio Batista as his interview guest.

Batista as his interview guest.

Interviewing Batista was no cinch, and the program showed it. Agronsky of necessity was in an embarrassing position—it's tough for the interviewer to argue with a highly placed guest, yet that's about the only choice (other than dropping a line of questioning entirely) when the interviewer knows his subject is propagandizing rather than answering with complete truth and candor.

Agronsky, to his credit, showed rather than answering with complete truth and candor.

Agronsky, to his credit, showed no hesitation in posing direct and even embarrassing questions about Cuba's rebellion and Batista's dicatorial pose and position. But with Batista answering them with the standard line—it's all a Prioplot, the Commies are in back of the revolt, Cuba is democractic and next year's elections will be free—where could Agronsky go from there? Call him a liar?

Such an interview can't be conclusive, and sometimes not even informative. But it's value lies in the opportunity for the viewer to size up the subject. Batista looked a sharp, tough customer who knows how to handle himself in any situation, from a streetfight to highevel diplomacy. In that sense, the program was rewarding.

Pickup came from the Presidential palace, following a brief camera's-eye view of the Havana harbor. The pictures, fed out of Goar Mestre's CMQ-TV, were of excellent quality, and the Cuba-to-U.S. television interchange can proceed henceforth with at least the assurance of good technical content.

Playhouse 90. Is acting like a confused newcomer instead of a two-year old who should know its way around the medium after such an illustrious first-year start. It go off to an abortive start with The Death of Manolete as the 1957 season's opener, recovered a bit of its poise and purpose with the followup "The Dark Side of the Earth" but fell completely apart in its third outing last week (26) with a remake of the close to 30-year old "Topaze."

It was an Ellis St. Joseph adaptation of the Marcel Pagnol original and it was horrible. None of the Pagnol wit and charm came through. It was played broadly and seemingly without aim or direction. Everybody concerned was "acting up" but the 90 minutes was a resounding letdown.

In the title role, Ernie Kovacs was inhibited and out of place. His delineation of a mild-mannered school teacher who gets involved with an embezziling politico lacked understanding and subtlety. (The role previously had been done by Frank Morgan on the stage and John Barrymore in the films.)

He didn't get much help either from the topline supporters, Richard Hayden, Sheree North and Carl Reiner. A ty sketch and a satiric comedy can't be handled the same way, which is something Kovacs and Reiner ought is to the content of the wind.

There was one major instance of the other side of the coin. In the Bronx, N. Y., where conditions were of such nature that the Youth Board had to take over to forestall gang warare and wholesale departures from law and order, there was an inkling of what parents have to go through to forestall wholesale defections. But as many newspaper readers know, rumbles are fairly frequent here, as well as in other blighted urban areas. There was insufficient dwelling on the economic and soclal causes for such wholesale rebellion of the teenagers in these instances. In the Chicago segment, the major discussion revolved around rock 'n' roll, which seems to be a waning factor among youth these days.

Jose,

The "human spider" theme got a good working over by scripters Leonard Spigeigass and Waiter Reilly on CBS-TV "Climax" and gave this long excursion in psychiatry its teeming moments of gripping tension that must have raced pulses and speeded heart beats. Its thrill-proof enactment was enhanced by some superior acting by Ruth, Leif Erickson, Don Dubbins and Natalie Trundy. Credit, too, the direction of Arthur Hiller.

In less competent hands than Miss Hussey and Dubbins, the emotional struggle between psychiatrist might have worn thin by lack of sustained interest. Dubbins, an acute couch case, finally took materis into his own hand and held Miss Trundy prisoner. When the police were called he crawled out on the ledge high above the city with the girl as hostage. Nets were spread below and please were made without success. The girl was finally released when Dubbins proposed a deal and Miss Hussey, her mother, took her place on the ledge. In crawling back to safety, Miss Hussey lost her footing and Dubbins plunged to the net below.

It was a fine acting performance by the four leads, with Miss Hussey and Dubbins capital in their roles. As the sullen, pugnacious mental case, Dubbins may have typed himself but few have done it better in tv. Miss Trundy, a comparative newcomer, shows good promise. Miss Hussey and Erickson are old pros by now; just throw em a script and they'll do a job. Hiller directed with firm hand and struck a high note of realism.

Gray and his classmates had been looking forward to the return of a favorite teacher. To their consternation another instructor appears and they vent their disapproval in unsubtle ways. Gray, nowever, doesn't share his friends dislike of the new teacher. He turns for advice to Young who tells him the decision is his to make. First, Barton's a hero; but when it's discovered that Barton's the reformed half-brother of the outlaws, and after the baddles make several attempts at revenge, the townspeople desert him and Walker. Finally, their consciences revive enough to come to the rescue of the beselged pair. Mixed up in this are questions of respect due a schoolteacher, the teaching of violence, and whether Barton should have demanded the reward for his wife, Bonnie Bolding.

Walker continues to display his brand of soft-spoken heroics capably and Barton is good as the troubled schoolteacher. Miss Bolding shows sice promise.

"Ghosts," a complicated study of twisted emotions, psychological undertones, brooding evil and mental breakdown, was hardly cheerful Sunday night viewing but George More O'Ferrall's production was a courageous attempt to raise commercial tv drama to serious standards.

within his limited framework O'Ferrall directed with dignity and force and he had the benefit of a topnotch cast headed by Marie Ney as Mrs. Alving, the woman haunted by ghostly memories of her dissolute husband. Miss Ney gave a magnificent study of anguish and she handled particularly well the sock climax when she knows that her beloved son is the victim of hereditary disease. The son, played by Ronald Lewis, better known as an up-and-coming film actor, need-more time than he had to show viewers the gradual breaking down of his mental resources.

David Jacobs came through as a more than competent emcee, and the panel, given a little time to sette in, will doubtless become a pleasant combination. The show calls for two contestants to pose as a personality. A third is the gehuine article. Only the real player has to tell the truth. At the end of a couple of rounds of questions, based on a word sketch of the true person, the panel asked to decide which is the genuine one. For each incorrect vote, the trio are awarded $70 to be devided between them. An all incorrect vote carries a top prize of $280. Contestants in this program

"Wild Justice," a tv revival of a fruity meller which had a suc-cessful London run in the 30's, oozed atmosphere. It gave Henry Oscar, who played the same role in the original stage production, an excellent opportunity to show off his talents as Gabriel Perry, the crazy Victorian husband who meets a sticky end after terrorizing his family. The play was gripping, well acted and a first rate production.

To all appearances, Perry is an outwardly respectable lawyer and member of the community, a good husband and father to his daughter and son. But when a woman's body is discovered with severe head injuries, he admits to his wife, played convincingly by Phyllis Calvert, that he did it for $480 to pay his gambling debts. Mrs. Perry gives alm away to the police, but he's acquitted and comes home for his revenge, only to be killed by a bread knife in a tussle as he's about to set fire to his home. The action took place in a realistic set of a parlour of the time which added a great deal of realism to the story.

Balance sheet on this Calif. National syndication skein adds up opener. To its credit is built-in interest in Indian-fighting cavalry, technical accuracy in depicting this picturesque arm, and okay acting dissipated somewhat by pedestrian script in initialler, and rather slapdash production at Utah location.

First script deals with havoc wreaked on a unit of Fifth Cavalry (there were other cavalry regiments besides the Seventh) by a pompous inspecting general, Herbert Rudley, who insits on the letter of regulations. Mainly, conflict revolves around new-flanged Gatling gun, in which general doesn't believe, and casehardened gunner, Ralph Moody, who's lax in spitand-polish department. But when an overwhelming band of Indians attacks a detachment, Moody, who's been discharged on a technicality, must be mustered back into service quickly to man the Gatling and beat off the attack.
Main xunning characters of Detective mag, this latest whodun-it series (out of the Desilu stable, with National Telefilm Associates) adds up to a fairly good entry in the mysterioso sweepstakes. There is enough suspense and the ele-ments of mystery are well-welded together in the teleplay by Mort Briskin, producer of the series.

together in the teleplay by Mort Briskin, producer of the series. Against heavy competition, "Official" isn't apt to draw much of a rating (as with its Tuesday at 8 slotting on KTLA). And it probably explains why the series has no local bankroller, only spots.

Briskin's story has to do with the murder of a femme in Kansas City, and the exhaustive, plodding investigation of detectives in solving the case. It's not too different from many other whodunits, and whether the peg "Official Detective" will help is conjectural. However, there's an even tempo to the story, and direction of Lee Sholem extracts some good characterizations, even in the bit roles.

Morris Ankrum and Francis DeSales expertly handle their roles of the sleuths who eventually track down the killer, a married man who was engaged in extra-curricular activities, and who knocked off the gal because his amour wanted to make it legal. There are good supporting performances by Jack Hogan, the killer, Paul Sullivan, Judy Short, John Goddard, Craig Duncan and Anne Loos.

Screen Gems has hired four additional exploitation field men across country, to plug SG's "Shock" block of 52 old Universal horror pix, a la hey-day of pix exploitation. Advance campaign, with cooperation of local stations, is planned for opening of block in each locality. It's understood that a special budget, estimated between $50,000 and $75,000, has been allocated for additional promotion stunts, ads and field men for the "Shock" group.

"Men and Missiles" is the third Aircraft Industries Assn. film to be released to television stations this year. First is "Design for Survival," dealing with advances of aircraft manufacturers from the end of World War II to the present. Second was "The High Road," story of air transport.

The VARIETY-ARB Syndication Chart in the Sept. 18 issue for the Los Angeles market, inadvertently listed the "O. Henry Playhouse" in the No. 2 spot in the market. The No. 2 position should have gone to "Badge 714." distributed by NBC Film Sales, and telecast on KTTV. It was "Badge 714" which drew the 13.1 rating on Monday nights at 8.30 p.m., rather than "O. Henry" on KHJ, the latter skein not even placing among the Top 10 for the August rating period.

CBS Inc. has inaugurated a new free group insurance plan for office and executive employees, to take effect Oct. 1. New plan insures employees, free of charge with approximately $1,500 worth of coverage for every $1,000 of their base salary (i.e., an employee earning $10,000 a year would get a $15,000 policy).

Under the new plan, policy remains in effect as long as the employee stays with CBS, but has no cash surrender value upon Jeaving the company. In contrast, the current group plan, under which employees pay premiums, does have cash surrender value when employment is terminated.

Television's prolific residual potential holds rewards for writers as well as actors and packagers, and even non-tw writers at that. One instance of the latter class is Stanley Richards, a legit playwright specializing in one-acters, whose "Mr. Bell's Creation," written in 1949, has just been sold to television for the sixth time, which should set some sort of record.

Play, originally published by Samuel French, was first purchased in 1950 by the Chevrolet Teletheatre. Subsequently, it was bought by "Star Tonight," "Star Matine," for local production on WDSU-TV, New Orleans, just recently by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. for a Nov. 4 performance on the "On Camera" show, and last week by British Broadcasting Corp, for future production.

Topper is that Richards until just recently had never written a television script. His agent, Maeve Southgate, finally talked him into it, and he recently completed the yarn. Miss Southgate is now making the rounds with the "tv first."

As an Ambassador for the Vatican to the International Atomic Energy Commission convention—atoms for peace—in the Austrian capital, the chairman of the executive board of RCA had to be elaborately outfitted with all sorts of formal duds—morning, coats, cutaways, full-dress, dinner-jackets (just for "roughing it"), etc. After a month's session in Vienna, Folsom then traverses the Continent on RCA company business, looking into operations in Germany, Italy, France, Spain and the Lowlands.

Serling annotates each play with commentary, for one thing, for another, he's written a tough loveletter to television in a 42-page introduction, and finally, he's provided stills of the television and/or motion picture productions of each of the works.

But the best of the reading matter in the books is the plays themselves, "Patterns." "The Rack." "Old MacDonald Had a Curve" and "Requiem for a Heavyweight." The commentary on each play isn't always very revealing, although occasionally Serling does some strong self-criticism as in condemming the last few scenes of "Requiem" as anticlimactic.

The 1955 contract provides a minimum to each actor in blurbs of 570 for eight hours work. That's uncomplicated enough, but the residual satisfaction.

FPA Org Moves In

According to some, all the abuse may not be limited to the bargaining table. Certain members of an organization which has only lately come to maturity, the Film Producers Assn. of New York (having somewhere over 30 member companies), feel that the 1955 commercial pact was too liberal. FPA organized a handful of producers to participate in the eral. FPA organized a handful of producers to participate in the SAG negotiations that year, but they didn't appear to have as much strength or say as the agencies, or so it has been alleged. So long as the agencies don't have to make more increases in blurb payments, it is quite possible they will not object to a 1958 contract along the same lines as the old one.

But FPA, which ironically ha But FPA, which ironically has less to lose in terms of immediate cash, since the agencies pay residuals, not the producers, are more fearful of the distant debilitating effect that increases will have on the film market. With the actual negotiations still better than three months away, it is not with full conviction that tradesters can say what the issues will be. Since they feel they are already paying a great deal for blurbs used in spot, agencies, without asking any particular increase in payments, are expected to seek more use of the spots for the 1955 price. the disposition of the prints falls into the hands of many small merchandlsers over a wide expanse of the nation. Right now, SAG is guaranteed $575 for each actor the nation. Right now, SAG is guaranteed $575 for each actor when the blurb goes this route, but union members feel that this may be disproportionate to the extensive use the blurb gets, when com-

Essentially, there are the spot and program commercials, which in either case are divided into Class A, B and C payments. An A spot goes to over 20 cities, and that's most cases since New York and Los Angeles, when both play the spots, are deemed the equivalent of 20 cities. Class B is from six to 20 cities, and C from one to five. The number of cities is the amount played in any 13-week cycle.

ers, each working an eight hour day, at least three hours a day on the air. Talk is held to the barest minimum, merely a direct announcement of the records with no post announcing. Standard leadin is no more than this: "In just 60 seconds you will hear Debbie Reynolds. sing "Tammy." Then, for 60 seconds, a blurb or two (99% of those used by WJJD are transcribed), and if two are used the announcer separates them with a quickle weather, time, news or ball score report. It hasn't been clocked but the ratio of live talk to "canned" on the station can hardly be more than one-third.

WIND is operated less automatically than WJJD but still deals mainly in top disk entertainment, Station has three principal assets: Howard Miller, Chicago Cubs baseball, and the bottom-most position on the radio dial (560). Haying lost the baseball rights to WGN, either next season or in 1959, station will undoubtedly rely even more strongly on recorded pops and is already revamping its 24-hour schedule. Howard Miller, has added afternoon time on the station, from 3:30 to 5 (he has been doing a 90-minute early morning; strip, there for years), and five other jocks manage to carry the programming around the clock. Station recently tapped Bill Evans other jocks manage to carry the programming around the clock. Station recently tapped Bill Evans to replace Bob Porter on "Nite Watch," its all night program and is making do with Jay Trompeter who quit last month, and news director Jim Dale who was pink-slipped.

Despite its rise in the ratings, WJJD is also operating with a minimal staff of four jocks on weekdays and two weekend replacements. Station pared its regular staff from five last week.

The profit spiral thus can come only from increasing sales.

Burns feels that this Christmas will see a marked step forward in the public acceptance of color, and it should accelerate thereafter.

The resurgence of music all over the world gives the vast resources of the RCA Victor recorded cata-logs renewed vigor, and, with the new borlzons through stereophonic tape, Burns is of the opinion that tape, Burns is of the opinion that the sales potentials are limitless, Already 10% of the Victor's classical catalog has been transformed into tape. He concedes that tape will first really take-off when some simplified or "cartidge-form" of threading the reproducer is evolved. All companies are experimenting in that direction. Victor's disk sales are 20-25% ahead of last year.

Pipes and Drum's and Regimental Band of The Black Waich: "Highland Pageantry" (RCA Victor). Tied in with The Black Watch's current U. S. and Canadian tour, this shapes a top seller all over. Of course the Royal Highland Regiment's big draw is based on the pageantry and color of its parading but there's a lot to be said about its military tootling. With the bagpipes highlighting, the band marches bravely through a series of spirited melodies.

Jimmy Dorsey: "The Fabulous Jimmy Dorsey: (Fraternity): "The Great Jimmy Dorsey" (Decca). Both Liberty and Decca have come up with wax tributes to the late Jimmy Dorsey. The Liberty package is of more recent cutting vintage but the Decca set is a standout compilation of the JD, style when the orch was riding high with such vocalists as Helen O'Connell, Bob Eberly and Kitty Kallen. Liberty has the JD band in its 1957 comeback stage, including the Dorsey platter click, at the time of his death, "So Rare," Both are nifty entries for the JD file.

Gracle Fields: "Our Gracle"
(Liberty). The Gracle Fields song styling already has made its show bix mark and this package just confirms it again. Here, she runs the gamut from the inspiring "London Pride" to the wistful "How Are Things In Glocca Mora" with such sundries as "Sally In Our Alley," "Nature Boy" and "The Woodpecker Song" thrown in for good messure. pecker Song" good measure.

The Hi-Lo's: "Now Hear This" (Columbia). Few vocal groups can jazz up a standard with the tates and imagination that the Hi-Lo's put into each effort. It's all witty, flavorsome and appealing throughout.

Howard Lanin Orch: "Dance Till Dawn" (Decca). The society dance beat apparently is making its way on wax and Howard Lanin's offering will continue the upbeat. Formula, like the others which preceded, is to pile lots of familiars (there are 25 tunes in this one) and give an easy, danceable beat. Set will find a big audience among the terpat-home crowd.

It includes such faves as "Kol Midrel," "Hatikah," the nursery rhyme "A Flame Is Burning in The Fireplace" and even the Sophie Tucker trademark "My Yiddishe Momme."

The hi-fi fans should flock to it in a big way. Using a dozen Latino faves, the duo pianists have whipped up some electronic magic with a sound technique that gives the 88s new dimension.

Lionel Newman Orch: "The Roaring Twenties in Hi-Ft" (Liberty). To represent "The Roaring Twenties" in music, Lionel Newman has culled from the DySylva, Brown & Henderson catalog. Putting all phases of pop produc-tion under one roof has been made to keep pace with the rapid growth of albums and singles. According to Col prexy Goddard Lieberson, "there can be no separation of these two phases of popular music.

A fellow student with Miller at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., Lieberson brought him to Columbia in 1950 from Mer-cury Records, as director of pop artcury Records, as director of pop artists & repertoire, a position which then involved single disks almost exclusively. During his Col tenure, Miller produced 25 records that hit the 1,000,000 sales mark with four platters going over the 2,000,000 bracket.

Lou Monte doubled as crooner and messenger boy for RCA Victor last week. He put "Hal Ha! Ha!" into the groove at Victor's homeoffice Thursday (26) afternoon and hustled the tape to Victor's plant in Rockaway, N.J., which is near his home.

The first Monte pressings hit the New York disk jockeys the next day.

Aberbachs Split With Reg Connelly In GB, Maybe US

Reg Connelly, Campbell-Connelly topper, has relinquished his 50% holding in the Aberbach (London) catalog. The decision was reached by mutual agreement" after board meetings, at which Jean Aberbach and his attorney Ben Starr were bresent, prior to their sailing for the U.S. last Thursday (26).

Conselly has held a share in the American setup for almost five years, but the contract was due to terminate within the next few months.

The operation of the Aberbach (London) outfit as a complete Yank concern took effect yesterday (Mon.). The company has moved from its old premises in Denmark Street, which are owned by Connelly, to share the offices of Bellinda (London) Ltd., a music publishing company set up by Aberbach on July 1 in the nearby Charing Cross Road. It will operate as an entirely independent publishing usiness but will come under the administrative wing of Cyril Baker, manager of Belinda, which is the technical purchaser of Connelly's interest. The price involved in the transaction has not been disclosed. transaction has not been disclosed.

Persistent rumors in Tin Pan

Connelly's ties with the Aberbachs in the U.S. continue through Canford Music (BMI) and Reg Connelly Music (ASCAP). He's 50-50 partner with the Aberbachs in both firms. However, it's expected that this situation will be looked into, too; when Connelly arrives in New York at the end of October and probably be severed.

Jazz can't get to first base on tv. Aside from a few vet topliners such as Louis Armstrong and Ella Fitzgerald, there's a virtual tv plackout on jazz in the face of the music-variety shows' hot scramble for guest musical names.

According to several jazz artists' managers, the tv producers and the agency boys are still afraid to go out on a limb with a jazz name despite the inroads jazz has made in the nitery field, concerts and records. The tv punjabs are living in the past, one manager claimed, and they still have memories of "jazz joints" which they don't want to expose to tv.

The tv producers and agency boys, a jazz manager pointed out, are continuing their crush on the flash pop disk name despite the steady performance on the in-person circuit by the jazz artists. Col's Self-Owned Distribution For N.Y., Chi and L.A.

Columbia Records is getting a "new look" in its distribution setup. Beginning Jan. 1, the diskery will launch its factory-owned branch operations in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. It's part of the sweeping conversion in distribution which began two years ago under the aegis of Hal B. Cook, Col's veepee in charge of sales.

Already in operation are nine branches throughout the U. S. With the addition of the three new branches, Col will be represented with company-owned outlets in areas covering 60% of the country's sales potential.

Some managers believe that one of the important reasons for the jazz brushoft on ty stems from the fact that most of the guest shot bookings come through the top agencies, Music Corp. and William Morris. The bulk of the jazz performers are controlled by Joe Glaser's Associated Booking Corp. and the Shaw Agency, who have to buck the larger agencies' ty grip.

Inside Stuff—Music

Perhaps the first and certainly one of the few rare times that a disk label, in recent years, has edited the lyrics of an "original cast" album took place; this past Sunday (29) when Columbia Records prexy Goddard Lieberson switched a vivid Yiddishism (that rhymes with "cluck") in waxing. "The West Side Story." Its variation, now colloquially used as "schmo," has been more or less accepted in the patols of earthy conversation pieces. The Arthur Laurents-Leonard Berstein-Stephen Sohheim musical, set in the Puerto Rico belt of Manhattan, got rave notices and is enjoying booming advance sale. The networks, of course, have banned or caused "special broadcast versions" to be written, but the "original cast" albums have always implied a 100% faithful reproduction of words and music, no matter how "sophisticated,"

Incidentally, the "Romeo and Juliet", theme, in its 1957 setting, started out as a Jewish maiden-Italian youth romance but was switched to the "rumbles" (street gang fights) between the "spiks" (among the other vivid dialog utilized) and the white boys.

Sondheim, the youthful lyricist, is actually more interested in composing. He studied on musical fellowships; has written words and music, but has expressed himself that "at least this is one way of getting in," meaning a Broadway show, hence confined himself to the words to Bernstein's score. Another footnote: the composer's contractual tie to G. Schirmer & Co. will see that house in a "popular" plugging campaign, under Abe Olman's aegis.

The N.Y. Times' medical authority, Dr. Howard A. Rusk, did an off-teef trailer for "WSS" in a startume in Carolar (30) till did "The Fatigue for "WSS" in a startume in Carolar (30) tilled "The Fatigue Toward and the startume in Carolar (30) tilled "The Fatigue Toward and the startume in Carolar (30) tilled "The Fatigue Toward and the startume in Carolar (30) tilled "The Fatigue Toward and The Schrift of the words to Bernstein's score.

The N.Y. Times' medical authority, Dr. Howard A. Rusk, did an off-beat trailer for "WSS" in a feature on Sunday (29) titled "The Facts Don't Rhyme." Lyricist Sonheim's couplet that Puerto Rico is an "issland of tropical breezes... island of tropical diseases" is disputed by Dr. Rusk who commends the fine Health Department job that has been done by the Caribbean authorities. However, the good doctor sadly concludes, "Would that we in N.Y. City could find, as effective measures to control our social bight of juvenile delinquency, island of tropical breezes, has found in controlling its 'tropical diseases'."

Promotion, via musle, of New York State and of the Hudson-Champlain 350th anniversary in 1959 was discussed during a conference of tv and radio broadcasters with State Commissioner Edward T. Dickinson, in the Assembly Chamber at Albany, last week Leo McDevitt, WOKO program manager and deejay, brought up the toplc, with a reference to the boost given Cape Cod this season by the Patti Page hitrecord of "Old Cape Cod." He proposed that a contest be conducted for a song as the themer for the coming celebration and said that disk jockeys in and out of New York State would spin it.

Jack Teagarden Group SRO in London Debut

London, Oct. 1.

Jack Teagarden, together with an all-star quintet, now, in the opening stages of their 16-day tour of major cities and towns here, played to capacity at their debut concerts at the Royal Festival Hall, London, Satunday (28). A spokesman for the National Jazz Federation, which is, presenting the band here, said that advance bookings throughout the country were more than promising.

It's the first time Teagarden has ever played in this country, but a long line of jazz disk hits have made him the idol of British enthusiasts. With Teagarden are Earl Hines, who's getting equal billing, Cozy Cole, Max Kaminsky, Peanuts Hucko and Jack Lesberg.

Unprecedented $5 Top For Harry James in Paris

Paris, Oct. 1.

Paris, Oct. 1.

Harry James orchestra, which will make a 25-day swing through Europe, has been booked for threeday, five-performance stand at Alhambra here Oct. 25 by Ben Carlin and Claud Giraud. House has been, scaled at 2,000 franc ($5) top, highest for any attraction in history of house. Yma Sumac, currently starring in music hall show there, is in at 700-franc top.

Carlin and Giraud have also booked Les Ballets Africains de Keita Fodeba for Alhambra for three weeks starting Nov. 22. Senegalese troupe was recently at Edinburgh Festival.

Washington, Oct. 1.

"Biggest Show of Stars," the Feld Bros. touring rock 'n' roll show, rolled up a huge $400,000 gross for the first 21 days of its 80-day trip.

gross for the first 21 days of its 80-day trip.

For 11 of the 21 days, says Irv. Feld who is out with his unit, business was capacity and turnaway. On each of the other 10 days, the gate ran from 80% of capacity upwards. Biggest day was a matines and evening stand at the Forum in Montreal where the boxoffice climbed to a fantastic $51,890. There were turnaways at both shows and Feld has rerouted to do another two-a-day Montreal stand Nov. 17.

Other such days were at Toronto, Rochester, N. Y.: Pittsburgh, Richmond and Norfolk, Va., and Charlotte and Winston-Salem, N. C.

"Biggest Show of Stars" is a fexible troupe. For the first half, it has consisted of Fats Domino orch, Lavern Baker, Clyde McPhatter, Frankie Lymon, the Crickets, Chuck Berry, Paul Anka, Johnnie & Joe, the Bobbettes the Drifters, the Spanlels, "Crying" Tommy Brown, Harold Cromer as emcee, and Paul Williams orch.

In the deep south, where colored and white acts are not permitted on the same bill, the two white acts—the Crickets and Paul Anka—were dropped. On the west coast, the unit will change to almost a 50-50 balance between white and colored acts. Leaving the troupe in California will be Johnnie & Joe, the Bobbettes, the Spaniels and "Crying" Tommy Brown. For the vacancies, Feld has slated Eddie Cochran, Buddy Knox, the Diamonds, and Jimmy Bowen & Rhythm Orchides.

"There were no incidents of any

"There were no incidents of any kind in the south," reported Irv. Feld on a quick visit back to his office here, although white persons make up a large part of the audiences for the rock 'n' roller.

All-Negro in South

"The Biggest Show of Stars" is currently operating with an all-Negro cast in its tour of southern cities. The Everly Bros. left the unit following its stand in Winston-Salem and will rejoin the show when it plays Coast territory in about three weeks. Paul Anka was dropped from the roster presumably to make the show lighter for some of the promoters who bought the layout.

The unit is constantly changing personnel because performers have made commitments elsewhere and because some of the show buyers cannot go for the guarantees. Fats Domino is also slated to leave the package for a few days to take a rest.

Satchma Big in Roch.

Satchme Big in Roch.

Rochester, Minn., Oct. 1.

Louis Armstrong drew an audience of 2,200, big for this town, in the local Auditorium. This came on the heels of his Grand Forks, N. D., press conference when he attacked President Elsenhower because of the latter's failure to take an immediate firm stand against the Little Rock, Ark., integration developments.

Armstrong's Grand Forks remarks were played up prominently on the local daily newspaper's front page the day before the concert. Apparently, however, this had no adverse effect on the attendance at the concert here or the audience reception.

Irate at Satchmo Shutout, Granz Bids Dixie Station Ban All His Verve Artists

Editor, Variety:

I read in last week' Variety that WBKH, Hattiesburg 'Miss.), banned all Louis Armstrong records as well as Eartha Kitt's and Lena Horne's because they voiced their opinions of President Eisenhower's handling of the desegregation issue—opinions shared by many of the nation's leading columnists.

I am interested in this not only because I feel Armstrong as a citizen of this country has as much citizen of this country has as much right to his opinion as anyone else but also because he happens to be an important artist on my label. I think it is unfair that he. Lena Horne and Eartha Kitt should bear the brunt of WBKH's prejudice, and so I suggest that WBKH ban my entire label from their so-called radio station. I recommend, instead that they play only Samup Davis Jr. records since, according to another Variery story, he apparently shares WBKH's point of view.

Collegian Paul Hampton Hits Paydirt on Disks Via 'Agent' Carmel Myers

Paul Hampton, Dartmouth seni-or, is a male Cinderella music biz story since Carmel Myers, former film star (now the wife of mo-tion picture executive Alfred W. Schwalberg), "agented" him into a Famous Music (Eddie Wolpin) and Columbia Records (Mitch Miller) contract. Result is that, within a period of two weeks, Hampton waxed four sides for Columbia which are being rushed out this week, and placed six with Famous. He writes and sings his own ma-

When young Hampton was advised by Miss Myers to "take singing lessons," instead of going back to Oklahoma where his folks reside, on summer holiday, he said he "wouldn't know what taking yoice lessons mean." Apparently Columbia Records agrees with him.

Miss Myers got to know him when Hampton dated her teenage daughter and was impressed with his songwriting and natural yocal talents, whereupon she set the wheels in motion with her show bix contacts.

Bert Kelly Stakes Claim To Heading 1st Jazz Band In Chicago Back In '14

As I conceived the idea of using the Far West slangword, "jazz, as a name for an original dance as a name for an original dance band and my original style of playing a dance rhythm, at the College Inn, Chicago, in 1914, it is my wish to unravel the skein of ridiculous falsehoods concocted by overanxious writers, publishers and music critics who start with the erroneous premise that the jazzband and jazz style of dance music were originated in New Orleans and the etymology of the word jazz could be found in New Orleans or Africa instead of in the 'Agers mining-camp dancehalls of the Far West.

Regarding New Orleans, accord-

the Far West.

Regarding New Orleans, according to Louis Armstrong in his blography, "Horn of Plenty," the word 'jazz' was first heard in that city when Joe (King) Oliver received a letter from Freddie Keppard of "Freddie Keppard's Creole Orchestra." with which he left New Orleans in 1911 to four the U. S. and disbanded at Chicago in 1918. The first Dixleland Rand to come and dispanded at Chicago in 1918.

The first Dixieland Band to come to Chicago was (Tom) "Browns Band From Dixieland" which arrived about 1916. They did not play jazz rhythm nor claim it; in fact Tom and his musicians told me they had never heard the word jazz in New Orleans.

jazz in New Orleans.

The second Dixieland Band came later to Schiller's Cafe, a southside dive on 30th Street in Chicago and plagiarized my idea of calling my entirely different style of instrumentation and dance rhythm a jazz band. They were neither The Original Dixieland Band or a 4zz band.

Jazz band. I remember very distinctly that your representative, Johnny O'Connor, came regularly to The College Inn at Chicago to hear Bert Kelly's Jazz Band and no doubt must have written articles about us in Variety.

I have a copy of one of your 1918 editions containing a nice comment about my jazz bands

New York.

When I originated the jazz band in 1914, there were just three dance bands of any note to the music and theatrical world in America, samely; Bert Kelly's Jazz. Band at The Coflege Inn, Chicago; Earl Fuller's Orchestra at Rector's in New York; and Art Hickman's Orchestra at the St. Francis Hotel in San Erancisco. in San Francisco.

Today, books are filled with pic-tures of any white or colored musitures of any white or colored musi-cian who even owns a brass born, a reed instrument, bass fiddle or set of drums. If he was born in New Orleans or claims that dis-tinction and can blast or squeal loudly in a down-beat, noisy tem-po, fit only for the low dives from which such monotonous types of music was conceived, in the slums of the red-light district called Storyville in New Orleans.

Storyville in New Orleans.

Posterity should have a source of accurate data on jazz to which they may refer to in the future, such as the dictionaries and encyclopedias and I hope that you will join me in debunking the New Orleans myth and expose the fraudulent claims of the fakers who boldly advertise "Jazz Concerts" and "Jass Festivals," et cetera at which not one iota of jazz rhythm will be played by one so-called jazz band.

Like Reichman, Barlow is a master of the keyboard, although the two are considerably apart in individual styles. Barlow possibly leans to a more formal style, although his arranging stresses versatility and variety in all of his instrumentation, including the plano. Patterned for hotel and society work, Barlow has tenor sax, violin, accordion, trumpet, string hass and drums lined up with his plano. There's some solo work from the reed, string and horn, but the overall styling is a fuller effect, which has the plano and accordion prominently supporting the other efforts, although each of these also have their innings.

In the early evening Barlow tosses in some lighter classics as his keyboard entries, but for dancing the effort is toward a full orchestra effect. Crew has a large assortment of pops, musical comedy numbers and Latins and keeps the tempos varied throughout. First efforts indicate crew fits this deluxe room as if filling a special order.

Caterina Valente No. 1 Disk Seller in Sweden On Germany's DGG Label

Stockholm, Sept. 24. Eric Nyholm, chief of Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft in the Swedish territory, says his com-pany has in Caterina Valente its biggest money-making singer at present. Her "Breeze and I" present. Her "Breeze and I" (Polydor, DGG's pop label) has emerged as top seller registered by this diskery within the past 10 by this diskery within the past 10 years. Miss Valente, who also sings Swedish on Polydor platters issued by DGG in Sweden, is a foremost fave with the Swedes. This Italian-French songstress, who became a German national after her marriage, has now been pacted for a Swedish film opposite domestic star, Evert Taube.

star Evert Taube.

Nyholm said that the recording bix in Sweden is satisfactory despite the handleap of a limited (7.500,000 population) market. He pointed out that actually no company is really on top, but that it is a neck-and-neck race among the strongly competing diskeries. Decca, Swedish Mefranome, RCA Victor, HMV as well as his DGG, which also handles Coral here are victor, HMV as well as his DGG, which also handles Coral here, are the strongest. Present status of DGG in Sweden is about 10-15%. (In West Germany, DGG's home country, it has roughly 50% of the entire market.)

Aside from Miss Valente's various records, Freddy's German version of "Memories Are Made Of This" (Heimweh) also is doing top biz., Coming up is Anita Lindblom, 19-year-old songstress. Swedish Bibl Johns, whose German Electrola contract expired, also becomes a Polydor disker soon. Alice Babs, Sweden's most prominent songstress, is with Polydor in Germany and her records are selling here. Her Swedish repertory, however, is exclusively, with Metronome.

Interesting to note that Nyholm's is exclusively with Metronome.

Interesting to note that Nyholin's gompany once waxed two songs by Signe Hasso (from one of her American pix) and that it has just released four old recordings (via an EP) of Sweden's Lars Gulin, top-ranking baritone whose contract with this diskery, however, doesn't exist any longer.

With regard to the Coral repertory, handled by DGG in Sweden, "Tammy". (Debbie Reynolds) is currently one of the better items. DGG's forte in Sweden is also its classical repertory (with DGG and Archiv as labels). In this respect, it doesn't have too much competition.

EXCELLENT BIOGRAPHY OF RICHARD RODGERS

"Richard Rodgers", by David Ewen (Holt; $4.95), is a warm-hearted comprehensive biography of the celebrated American composer. Since his first success with the "1925 Garrick Gaieties" and his first song hit, "Manhaffan," Rodgers has produced scores for 34 stage musicals, 16 of which were major boxoffice successes. Of his 1,000 songs, at least 200 have become hits; and perhaps 100 are pop music classics.

With such collaborators as Lo-come hits; and perhaps 100 are pop music classics.

With such collaborators as Lorenz Hart, Herbert Fields, George Abbott and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, Rodgers has helped to reshape the American musical stage. In the development of his career, spanning some 40 years, Rodgers has grown from an emiment creator of popular songs into his present status as a great writer of the American "lied", which, as Ewen observes, entitles the composer to "a unique place in American music."

This biography is at its best an-alyzing the two principal partner-ships in-Rodgers' professional life; first his collaboration with the late Larry Hart; later, his work with ships in Rodgers' professional life; first his collaboration with the late Larry Hart; later, his work with Hammerstein.

The mutual fuffillment the second R & H team have known is their happy association is given dimension in Ewen's account by sufficient attention given to the theatre that the two men have served, as well as to the many peepel who have contributed to their joint careers.

Credibility in reporting the manner in which Rodgers writes (often with astonishing swiftness) is achieved by liberal use of direct quotes. Thus, speaking of his efforts to create music of an Eastern favor for "The King and I," although he was totally unfamiliar with Oriental music, Rodgers say: "What I tried to do was to say what the Far East suggests to me musically, to write a score that would be analogous in sound to the look of a series of Slamese paintings by Grant Wood. I myself remained a froadway-character, not somebody disguised in Oriental getup."

Few passages in literature about the stage make more exciting reading than Ewen's descriptions of the birth of "Oklahomai" And there is excellent reporting on other productions, especially on "Carousel," the R & H all-time personal favor-inc Ewen is less successful in trying to complets the record by including the best-possible reaction for various movies made from R & H shows; and in commenting on the composer's away-from B'way activities.

"Say I'm a guy who's in love with the theatre," is the; best Rodgers' quote to sum up this book

B'way activities.

"Say I'm a guy who's in love with the theatre," is the best Rodgers' quote to sum up this book about the composer. "What would I do with myself if I didn't keep writing for the stage?" And most readers in show biz will close this volume willing to attest that it would be difficult to know what the stage would do without Rodgers to write for it,

Best of Burlesque' Looks Down Its Nose in Carnegie Hall Midnite Series

New York's Carnegie Hall Playhouse has now housed everything. Orce strictly a longhair and lecture forum, in recent years this emporium has had jazz, rock 'n' roll vandeville, but until Friday (27) at midnight, it stayed close to thate Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia's 'no burlesque' edict. The ban was broken with this show, but it's unlikely that any furor will result. A group of night people with this broken with this show, but it's unlikely that any furor will result.

A group of night people with this production cast a cold and clever eye at the Minsky era Jack Yaughan's writing and staging had a lot of humor and called for well-directed reprises of some of the most famous sketches of burlesque including "Flugel Street" and a variation of "Pork Chops."

Perhaps the most important segment of the ayem presentation is the commentary delivered by Sherry Britton who, in days past, knew her way around such centres of culture as 52d St. and some of the better known burlesque parlors. In a highly cultivated voice that now bespeaks more of legit than of Minsky, Miss Britton read commentaries that not only set the stage for the various sketches and dances but were excellent entertainment in themselves.

But like much of the cast now that the satirical aspects are sharp, but historical relationship is lost.

In the comedy sector, Tom Poston would make an excellent top banana, if only he didn't give the impression of looking down his schnoz at the bits he was doing. He seems to feel so superior to this kind of work. Vini Faye who straighted and seconded Poston, threw himself a little more deeply into his art. Miss Fisher is an excellent talking woman as well as a clever dancer. Her cohorts include such euphoniously named lookers as Lilly White and Sugar Glaze, along with Jean Plerce and Nancee Ward, and turns includes such nostalgic bits as a snake dance, and a pseudo strip which seemingly had to be abandoned at the last minute by a faulty zipper. There's also a still vital part of the American burlesque scene, the spleler and candy butcher who sold Hershey Bars with the nuts inside, and who distributed pictures in an envelope with each purchase.

It must be remembered that burlesque is still the only form of

It must be remembered that burlesque is still the only form of permanent live theatre in about 20 communities in the United States. There are many sections of the country where both the old and younger part of the male population along with a few curious femmes can see first-hand the remnants of the Minsky legacy. Some still regard burlesque as a place where it's possible to be discovered, and where a legitimate brand of entertainment can still be dispensed. But at midnight, who can get historical? So the Sherry Britton-Nelle Fisher and Jack Yaughan effort could possibly be an SRO rendezvous for the smart set on Friday and Saturday nights, the only nights this magnum opus is available. It's got laughs and it has an air and not much more is apparently needed to sustain business on the weekend nights.

Ben & Doris Maksik, following some of the biggest business in night club history with the engagement of Jerry Lewis, have come up with another topliner in the Ritz Bros., on their third appearance in this kingsized spot. It was the Ritz Bros. who for the past two years practically pioneered in proving that headliners can pull in the remote sections of Brooklyn.

With this date, it's practically a with this date, it's practically a with this date, it's practically and the remote country of the Ritz freres. After many years, there's new material in the act. They have new lines, but no matter what they do, it comes out the same. It seems that it's the Ritz trademark and antics rather than lines or situations created for them that's the major cog of their turn. Harry, per usual, front-and centers the turn to maximum returns.

The trio. despite the new frame-

The trio, despite the new framework for their nonsense, still rely on the bits of business they've been pulling all these years. It's the something old, new and blue operation lacking the refinements of haut-monde culture that hits the risbilities of the customers. Harry sparks the proceedings working with beaverlike energy in his costume changes, eye-rolling, and the air of unrefined mayhem that keeps the crowd entertained. Of course, Jimmy and Al provide valued assistance.

The Ritz lads have come in with uch new times as "Low Noon at The trio. despite the new frame-

The Ritz lads have come in with such new tunes as "Low Noon at Coffee Corners," a rib of westerns, as Salvation Army lampoon, some satire on a variety of subjects, but it's still the same kind of Ritz Bros. act—not for grandma or for adolescents, but for the greater part of the nitery populace, potent entertainment.

The other acts on the bill are Gogi Grant (New Acts) and the Haif Bros., to make a well-balanced layout. The Haif Bros. are an excellent pair of jugglers. Imported from Brazil, they handle hats and clubs dextrously and forming some exciting patterns of manipulation. At one point, they throw their clubs past an audience volunteer for an added touch to a skilful act.

The Buster Burnell Dancers, seven boys and three girls, provide some well-costumed and picturesque fillers between the acts, Ned Harvey's orth executes this intricate show without a hitch, and provides floor-filling dansapation as well. Soccaras does the Latin lulis.

Phil Foster is back for one of his four-time-a-year dates in the La Ronde and, on this trip, comes up with a batch of fresh material anent his Brooklyn playmates and other characters peculiar to that realm. Buttressed by his standard stuff and brash albeit winning approach to the auditors, he racks up a steady score on the laughmeter. Foster's penchant for becoming involved with the ringsiders adds more howl potential to the rapport engendered, to wind him into bow-off salvos.

New face here is Dolores Perry. She's an attractive thrush, well endowed physically as well as vocally to make for a highly satisfying addition to the roster of femme performers playing this area. Miss Perry is a refreshing change from the norm in that she utilizes a soaring soprano to project an off-beat cluster of semi-classic, operatic and pop standards, all blended intelligently for proper change of, pace and mood: End result is cheerful reception all the way.

Rudenko Bros. elick with their adroit juggling display. They work smoothly, at a brisk pace and without any of the hammy furbelows some acts of the type add, to get matters off at brisk tempo. micked and rather cumbersome, lacking the finesse of his original dummy.

Lamouret does a Professor Lamberti with Fin as the scantily clade femme who strips while Lamouret offers a brace of corthall musicalitems. An over enthusiasm to please and too many gimmicks that don't quite come off upset general pacing of act; sharper routining would boost overall presentation.

The Three Mandarins, who have played this saloon before, score again with their precision tumbling and balancing. Their plate spinning in an upside-down position, a dive through a blazing hoop ringed with knives and double headstands garner solid mitting. Roger Coleman does a bigger than usual song session for plaudits and also handles emcee chores effectively.

The final Craig Daye productions for the Casino are colorful and given an added lift by dancer Dorothy Kramer and three male hoofers. If her performance here is any criterion, the "new" Dorothy Colinis is going places. Unveiling a diversified repertoire of vocal selections, she appears to be projecting her talents into new areas, simultaneously with the word that she is set shortly for serious roles such as U. S. Steel's upcoming tw "Importance of Being Earnest" and in an Allied Artists film, "Mr. Boston." Running the gamut from moppet ditties to serious balladry, she delivers a dozen numbers with a simplicity of style that is unique for night spots.

Her grooming is meticulous, with a decided lift in gownings which enables her to change onstage from wholesome schoolgirl to red hot chantoosey for a maximum of Mentiveness.

For night spots.

Her grooming is meticulous, with a decided lift in gownings which enables her to change onstage from wholesome schoolgirl to red hot chantoosey for a maximum of effectiveness. Throughout, she maintains an aura of sincere hominess and good taste which registers with even the most hardened ringsiders. As of now, she is a happy combination of a Mary Martin (when her heart still belonged to daddy) and a June Allyson (with a mike). The fine hand of spouse Raymond Scott is apparent in selection, orchestration and pacing for a total combination which spotlights the act as one geared for the plushiest clubs.

Impresario Harry Altman has surrounded his headliner with an expensive and entertaining show. The Redheads are spotted for some eye - catching dance interludes which they coatribute with sharp dressing and precise delivery. The youthful Escorts Prove a smart quartet, well costumed but of average vocal accomplishments. The ballet numbers of Phyllis Pons, working solo, are in the classic line, except for her tee-lerping manbo encore.

Almost every one of his 14 songs is attacked with gusto, which, after all, is his trademark. Handicaps augment his beat of "To-night Josephine" and the sitters paw-pound with him, For the end he saves the songs that brought him early success—"Little White Cloud" and "Cry." Striking a friendly stance, he unhooks the mike and roams ringside, shaking hands with the men and kissing the women. Enid Mosier and her steel-drumming aides would be more suitable to the rostrum of an intimery or one of the avant garde spots, but in this big layout they've lost. Best part of the stint is the music extracted by the steel drumsters, stirring the only evidence of heavy and enthusiasm during the act. Miss Mosier is a fair singer, but works too much a la Pearl Bailey (and not her style) to realize on only potentials she may possess.

The whole act shapes as a parlor room performance in a backroom atmosphere. And there is no reason why the Blue Angel won't get it.

Her jazz planistics are sound and her voice and manner serve excellently in satisfying the guzzlers, mild and heavy. Her timing and her verbal interpolations satiate the sophisticate's demands for human. The club has a rep for mounting an excellent all-round show, and this outing, even in the introduction of a new talent, singer Anne Leonardo (see New Acts) maintains same to the fullest. It's a completely engaging hour and 45 minutes, with enough breaks in the entertainment, and of sufficient duration, to leave time for a hefty refueling.

Comedienne Carol Burnett is no freak because of the publicity break she got by doing "I Made a Fool of Myself Over John Foster Dulles" when she first opened here several weeks ago. She's lucky to have whoever it is who prepares her top material, but she adds to it a superb sense of timing, a winning personality and a voice that undoubtedly could take a straight tune in hand without sacrificing an iota of punch.

with Charlene Morris; $3 minimum. Sat. only.

Patsy Shaw must have what Crescendo customers want. After absence of only six months, she is drawing good houses with same batch of songs and gags that pleased privatery patrons on her first visit. Act has informality of evening at home in Flatbush, featuring long, long encores—she was on for staggering 70 minutes night caught (27)—and salted with occasional flights into Yiddish which reached only half the tab litters. King of the mambo; "Rodriquez Levine," was back as central character in "Man That I Married" parody, a number suited to Miss Shaw's matronly style and one that gets good returns. Another yak-getter is her interpretation of what Cuban mambo words really mean. Pātsy Shaw must have Generally, gags about middle-ged men who ain't as virile as aged men who ain't as virile as they once were bring smiles to faces of middle-aged Crescendo customers, but applause for Miss Shaw's efforts is louder than laughter. Gogi Grant has been around for a spell, first coming to the fore with her Era waxings. She has taken a long turn around the circuits before hitting New York, and seemingly has attained enough pollsh and experience to more than pass muster in the metropolitan circuits.

Miss Grant has well-developed pipes, a personable mien and knowhow in delivery. She opens with a set of standards that fall easily on the ears, and then into her two top record hits, "Suddenly There's a Valley" and "Wayward Wind," which returned her the top mittings. However, excuse her inexperience in the big town for coming back with material that couldn't top that which preceded her encores. A rib of novelty songs has the quality of an artificial act or something dreamed up for her by writers, and a second encore,
"Without a Song," while better, wasn't enough to retrieve her former position.
For a first time around, Misc Grant does excellently and had she stuck to the first part of her act, would have been remembered with greater respect.

Blue Angel, N.Y.
Principal limitation of this attractive and personable Italian-American post-teenager is an overly familiar repertoire. Even so, there's no gainsaying that she got a nice reception from this intimate little bistro for her handling of "Lonely Side" and "Little Girl Blue." Anne Leonardo couples an ingenuous nature, no matter how hard she sometimes tries to make like the veteran, with a small true, pop voice.

Some of her singing smacks a mite of Helen O'Connell, but all she needs is more time to develop a style of her own to match a sweet set of pipes. There's a tune she performs as taligate to her turn, called "Gypsy Trail," that isn't a gandard, but it isn't a good song either. It's too hokumed up.

Young thrush can go reasonably far with the proper handling from someone who, in addition to helping her with vocal material, could teach her to be less ersatz in her between-song patter. She tries, in a quiet but nevertheless inespably obvious way, to play aphilosophical role that is not in keeping with her young personality and appearance.

Group of five Negro lads has little to offer at this stage, being a pale carbon copy of so many other rock 'n' roll teams. Apparently, though, they are just starting out, and there's that possibility that with more training and added experience they will shed some of the amateurish kinks.
They begin their stint with a poor rendition of "Hop Scotch Jump," are so-so with "Won't Be Long" and do much better, although with still much to be desired, with "Jungle Baby,"

Apollo, N.Y.
There's a lot of animal vigor in the Jerry Lee Lewis Trio, an ofay rock 'n' roll team featuring the piano mitting and piping of Lewis and his associates on the drums and electric guitar.

Lewis, in the spotlight, carries the act. He has a style stimilar to that of Presley, using the piano though to beat on rather than a guitar. And beating on the piano is putting it mildiy. Rather he pounds, but to his credit he never misses a note or slips the beat, which all and all adds up to a showmanlike display.

He would be wise to cut out some of his antics, for example, that of combing his hair after a frenetic number, and blowing his comb free in the direction of the audience. He could be the hillbilly he boasts that he is with good manners, too.

The trio sing and play "Crazy," "Mean Woman," "Great Balls of Fire" and "Whole Lot of Shakin," to good effect.

n' roll Jerry Lee Lewis Trio, this sesh could be tagged less than inspiring, if not downright dull.

Kirby, the man with a thousand voices, makes the wait seem worthwhile. Some of his stiff is old, some new, but whatever the material on hand, he has a personality and savvy that sends it through. The Jerry Lee Lewis Trio, reviewed under New Acts, lift the ceiling with their r&r tempo, coming out for the finale. Also under New Acts are the Quaits and Little Beats, both r&r quintet groups.

The remaining turns range from a okay to poor. Blues singer Titus Turner opens with two songs. While his pipes are okay, he hasn't seemed to have made up his mind on whether he wants to play the tunes for laughs or straight resulting in an awkward display. Margie Day is a goodlooker, but unfortunately has a poor range, wisely depending more on her savvy stage sense to sock a number through than her near monotone voice. Billy Adams is a young, handsome Negro with alot of femme appeal, and goes through his songalog in okay fashion.

A sexy dish is Claudia Swan, who does three rhythm & blues numbers to good effect, getting yocks in a sophisticated minie of 'Stormy Weather.'' The Rubin Phillips Band (13) lend a good assist, as well as supplying some opening and interim beat music.

Five years ago Bob Maynard revived vaudeville, after 20 years in this capital, at his 1,000-seat Francais Theatre. It lasted three split weeks, but sparked a few months at Hye Bessin's Glebe Theatre, now an auto showroom. Two or three times a year he's tried again, with scant success. This time he's booked a two and one-half hour touring show, owned and produced by vet Montreal showman Jean Grimaidl, and things look brighter.

Jean Grimaldi, and things look brighter.

Previous Francais stageshows ran 75 minutes and top was 65c, including a double feature—Maynard feeling that was the most he could get. But even good shows like Foster Johnson's "Rockalypso Revue" last spring wouldn't draw, perhaps because low prices suggest a cheap outfit. Now, at $1, he has two-thirds filled the house for two mights (with fair matinees at 75c), and expects a near-sellout Saturday. Encouraged, he's talking of trying a stageshow every Thurs.—Fri.—Sat. now that tv's death grip on his customers seems to be loosening a lttle. Dual bill on screen.

Opens with two orch numbers, then Michiel will be seen the sound of the seems with two orch numbers, then Michiel will be seen to style as yet, except in her one Gallic selection, "C'est Si Bon," which she does well. Grimaldi, emceeing, milked her last three encores; but on her last, "Boll Weevil," she got 'em clapping the beat and had to beg off. Her eight songs, though, might better have been split into two spots. Claude, a Ken Murrayish comic with skillful pantonime, does 35 minutes of low comedy, almost all in French, with Grimaldi as an able straight and an assist near the end from his attractive brunette partner Armande. It convulses the house almost sfeadily.

Gordie Sullivan is coiffed and pancaked to look like the Pelvis but with a lean strong face and no bumps or grinds, though lots of movement, a gold houdon jacket and a chiefly decorative geetar. Good voice toe, as he suddenly shows in a switch from Presley standards to "Blue Moon." He draws screams and shutterbugs. Girls in the show then peddle a "Gordie Sullivan Songbook" to audience at two bits, with hundreds of takers.

Tea-minute intermish is followed by rock "n' roll dance contests six counles commerting in Headliner Gilbert Becaud scores on the basis of greater poise, new songs with spirit, zest and content and a balanced rep for all segments of the audience. Dalida, a sultry, big voiced woman, has been pushed into the second slot after hitting on disks. She is really not ready. Instead of carrying on her early trends towards dramatic ballads she has switched to romantic Hispano and Italo songs which appear monotonous, after a while. Marcel Amont has evolved into a fine singer-impressionist. Possessing a flair for mime and mumming, his pleasant voice fills this out to bigtime status and he looks to be a star staple soon. Takeoffs on a frightened bullighter, timid lovers, a swooning crooner are balanced by some adroit straight ones to make this a heavily mitted number. Buck & Chic have a racy wild west act replete with twirling lariats, whips and good humor to make this a fine filler. Jean-Marie Prosiler is a fey-type pater comic whose standup act is marked by smart material and delivery that rate yocks. Luly Perecoff is a juggler who keeps up her enappy manipulation while doing spilts and then plays drums with five rapidly juggled balls. The arrival of the season's first musical smash is always an event. In the case of "West Side Story" it's the most brilliant and exciting dance show in years, bearing out he advance whoopla from its tryout tour.

"Story" is primarily a triumph for choreographer-stager Jerome Robbins, as indicated not only by the program credit line immediately beneath the title but even more clearly by the inspired, enormously resourceful dancing. The show is also a notable credit, however, for playwright Arthur Laurents, who wrote the book, Leonard Bernstein, who composed the music; Stephen Sondheim, making his Broadway debut as lyricist, and for scenidesigner Oliver Smith, costumer Irene Sharaff and orchestra conductor Max Goberman.

This musical version of the Romeo and Juliet tragedy in terms of juvenile gang warfare in upper west side Manhattan is a brutal, violent and sordid show, as befts; tuvenile delinquent characters, with the tenderness and pathos of the tragic love story on which it's based.

There are inescapable drawbacks, at least in terms of com-tragic love story on which it's based.

There are inescapable drawbacks, at least in terms of commercial impact. It's hardly a pleasant show, even in the spectacular but frenzied dancing. The music is spectacularly appropriate for a show about adolescent hoodlums, but offers little in the way of popunes or ballads outside the theatre. Compounding that limitation is the fact that, in casting for danciers, it was obviously impossible to get singers with either the voices or articulation to exploit the songs. As a final weakness, the musical is lacking in anything resembling cast names.

As a final weakness, the musical is lacking in anything resembling cast names.

But as a tensely enthralling melodrama with the added emolional element of an eloquent nusical score, a virtuoso dance reation "West Side Story" brings sew vitality and dimension to the tage. It's a cinch for smash boxoffice draw and, thanks to the relatively small cast payroll and what appears to be ingenious reenic design, it's likely to be a profit bonanza.

Bits of the seemingly realistic gutter dialog will disturb a few showgoers, and at least one near rape scene in which members of the American juve gang corner and rough up the Puerto Rican gang leader's girl, will probably shock others, but may also attract business. On the other hand, the show starts with decept've quiet and calmness in a deserted streetcorner scene, but quickly and surface and could be a sensation in Londom.

With the meeting of the American boy and the Puerto Rican girl, the tragedy of the star-crossed lovers provides a vivid contrast to the savage hostility of the gangs, mounting to a shattering climax in the superbly choreographed "rumble" that ends the first half with the switchblade knife killing of the rival leaders, one the young lover's cropy and the other girl's brother.

Bitterness and fury are inter-of the rival leaders, one the young lover's crony and the other girl's brother.

Bitterness and fury are intensified and tragedy is piled on tragedy in the briefer second portion as the young lover is slain by his sweetheart's vengeful fiance and the girl herself is left desolate. As in the Shakespeare classic, the purposeless slaughter brings the feuding gangs to their senses and at least a temporary peace. There appeared to be at least a few moist eyes in the cheering first-night audience at the final curtain.

Probably the leads can be improved as singers as the productions settles down for a run. In at least two cases the voices seem to have the potential, although the matter of enunciation is likely to be tougher to handle, particularly in the ensemble numbers such as the acrid and laughable but not always intelligible spoof of psychiatry and sociology, "Gee, Officer Krupke."

There may be some question, however, of how the dancers are going to stand the gaff of such a show. With such violent choreography there are likely to be frequent injuries, and the rigors of an eightperformances-a-week schedule may wear out the company. Just one evening tends to exhaust the audience.

The most notable songs, either in terms of the show or as pop prospects, on the basis of a single hearing, seem to be the ballads, "Maria," "Tonight," "One Hand, One Heart" and "I feel Pretty," and the production or comedy numbers, "America" and "Gee, Officer Krupke."

and the production or comedy numbers, "America" and "Gee, Officer Krupke."

Depending on their versatility and personal quality, "Story" offers an unusual springboard for such mewcomers as Carol Lawrence, as the eager, appealing and finally overwhelmed Puerto Rican girl, and Larry Kert, as the likable, upstanding lover. Chita Rivera, seen in several previous legit musicals, gets her best chance thus far as the Puerto Rican gang leader's girl (more or less representing Juliet's nurse in the Shakespeare tragedy), and Mickey Calin registers as the American gang leader (counterpart of Mercutiol). Vet actor Art Smith is effective as the disapproving owner of the soda counter where the mobs hang out.

It may be worth noting that "Story" represents the fourth consecutive hit for producers Robert E. Griffith and Harold S. Prince, who have previously been partnered with Frederick Brisson in the presentation of "Pajama Came," "Damn Yankees" and "New Girl in Town." Another bullseye the next time out will put them on a par with Cy Feuer & Ernest H. Martin, whose five-for-five record includes "Where's Charley," "Guys and Dolls," "Cancan," "Boy Friend" and "Silk Stocking."

"Nude with Violin." If business werrants, it would then have to obtain another housear else close. It's an unlikely touting prospect, as several members of the company have other commitments. However, this adaptation suggests that the O'Casey blog offers exciting possibilities for imaginative and resourceful screen treatment.

"I Knock at the Door" is from the first of the six autobiog novels, as adapted by Paul Shyre, probably his leading American disciple and, as it turns out, financial benefactor. Taking two sections of the dramatist's story of his early years, including the death of his father, the agonizing battle against blindness, the cruel experiences with sanctimonious ministers and sadistic schoolmasters and, as a promising final touch, his first experiences with adolescence, the adaptation provides engrossing and affecting theatre.

Shyre's adaptation was previously presented with virtually the same cast in the spring of 1956 at the Kaufman Concert Hall, N.Y. and another version by Arnold Perl was done with a much larger cast that summer at the Lucille Lortel's White Barn Theatre, Westport, Conn. On the basis of the latter offering, Miss Lortel is coproducing the present show.

This is a more or less standard staged reading, with the cast of six in merely the suggestion of character costume, perched on tall stools, with lecterns, a light-blue-lilluminated backdrop, dark drapes and lighting to focus attention on the individual players. Most of the actors play several different roles, in a fluid, persuasive performance. George Brenlin portrays a spirited, irrepressible young O'Casey, while Aline MacMahon gives a quietly touching characterization of the mother whose memory the playwright obviously cherishes, and Staats Cotsworth is flexible, and expressive as the narrator occasionally doubling in bit roles. The three others playing various parts with admirable flavor are adaptor and co-producer Shyre, Roy Poole and Rae Allen.

The show has been defly staged by Stuart Vaughan, with mood? setting incidental musical accompaniment by flutist Frences Bla's-etting and lighting suncething in the theatre yet.

To snap the prince out of it, an attractive young milliner is brought in to simulate the late departed object of his affections. After a session of give and take, it is obvious that the ersatz flame is going to develop into the real thing. The lightness of theme is given an occasional lift by good dialog and amusing bits of business, but in the long run it's the performances that come to the rescue.

Richard Burton registers well as the morose prince and carries his heavy scenes capably. Susan Strasberg is a natural for the milliner role, with her physical attractiveness and an excellent histrionic contribution.

Glenn Anders, as a swich nobleman, is good for a umerous chuckles and the same applies to Sig Arno as a headwaiter.

They've peeled plenty from the bankroll for the physical production. Designing utilizes a variety of facets, including travelers, set pieces, drops and roller sections, to achieve outstanding effects. Costumes, likewise, are rich.

Accompanying music by Vernon Duke ranges from good background to nuisance effect, this last when it drowns out the dialog.

Albert Marre's predominantly leisurely staging, plus the slow tempo of various scene changes, had the preem running 20 minutes overtime.

The diagnosis for "Carefree Heart," the Lynn Loesser-Shamus Locke musical production of three Moliere farces (chiefly "Doctor in Spite of Himself"), which had its first physical examination at the 1,482-seat Cass Theatre tonight, is: Doctor cure thyself.

Unless the prescription is potent, it would seem unwise to go ahead with the scheduled Broadway release Nov. 7. Prospects for wide-screen fluoroscoping also would depend upon the outcome of medication.

The reluctant patient showed flashes of life in the mid-regions of the first part, mainly because of the phrenetic antics of Jack Carter. But the frequent relapses became nearly permanent in the second and final act.

the bareletic and to sake the came nearly permanent in the second and final act.

The main complication seems to be in providing enough transfusions to keep the filmsy old farce pulsating rapidly enough for today's conditions. The case history concerns a peasant who acts as a physician under compulsion of the cudgel to perform a marvelous cure upon a girl who is acting mute because she is being forced to marry a rich man rather than the one she loves. Robert Wright and George Forest, attending physicians of book, music and lyrics, have provided a satisfactory score, but need something more substantial to hang it on. Two of the numbers, "I would Love You Still" and "Rich Man, Poor Man," have hit possibilities. Settings by Oliver Smith are outstanding, despite the fact they seemed cramped on the Cass Theatre's small stage. Dressings by Miles White capture 17th century styles brilliantly. Director-nurge H. C. Potter keeps the pace as swift as possible for the nearly 300-year-old patient.

With the exception of Carter, as the peasant turned doctor against his will, others in the cast turn in adequate but uninspired performances, mainly because of lack of opportunity, Billie Worth plays the doctor's wife, Susan Johnson is the nurse and Melville Cooper the father of the mute daughter, played prettilly by Jayne Turner. Allen Case, the daughter's young lover, has a rich voice which shows to advantage.

The examination takes an unsual turn at the beginning and after intermission when Carter, in the role of actor-manager of a troup of players, addresses the audience in the form of prologue from a "prompter's box" in the orchestra pit.

Scarcity of good new scripts on the Coast is underlined by "The Man Most Likely," Raphael Hayes drama which launches the Gallery Theatre's planned program of original plays. There's also a suspicion that some writers may be trying to pad out material originally designed for television in the hope that it will make the grade as stage fare. "Man Most Likely" conceivably would be acceptable as a video drama. It's a study of Bronx family dominated by a matriarch convinced that the "golden people," those with luck, are the only real people in the world. The yarn covers a 48-hour period when the older son comes home, a bankrupt, convinced his luck has run out face reality he wins a wild gamble with someone else's money, and is again the cocksure charmer.

The writing ranges from purple to puerile. There are times when the author seems to be trying to surpass Odets at the latter's most-glowing-rhetoric period.

Richard L. Goode's direction lacks firmness, but there are good performances by Allen Emerson as the lucky brother, Jeanette Taylor as the upstairs spinster, Abe and Frances W. Lax as the parents, and Elaine Sinclair as the younger brother's girl.

Poland's Legit Sets Yank Plays

Elaborate Fur Coat in 'Diary of Anne Frank' Distracted Luxury-Starved Audience

Warsaw, Sept. 24.
Through the Theatre Arts, more than through any other public communication media, still-Cathocommunication media, stun-Catno-lic Poland is expressing today its inherent kinship with the West and its people's yearning for Western culture. Stanislaw Witold Balizki, executive director of the Theatre Department of the Ministry of Cul-

Department of the Ministry of Culture in Warsaw, has attributed the current regeneration of Poland's national spirit largely to the influence of stage and drama on public thinking and opinion.

Balixid—a tall, blond, staid man in his middle 40's—offered some penetrating insight into the de-Russification of the Pollsh theatre during the last few years. "Between 1948-1952, our theatre suffered severely from overplanning", he declared. "Our stages were flooded with Russian plays of such socialistic realism that they crippled the dramatic, abilities of our actors and stifled the creative initiative of our writers.

actors and stiffed the creative initiative of our writers.

"Poland adheres, of course, to the Socialistic System", the Cultural Ministry Official affirmed. "But", he added, "those plays made Socialism appear dull and grey to us. And they entirely missed their intended mark on our audiences,—especially our workers for whom these plays were particularly written."

Growing audience resistance brought about some modification of brought about some modification of this policy during the 1950-51 sea-son. And a festival of contemporary and classical Polish drama, spon-sored that same season by the Min-istry of Culture, brought "a re-surgence of good plays". Notable among them were: "The Rosenberg Case" (Julius and Ethel), and "The Germans". Both were written by Leon Kruczkowski, on of Poland's contemporary playwrights.

Leon Kruczkowski, on of Poland's contemporary playwrights.

"The Germans" is a drama dealing with the invasion and occupation of Poland by Hitler's armies. It has been extensively performed in Eastblock countries and also in England, France, Italy, Austria and Mexico, according to Balizki.

The 1982-33 season brought a further liberation from ideology-loaded, Soviet-imposed theatre programs. Poland's theatres are all State-owned and State-run. But play directors in Warsaw and in the provinces were given wider scope and greated independence of choice in the plays they wished to present—including works of Western authors. ern authors.

'Cat' Profit 570G; Heavy Chi Loss

Although "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof," has been a bonanza for the Playwrights Co. and the backers, it took a costly beating during its final weeks. The Tennessee Williams drama folded last July 13 In Chicago after a dismal 11-week run there. Previously, it had a 689-performance run-on Broadway and a generally successful tour.

According to the latest accounting, as of Aug. 31, the show has earned $570,027 profit, of which $568,000 has been distributed, including a $27,000 dividend accompanying the statement. On the hasis of the customary 50-50 split between the management and backers, that gives the latter a 278% profit on their $102,000 investment.

The last two audits on the show list $11,050 operating loss on the production for the final six weeks in Chicago, plus $5,453 closing expense and $748 railroading and transportation expense. Most of the latter apparently stemmed from the 11 cast replacement sent from New York, even though the play had been panned by the Chi critics and business had already begun the traditional summer slump. ready begun the traditional sum-

Acquit British Theatre Of Using 'Indecent' Ad For Tame French Bed'

Newcastle, Eng., Oct. 1.

City magistrates have acquitted an indie theatre-owning company charged with using an indecent poster advertising the French play "The Bed." The manager of the Palace Theatre was summonsed under a 78-year-old by-law for distributing an allegedly objectionable display card. Summons followed publication of the poster in a local newspaper.

According to the prosecuting agent, the card described the play as "daring and sexy" when in fact it was not an indecent or obscene show. He argued that the poster was "highly indelicate and offended against recognized standards of propriety."

A police inspector said the play conformed with the Lord Chamberlain's license. Asked if his susceptibilities were offended by the card, he replied: "I have no complaint at all." The defense counsel, R. A. Percy, declared, "This is a most stupid prosecution, a sheer waste of the magistrates' time and patience.

"Times have changed," he argued, "If in the year 1879, a newspaper had published a picture of great-grandma with the 36-18-36 after her name, it would have courted immediate prosecution.

"Would that be the case today? Indeed, if a modern miss didn't have her vital statistics given she might complain bitterly of malicious concealment."

Peter Barkworth "Roar Like a Dove" is really a frail comedy on sex relations, but thanks to three new personalities from Broadway it's been given a much needed lift. In the ordinary way it might have been a doubtful prospect, but with its top-notch cast looks a profitable proposition. It's the type of comedy which, with rewriting and doctoring, may interest Broadway managements. Indeed, such sex comedies have usually been more successful on the other side of the Atlantic than they have been along Shaftesbury Ave. There's nothing very subtle in Lesley Storm's story and the denouement lacks a surprise twist. Yet there are occasional good comedy lines and a great deal of obvious humor, all admirably exploited by the cast.

Anne Kimbell, one of the trio of Broadway imports, plays an American society girl who has borne her Scottish peer six daughters but no male heir. She is, as she says, tired of being a vehicle for decendants, and wants to have a gay season in London and wear her diamond tiara. When the husband makes it clear he has other ideas she calls her parents long distance to America and they hasten over to resolve the marital differences.

By far the best role in the show is that of the mother-in-law, played with dry humor by Evelyn Varden. As if employing the British technique of understatement, she delivers her best comedy lines in a quiet, yet emphatic way, and the laughs come whenever she had something to say. It's a character that epitomizes the stage mother-in-law and Miss Varden doesn't miss a trick. Paul McGrath, as her husband, has fewer opportunities but he also gives a polished performance.

All Kinds of Men

London Arts Theatre Committee prescalled the Mental Committee of Mental Committee

There is perhaps a screenplay in this synthetically tough midwest melodrama by a new American author, who chose London for its premiere: Even allowing for difference in temperament and domestic behavior or conserts sides of the behavior on opposite sides of the Atlantic, the whole setup has a phoney ring. It is hardly likely to get a public showing here, but night fare better in its logical ger a public showing here, bur hight fare better in its logical habitat.

The play deals with marital conflict growing out of a child, accidental death. There follows a frenzied killing and a sacrificial suicide intended to give an all-shook-up young man a fresh start. Wilfrid Lawson has the plum role of the ripe old soak determined to mend the marriage he feels responsible for shattering. His scene on finding the dead woman, whom he loved, is moving in its simplicity, and the ending of the play at that point would prove more satisfactory.

The subsequent jall set, with heroic arguments back and forth, is more in the film tradition and not good theatre.

Patric Doonan is convincingly natural as the husband, almost to the point of underplaying the role. Ann Firbank is alternately exasperating and pathetic as the shocked wife, and Miriam Karlin is richly expressive as the prostitute who tests her powers of seduction once too often. The play is well directed by Robert Mitchell. Clem.

Roger L. Stevens assumed the fiscal responsibility for this import, but need not bear the responsibility for the choice. The Rockefellers must take the rap for a repetitive evening of obscure folklore out of antiquity.

It was the Rockefellers who were eager for the gesture of cooperation to India's culture. Fine. But cooperation to India's culture. Fine. But cooperation entails discrimination. As a public theatrical attraction (and the tickets are imprinted at $6.90 yet), this is tedium with loud noises. The noises serve to keep the audience awake. The property of the propert presumably complete artistic verity is present. Determined aficionados of folk dancing will be instructed, and possibily enchanted—and they are the boxofice's most promising possibility.

Musicians sit on the floor and drum it up. A fife, a Hindu bass mandolin (improvised description) and weird chanting set the background. Sole prop is a red perch. All action is within the conventional black drop and side wings of concert usage, but has been well lighted by Tharon Musser.

The narrator doesn't help much, enunciates unevenly and her text is too literary. "Kathakall" is the name for the art. It includes solo work by the star, a few "demonstrations" of the classic pantomine idlom of India, several dancestories acted out by characters in weird costumes which strike the American eye as compounded of Mexican peasant party finery, a touch of Aunt Jemima and the most grotesque facial makeups seen is the color of ancient South Indian tragedy.

The kings and gods of these dance tales wear skirts and have a strangely real kind of unreality. Intent upon homicide, one venigeful diety, after slaying a disbellever, opens up the torso, eats the heart, gloating over the blood and then, for a big flash finish, tears out the intestines, in a long sausage which he wraps around his neck.

In another dance tale the victim's head is brought on and lovingly licked. This clearly tons.

In another dance tale the victim's head is brought on and lovingly licked. This clearly tops Warners recent film, "The Curse of Frankenstein," which has been playing around the States, naively represented as a "horrorthon." Land.

casting can save it. The Thomas W. Phipps play is a hopeless flop for stock, films or television.
The show suggests a sort of inverse "Sabrina Fair." It has somewhat the same story ingredients as the Samuel Taylor comedy (and countless other variations of the Cinderella formula), but reverses them. Whatever eise may have been said of it, "Sabrina" had popular appeal, whereas "Four Winds" seems deliberately designed to disappoint escapist audiences, without substituting the alternate satisfaction of serious drama.
The player title is, the pope of appoint escapist audiences, without substituting the alternate satisfaction of serious drama.

The play's title is the name of the heroine's Palm Beach mansion and, presumably has a secondary aliusion to the lack of direction in her life. The switch from the Cinderella theme makes the heroine a prematurely old poor little rich girl whose life is a miserably neurotic succession of husbands and aimless, empty boredom. When an idealistic, vital young novelist offers her an opportunity to escape, she's afraid to chance it, and clings to the shallow, futile existence that has trapped her.

Certain aspects of the heroine suggest Barbara Hutton's story and perhaps one or two other well-reported ladies of enormous wealth, numerous spouses and no useful necessition.

reported ladies of enormous wealth, numerous spouses and no useful occupation. Probably there could be a play in any of these figures, or a composite of them, but "Four Winds" is neither skillfully nor amusingly written. It's a sort of watered-down version of the Philip Barry comedies of the 20's and 30's, with an unappetizing defeatist twist without compensating dexterity or wit.

Once upon a time there was a theory that to be funny a comedy need only be broad, fast and loud. Apparently accepting this notion as gospel, producer-director David Ross has invested his revival of "The Italian Straw Hat" with something approaching the ultimate in slapstick, speed and volume.

It is a sorry sight to see poten-It is a sorry signt to see poten-tial humor so clobbered. Since Eugene Labiche and Marc-Michel penned this farce in 1851, it has achieved a venerable history of fun, but in Ross' revival the humor is as elusive as the missing chapeau.

Iun, but in Ross' revival the humor is as elusive as the missing chapeau.

In their new translation, Richard G. Mason and Regina Wojak have strained for the yocks, if "my goddam shoe hurts" gets a laugh the first time spoken, it is repeated a dozen times during the evening. Any gag, however dubious, is sure to get a second chance.

Ross has compounded the fault in his staging. An actor is not allowed to walk if he can run, nor talk if he can shout or scream. Puns of dubious merit are italicized, spotlights glare at full voltage, and the obvious is made the order of the day. Long before the first of five scenes is over, levity and audience have been blitzed. The play's premise has innocuous promise. On the morning the hero is to be married his horse eats the Italian straw hat of a young wife who has a jealous husband. To rectify matters, the young man must get the lady a new bonnet of similar vintage, and his wedding party unwittingly follows him on his romp. It's pre-Sennett comedy that may well have been source material for subsequent farces of mistaken identity and the chase. Ross has embellished his production with music of Jacques Ibert, and his boys and girls have been cast handsomely or prettily as required. Among those coping to some advantage are Harrison Dowd as a doddering nonagenarian, Virginia. Hart as a romantic conturiere, Russell Gaige as a myrtlebearing, father-in-law-to-be, and Albert M. Ottenheimer as a greeneyed husband.

Top starred as the lecherous retired French General played on Broadway last season by Ralph Richardson, he makes absorbing entertainment of the Jean Anoulih comedy-drama.

A farcical, witty play with tragic unidertones, "The Waltz of the Toreadors" won the New York Critics' Circle Award as the best foreign play of the 1956-57 Broadway season. Douglas has a sensitive touch in a role that could be purely comical if played broadly.

As the wife, played by Mildred Natwick in New York last season, Lili Darvas uses her European theatre background to advantage. In a stirring second-act scene in which the bed-ridden wife confesses she was unfathful the same night her husband met his sweetheart-to-be, Miss Darvas is excellent. As the sweetheart who has waited 17 years for the general to be free, Paulette Goddard is both attractive and funny.

John Stewart scores as the general's secretary who finally makes off with the sweetheart, and George Macready is properly sympathetic as the family doctor who pampers the wife's imaginary illnesses.

But this is Douglas' play. In his But the state of the thirty of the state of the total of the state of the sta

'Book' (9)

The Bookseller of England reports that "VARIETY, the journal of the American entertainment industry, has been doing some research on the sources of film stories. The original screenplay, VARIETY reports, is on the decline in Hollywood, mostly because pix producers want to play it sate with story properties pretested as play, novels or tv scripts. Between 1938 and 1952, it seems, 65% of generally recognized hit pix were based on original, specially dreamed-up stories. In the period from 1953-56 all but 28% came from other sources, including books."

The Bookseller columnist concludes, "I ought perhaps to explain that 'pix' is Varierr's invariable short-hand for 'pictures'. Doubtless the magazine (sic!), at any moment now, will be referring to those distillations of the precious lifeblood of master spirits by which we live as 'boox'." (No!—Ed.)

abound "behind impressive titles

details the plan under which vanity

a 2,000-book edition. But the edition is not fully bound, spoilage of copies may run into the hundreds, all at the author's expense.
What copies get sold usually are due to the author's own private

Other literary dodges are detailed. The Dobran booklet runs

George Gershwin's life (1898-1937) closes the book, He and Stephen Foster (1826-1864) are the only Americans in Smith's galaxy of musical greats. He answers again an oft-asked query as to who of the 20th century American contemporaries — Berlin, Kern, Herbert, Porter, Romberg, Friml, et al.—will really survive and, while the others too get votes there are none who would gainsay Gershwin among the immortals.

"Music In Your Liffe" is less academic than the title would indicate. It is replete with beaucoup anecdota of each composer's life, most of it little known, and all of a character which "humanizes" these perennials, It's really a luman-interest hence fun reading type of book.

guided missile and bust all capitals of Europe in the snoot at one time, everywhere we have gone everybody seemed to have escaped to less congested areas. Either that, or tney're read. Rome, Nice, Paris and London followed formula like a dismal wallpaper pattern.

Even 70-year-old Swaff, who has lived above the VAREETY office for as long as a Shaw preface, and about as controversial, has lit out for Norway. I had expected we would drop in at the VAREETY office and do the crossword puzzle in the Times, as has been his daily habit for years, and we could kick the world around in repose, but the screaming of the mass circulation rags over an insult some young lord named Altrincham had thrown at the Queen's English and even bigger type employed to tell how appalled its editors were at the trial of the County of Los Angeles vs. Confidential, seems to have stirred Swaff to take off for some fishing in Norway where I could have told him it is even colder this summer than in Paris or London.

'Sacrifice' Is The Key Word

Clem Humphries, secretary of the Variotous London dynasty since the early days of the late Jolo (Joshua Lowe), was our only contact with the dear, dead past. And, oh yes, the statue of Edith Cavell, washed by the rains or some kindly hands, was still there, with the word SACRIFICE staring at any staffer who might be thinking that the cost-of-living index scooting ever skyward, this might be a good time to ask for a raise, as they still say in a once merrie England.

Our contacts of a quarter of a century ago were as dead as a doornail, (deader, because nobody seems to remember them and everybody remembers the old door nail). But Piccadilly Circus seemed to be more alive than ever. It's nitelites were brighter than those around Sime's Square.

This may have been because the rains had washed the London atmos This may have been because the rains had washed the London atmosphere of smog. But it was good to see people gaily hurrying off to theatres where shows begin in some legit houses as early as 7:15. By two in the morning, however, Piccadilly is back to the blackouts. All buses are in the barns and taxis are few. Only the street lights are left and they are mostly fog-lights which change red to black and make all faces look ghastly.

Box-Car Figures For Dallies

Box-Car Figures For Dallies

The dailies in the main lave defied the trend toward mergers and decimation. Swaff's Herald has skidded but others have held on to circulation figures and some have climbed to fantastic heights. Any raw with less than a million copies a day dreads talking about it and one of them is up to 4,000,000. They sell for two to five cents, which is cheap in this high priced town.

The Times, the Observer and the Manchester Guardian somehow manage to wangle a fine quality of newsprint and otherwise hold to their high standard of what constitutes news. The Mail and the Express and their tab satellites keep feuding as of yore, currently over which is the worst friend of the Queen's English and whether she does or does not pay too much attention to the Tweed Set and top little to the Peepul. neglecting to print all the details and holding up their hands in holy terror at the same time. This has been especially true of the bawdy dispatches from Hollywood.

Mr. Punch is still in there punching and his course in the last century has been traced by a new book by R. G. Price which is selling for around four bucks. Malcolm Muggeridge, which sounds like a name out of an early Evelyn Waugh novel, just quit as editor. He came over from the Telegraph five years ago and was expected to harpoon the Welfare State to death, but he seems to have disliked the Tories as bady as the Laborites. He found time to broadcast and project his pan on tv between press deadlines and there is panned and fried as if he were an egg of dubious freshness. When wearied by this too much he retreats to the New Statesman and airs some philosophic reflections for them. He will have more time for philosophy now. As a matter of fact, he never was crazy about Punch. Until they get a new editor Peter Agnew is the boss. The mag has been in his family for 85 years.

Pretty Girl Like A Malady

I haven't yet caught up with Punch's reactions to my Lord Altrincham's animadversions concerning the Queen's style of speaking, which gives him "a pain in the neck." Like her mother she seems unable to string a few words together without a written text," he added.

Except for the Daily Mirror and the New Statesman, no paper seemed to back up his young lordship's blast, though they all printed it in various degrees of emphasis.

As the girl is the prettiest thing in a land where the horsey set looks more horse-faced, than the horses and can only name the Knights of the Garter (all 25 of them) without being told to get back on her throne, it seems to an outsider like telling a deaf-mute to speak up and be louder and funner. Still, as she is due to give Canada and the USA a whirl next month, there may be misgivings that she will say the right thing at the wrong time, and hence needs a livelier dialog director.

Thurber's Satire On Hero Worship

the right thing at the wrong time, and hence needs a livener dialog director.

Thurber's Satire On Hero Worship

Could it be that all these Queen's Worriers had misread a fantasy of Jim Thurber's in "The Middle Aged Man on the Flying Trapeze" as history? I mean the tale of the tough kid, Jack (Pal) Smurch, who flew a second hand single motored plane around the world without a stop and, ill-fitted to handle the role of a hero, would take no direction from the press, the State Dept. or even the President as to how to avoid belittling the achievements of other heroes, or otherwise act with a modesty that didn't fit him at all. As I recall it, when he was leaning out the window from the ninth story, where his briefing was taking place, a nod from the Prex and the secretary to the mayor of New York gave him the push that sent him hurtling to his death, after which the head of the A.P. set the story for all to follow of Smurch's "accidental" death while waving to his hysterical public on the street far below.

death while waving to his hysterical public on the street far below. Punch's Real Biz Not Jokes Francis Williams, who keeps a weekly check on the nonsense that goes on in Fleet Street, thinks Price is right in insisting that Punch's job is not to make jokes about illiterate charmalds or newcomers to the hunting set falling off horses (kings have been killed doing this) but to conceal the British need to conceal emotion behind good form. Following this formula Punch has become a national institution and over a century it has survived all competition, some of it lots funnier. But a comic weekly that has survived without contributions from Shaw, Chesterton, Wells, Belloc and Beerbohm is proof that it didn't need the best wits to keep going.

It kept going by not causing offense to people who mattered, At least not to those who mattered in England. I scooped up some loot in my travels and among the prize items were several volumes of the early Punch. Among them were bound volumes of Punch's first years, and the insults they could toss off to people like A. Lincoln and the Pope would have shocked even King George III.

It hasn't quite remained as impervious to change as the Nelson Column and it certainly has changed in its attitude toward America. It has seen a mighty empire chipped off as if by souvenir-hunters and the end not yet in sight. But in its cynical and iconoclastic way it's still smilling for the reverses as if it were edited by Harold Stassen.

The entry of Negro stagehands into the Broadway field will apparently leave only one major category with a racial exclusion policy. That is the boxoffice uncategory with a latent policy. That is the boxoffice union. However, in that case it's not clear whether it is matter of official rule, tacit agreement or mera coincidence.

Negroes are members of the musicians' union and a number work in the pits for Broadway shows. They are also admissable to the Assn. of Theatrical Press Agents & Managers, and some have been members and been employed in the past, although none is in the union at present. There is no discrimination in Actors Equity, but employment is a matter of casting requirements and the personal wishes of producers, authors, directors, etc., of individual shows.

Eugene O'Neill, 30 Years Ago, Watered Down His Own 'Elms' for Films; Now Par Version Close to Stage

Hollywood, Oct. 8.

A dust-covered screen treatment unearthed at Paramount a few months ago is today's best proof of the current maturity of the screen and of the development of film audiences to the point at which adult stories can be told with the full sanction and approval of the Production Code Administration. The treatment is of "Desire Under the Elms" and it was written by Eugene Oneill himself in an effort to peddle the property to pictures shortly after it opened on Broadway three decades ago.

With the ther uncompromising strictures of the industry in mind. O'Neill's treatment heavily bowdlerized his own stark stage script. By contrast, the completed film version of "Desire," which will be released early next year, hasn't changed any of the characters and hews to the original plot without sugar-coating.

Cheaper Franc Means Less French Film Aid

Less French Film Aid
Paris, Oct. 8.
With the devaluation of the franc now an accepted factor here, the amount of Film Aid handed out to producers on a percentage of foreign and domestic take, has been regulated accordingly. This fund money is obtained via taxes on theatre ducats here and is given to a producer towards his next film. This is supposed to keep an equilibrium in the film setup.
Rising production costs and below par cinema patronage have made it almost impossible for most films to get amortization in their own marts. Thus a bigger premium in aid was handed pix bringing in foreign revenue. From 25% it will now be cut to 19% since devaluation is in favor. Local aid on grosses will go to 7% and 8%. Only repatriated funds count for the advances on foreign take.

Hollywood, Oct. 8.

If producers follow through on their title registrations, Holllywood is going on a satellite kick, as spurred by Russia's launching of its man-made "moon." It could mean a new cycle, possibly replacing the current run of horror entries.

See Bigger Budget For Cannes' Film Festival: To Overshadow Venice

To Overshadow Venice

Paris, Oct. 8

Since both the Cannes and Venice Film Festivals were moderately successful this year, both the Gallic industry and governmental sources concur on the fact that Cannes has to go all out for the next festival, next May, to keep the Cannes prestige, commercial and publicity lead intact.

So it looks like there will be a hike in the Cannes budget next year. Previously having only $135,000 to Venice's $275,000, the next outlay may approach that of Venice. The governmental Ministry of Commerce and Industry, through the Centre Du Cinema, already has pledged a substantial raise to be followed by like kickins from the industry and the city of Cannes, plus private donations.

this year, by cutting journalist lists, led to some misunderstandings and difficulties. Important scribes were deleted in many cases, especially among the Italians who were rankled at the fest management. Cannes invited, 25 Italians, 14 newsmen among them, while Venlice was able to host 114 French film reps with 38 news chroniclers included.

It is felt that Cannes will now get a greater personnel so as to screen invites more carefully and avoid this sort of thing. Cannes, however, did pay more attention to world distribs, exhibs and producers, which it will continue to do. Prexy Robert Favre Le Bret, of the Cannes Fest, feels that Cannes next year will be able to take care of its large journalistic, diplomatic and industry turnout. Films will be more carefully looked over also. Hopeless entries will be denied with replacements asked for.

Rockefeller Grants To Arts [ON SHORT-TERM PHILOSOPHY]

[ON SHORT-TERM PHILOSOPHY]

Washington, Oct. 8.

Since 1953 when it began making major grants in support of the arts, the Rockefeller Foundation has contributed $300,000 to the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre at Stratford, Conn., and $42,000 to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival, in Canada. Of the Connecticut money, $100,000 was given last year, says the annual report of the Rockefeller Foundation.

"The Foundation's intention," it is explained, "is not to provide long-term or continuous support, but to offer the short-term or initial aid which will lead to a new or higher level of achievement that can be maintained by other sources."

Among other major grants in the past three or four years,—$200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama, to commission new bellet and opera productions; $125,000 to the Boston Symphony Orch toward the Tanglewood scholarship fund; $500,000 to the Louisville Symphony Corch to commission new music; $150,000 to the Virginia Museum, of Fine Arts to aid in Opera Association for an exploratory committee on a Musical Arts Center for New York City. This last became the Lincoln Square Performing Arts Center. Its purpose is to create a center for Metropolitian Opera, the New York Philharmonic Orch, and ballet, drama and advanced training in the performing arts.

atres and other places of amusement be far behind. It's as inevitable as spring following winter but don't look for it to happen for some time.

This is the opinion of several show business operators and theatremen of the Louisville area. (It must be noted that Louisville is regarded as "progressive" in the language of the integration advocates).

They point up that Negro youngsters moved in with whites in the local schools without incident. And they add that while such intermingling cannot be forced at this time — the pressures against it would be severe—at theatres and such, the sentiments of a majority of the public will change. Perhapsit's a generation away.

One exhibitor said he'd like to have integration at his house if only for business reasons. He has a good situation, nabs 'the best pictures on first availability and could thereby draw patronage away from Negro theatres.

Another said he believes that when the local moppets of today grow up, and when their children begin attending the interracial schools as they did, the idea of integration in show business places will not be so remote.

SPAIN'S NOSTALGIC HIT

Raquel Meller, Carmen Flores Back In Wake of Musical

Barcelona, Oct. 1.

Unexpected hit of Spanish pic "The Last Song" directed by Rafael de Orduna where Sarita Montiel scores as a singer, has brought back to the stage old timers like Raquel Meller and Carmen Flores (not Lola), well in their sixties, to sing once more the songs they launched and Sarita Montiel has revived in the film.

"The Last Song" (El ultimo cuple) is not the biography of one singer but with episodes of the lives of several Spanish song stars of 40 years ago, a plot was written which fused with the old tunes. Grosses for film, after a five months run in three theatres, and still continuing in two, has already exceeded receipts of "Gone With the Wind" (Metro).

Naturally, Sarita Montiel has already started work in another pic, also with songs. Barcelona, Oct. 1.

Thirteen thousand feet high, on switzerland's' cloud-kissed Jungfraujoch, and only several hundred yards from the precipice, which claimed the lives last month of three expert mountain climbers, Birt Balaban is shooting his latest film effort, "High Hell."

The dangers involved in making "High Hell" have excited the interest of British and French newstele companies. They are almost constantly on location." As a result Balaban has been more shot than shooting.

previously-affiliated chains may engage in production.

The industry trend, many feel, is back toward the integrated setups. It's noted that the producer-distributor's ownership of theatres, or the other way around, was not found illegal per se. The companies were slapped with antitrust decrees, which called for theatre divestiture and trade reforms, because of the uses to which they were found to have put their power.

But if there are no longer any such abuses, and exhibs can produce and producers can exhibit, isn't this the integrated setup all over again?

Films May Have To Rely More 'n' More On U.S. Transfer

Washington, Oct. 8.

Because of deteriorating financial and economic conditions abroad, the American film industry in the near future will have to make greater use of the Government's informational media guaranty program, Eric Johnston told the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee here yesterday (Mon).

The Motion Picture Export Assn. prexy said it was either that "or abandon some markets to subsidized film of other countries."

Under the media guaranty program, Hollywood can sell its films in a given country for local currency which is turned over to fie. U.S. Information Agency. Latter in turn pays out an equivalent sum in dollars in the States.

Quebec Censor Leaves Characters Suffering In Crosby's 'Fire' Film

In Crosby's 'Fire' Film

Montreal, Oct. 8.

Once again the subject of divorce and the Quebec censors have locked to reduce an adult film with a serious theme to 'senselessness. Such was the case last week with Bing Crosby's 'Man on Fire' after the censors took a second look and after the film had been shown to local critics for review purposes. On Sat. (Sept. 28) Walter O'Hearn of The Montreal Star wrote a lengthy review of the film giving high marks to the mature treatment of the divorce and commenting on the overall excellence of the performances given with reference to "the relatively happy ending, which I should prefer to describe as a tranquil ending."

Censors cut the final reel before it opened in a first-run house. O'Hearn's review and what the public saw had little meshing. Instead of the "tranquil ending," the cut version ended with everyone concerned in the film emotionally upset and a short homily to the effect that "divorce solves nothing" being flashed on the screen to drive home the moral lesson.

Last Tues. (1). O'Hearn wrote another column to clarify his position with the readers and also the invention with the readers and also the invention with the readers and also that it is a few pointed remarks on the juvenile handling of this particular film by everyone, including the censors. Because of the mutilation, "Man on Fire" lasted only one week.

Distribs Still Being 'Traditional,' Feed Big Pictures to Big Weeks; Exhibs Decry Pre-Holiday 'Slackers'

Playing for Suckers

Central Theatre, Broadway, pulled a fastie on the public Thursday (3) night. Marquee-billed was a "Preview of a Major Studio Production" along with the regular program. Ticket-buyers did a burn upon learning the unidentified pic was a meager quickie from Britain's Major Studios. Adding up to a good example of how to lose customers.

U.S. Product Pacing Fall Season at Rome Theatres; 'Giant' Leading With 81G

Rome, Oct. 1.

Yank product is pacing the fall season at Rome's boxoffices, according to figures just released here. "Giant" (WB) counting a pre vious first-run performance (it's now continuing in other initial situations here) has racked up a very strong $81,000 to date. Current top grosser, among more recent starters, is "Friendly Persuasion" (AA) with over $42,000. "War and Peace" (Par) is nearing the $20,000 mark in a reprise firstrun at the Arlecchino, with continuous shows. Previous stanza had been reserved-seat advanced-price setup.

Highest average grosses of any newcomer to date have been registered in its first two weeks by "Love in Afternoon" (AA), which has so far run up a very high $20,000 in a relatively small house, the Fiamma. "Hatful of Rain" (20th) and "Island in Sun" (20th) follow with okay, but not outstanding, first-run takes. "The Little Hut" (M-G), including its drive-in gross, has so far made some $19,000 in early spots.

Big holes in the release schedules between now and Thanksgiving, and from then on until the Christmas holidays has exhibitors doing a burn again.

Even some distribution execs are in accord that the policy of "seasonal" selling, geared to the juicy holiday trade, is shortsighted to say the least. Yet, it's a habit of which distribution appears to be unable to break itself.

Exhibs acknowledge that not all of the distributors are following the withholding policy to the same degree, and 20th-Fox—with its large product roster—is singled out as one of the exceptions. But many feel strongly that the tendency to leave a big chunk of the calendar to "filler" product, paced by only a couple of biggies during the supposedly slack periods, is a big mistake and that the reverberations of it can still be felt when the holidays roll around.

Paramount's president is listening to suggestions from various quarters, including "Commandments" producer Cecil B. De Mille, but so far nothing has come up which Par feels would warrant a production risk of over $10,000,000. There's no question but that themes such as the Decalogue are hard to come by. But the reason for Balaban's and Par's continuing search is the obvious one: "Commandments" has been a major source of money for nearly the past year and, unless the completely unexpected happens, will continue as same for into the future.

Business-Like Writers Foresightedly Demand Stake in Toll Re-Plays

Hollywood, Oct. 8.
Writers Guild of America West has become the first talent guild in Hollywood to formulate demands for toll tv, and in seeking a producer okay of its format, is skipping demands for a hike in minimums for the screenwriters branch when negotiations reopen with the major film studios this fall.

Scripters will press for a one and one-half shiding scale percentage of participation in pay-ty coin from currently produced pix. Frank Nugent, prexy of the screenwriters branch, cxplained the move this way: "We're willing to make a concession for a concession, We're willing to go along on a participation basis rather than ask for money. The spiralling costs of today must stop somewhere."

At last week's WGAW meeting, Nugent as chairman of the negotiating committee, and Karl Tunberg, head of the pay-tv committee, disclosed it has classified theatrical films in three categories insofar as pay tv is concerned:

(1) All theatrical pix produced before Sept. 2 of this year (the date of the Bartlesville, Okla., experiment, which is designated as the beginning of pay-tv).

(2) All theatrical pix produced after Sept. 2 for both theatrfal and pay-tv.

The literati set is convinced that the Confidential mag influence is having its effect, subtly or forthrightly, on the more recent autobiographies in such distinguished American periodicals as the Saturday Evening Post. This has particular reference to the currently serializing George Raft memoirs (as told to Dean Jennings) which is pretty frank stuff, and makes the writing-publishing aficianados wonder if, in the pre-Confidential climate, the Satevepost would have "dared" run such a revealing serial. The Bill Davidson closeup on Frank Sinatra, in Look, is cited as another sample of a slick mag's spade-calling treatment. Incidentally, the crooner is suing the periodical and author for alleged libelous statements on this one.

Belgians See 1958 World Festival Glorifying Enthusiasm of Those Who Feed Film Art 'Obscurely'

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

Completed, organizational plan for the 1958 World Film Festival in connection with the Brussels Universal & International Exhibition is revealed by Didier de Wouters, press attache of the Commissariat General. There will be a Grand Prix for (1) full-length and (2) short-length "experimental".

Grand Prix for (1) full-length and (2) short-length "experimental" films.

All of the 46 participating countries in the Exposition proper are invited to compete in the Festival on a limitation proviso based on annual national production volume. Countries making over 100 features annually may submit two films, those under that total, only one offhe cutoff figure for shorts, nation for nation, is more than, or less than, 200 shorts produced annually. Films to be eligible may have been exhibited previously in the country of origin but not in other European countries and all submissions must reach the Brussels organizing committee by May 10, 1958. Pictures may be in any established dimension or medium, but Belgium will not provide facilities for unspooling in systems other than those known to be needed by next April at the latest.

Wouters discloses that there will be separate juries for "longies" and "shorties" and that Brussels will follow the political neutrality characteristic of European Films Festivals of recent years: to wit, no film will be accepted which pives offense to national feelings. In short, neither pro-propaganda or anti-propaganda is acceptable.

Belgium will provide insurance for negatives while in its possession, but transportation and protection responsibility otherwise rests with producers.

Organized by the Belgian Film Library Gacques Ledoux curator the "difficult to define" experimental film "may embrace every wind of mood and treatment—sometimes poetical and lyrical, sometimes anecdotal or documentary, occasionally satiric, often abstract."

Belgium's goal is to make this the biggest festival of its nature ever held, a super-version of the art film festivals held each spring in Manhattan. To quote the Belgian view, the experimental film "operates nearly always on the fringe of commercial production" and is, by common observation, "often the work of independent, isolated people endowed with much enthusiasm but meagre financial resources." From the efforts of such often obscure and unrecognized workers comes, the Brussels auspices argue, great contributions to the art and technique of picture making. Hence, its importance to a world's fair such as will be held in their capital next spring, summer and fall.

has some executives in distribution worried. They fear that, by jumping on the roadshow bandwagon indiscriminately and with less-than-true-epic product, the companies may well kill the goose that laid the golden egg.

"There's never been anything in this industry that one fellow has done, and that was successful because there was a reason for it, that a hundred other guys haven't tried to copy. I don't know whether thats' typical of our industry, but there it is," complained one distribution head.

The trend towards roadshows is going to become pronounced towards the late fall and early winter. That's when some of the year's blockbusters are going to be unveiled. While several will go on a two-a-day basis, others will simply follow the raised prices, pre-release routine (like "Giant"). Aim is to create the aura of "something special" that can and will attract audiences. Pattern has been laid down by "The Ten Commandments" and "Around the World in 80 Days."

"Raintree County" is one of the biggest and costliest (estimated at $5,000,000) productions from Metrosince its release of David O. Selznick's "Gone With the Wind." Cued by the lavishness, Metro plans call for roadshowing (as currently at the Brown Theatre, Louisville), and this suggests, immediately, an aura of importance. Cast is a strong one: Elizabeth Taylor, Montgomery Clift, Eva Marie Saint and Nigel Patrick, although not uniformly well handled. Spectacular color photography by Robert Surtees, is a real plus. There's a reunion after the war as Clift discovers his son in Atlanta, which encounter leads to his finding Miss Taylor who is now in an asylum. The subsequent development, basically is logical. Miss Taylor regains soundness of mind for a period, then again cracks up, and in desperate search for the raintree (which, indeed, actually exists) she drowns. It is in pursuit of her that Miss Saint, still in love with Clift, and the latter come upon the tree.

While the production is of epic proportions, the marathon running time of more than three hours is questionable. It's a big picture in terms of pictorial size but the story doesn't always match the scope of the production. Chief story fault lies in its vagueness—the not truly specified motivations of the principals and in the conflicts involved in Clift's search for happiness alternately with Miss Saint and Miss Taylor.

Locale of the Leo Lieberman screenplay is a run-down nitery on an ocean pler operated in conjunction with a carnival. Boss-man is David J. Stewart, middle-aged former burlesque comic. He's hopelessly in love with Susan Cabot, singer at the spot, but she's in love with Brian Hutton, a gambler. Later subsequently cuts high cards with Stewart and wins his club, Stewart, however, just to be near Miss Cabot, stays on as a burlesque tramp comedian in the rock 'Ir roll show. At the wind-up, when Miss Cabot and Hutton marry, Stewart is fired and goes off to seek a new life.

Film has a couple of very good performances in Susan Cabot and Dick Miller, latter as Stewart's aide at the club. Miss Cabot also effectively puts over several song numbers. Brian Hutton does a commendable job with the male lead. In pivotal role, however, Stewart often goes far overboard in his portrayal. The okay musical break-ins come via The Platters, David Houston, Bob Luman, The Shadows and The Blockbusters, Roger Corman did an okay job as producer, and, for the most part, as director.

Richard H. Bartlett in his direction of the Montgomery Pittman screenplay manages a light touch which spells audience interest. For Mahoney, part is a change of pace which he nevertheless handles expertly, and he capably warbles three songs. Miss Adams, though poorly photographed at times, sympathetically punches over her role. One of the outstanding bits of biz in picture is when she socks Joanna Moore, a sex-pot whom Mahoney is romancing, with a round house right in the eye, good for a belly laugh. Miss Moore, a looker, comes through in fine fashion, and young Tim makes the most of every moment.

Bill Williams and Barbara Hale are in for added value for in their characters of a Hollywood couple of many years. Their footage is brief, more on the guest side. William Hopper as a director and Ben Johnson as a stunt man make their work count. Walter Reed is persuasive, too, a studio boss.

Technical credits stack up okay, leading off with Ellis W. Carter's camera work iminus a few shots of femme star). On plus side, too, are art direction by Alexander Golitzen and Eric Orbom, editing by Fred MacDowell, music by Writ.

Reportedly, producer Sam Katz-man kept this project on the shelf a couple of years, because of threats from certain sinister underunreats from certain sinister under-tworld figures. If true, it's hard to see why, since this mild, routine melodrama couldn't step on any-one's toes. It isn't likely to raise a storm at the ticket counter either. Screenplay by Lou Morheim is based on real-life incidents in Tijuana, including the assassination of crusading newspaperman Manuel Acosfa Mesa. Mexican actor Rodolfo Acosta portrays Acosta Mesa, who falls victim here to the machinations of a vice-narcotics ring led by heavy Paul Newlan. However, the editor's fiery writing, arouses the citizenry and his astute digging turns up the names of the corrupt officials and businessmen in the ring. His son, played by Robert Blake, carries on the cleanup campaign successfully after his father's assassination (although there are certain informed quarters who remain rather doubtful about the real-life efficacy of the clean-up).

There's a few side-issues, includabout the real-life efficacy of the clean-up).

There's a few side-issues, including a tragic love affair between Joy Stoner, as the editor's secretary, and Yankee, James Darren, a vicitim of the ring; and soul-searching of Gringo Robert McQueeney, who finds hinself the more-or-less innocent front of the vicious gang. However, both these tangents are of minor importance and add little to the proceedings.

Production values and direction of Leslie Kardos rarely rise above the level of routinely competent, and more often show the evidence of a short budget and a hurried shooting schedule. Local newsman Paul Coates, who wrote a series of expose columns about Tijuana, introduces the picture and narrates a couple of plot points therein. His contribution isn't very significant, one way of another.

"Acosta's fine performance is east.

One of best Italian productions of the year, this pic looks headed for a good boxoffice future both In this country, probably repeating as a crowd-pleaser abroad as well. The "Dreams" are those of a young couple, both students in a North Italian University, who fall in love and marry against better advice. Both are hoping for a brilliant future, both soon reconciling themselves to a happy if brief spell of married life together. While giving birth to their first child, the bride dies, leaving the boy to take up life once more with a new, maturer, lonelier outlook, but with great gratitude for the optimistic, ever-childish girl he married. While the script sometimes falters and often repeats itself, Renato Castellani's penmanship shows in a brilliantly dialogued screenplay and a generally rapid pace in which speedy dissolves play an important dramatic land comic) part.

Despite the downbeat ending, the film js extremely amusing in its chronicling of romance and early married life of the couple. (Another ending, in which bride does not die was shot before the current one was adopted). Lea Massari, under Castellani's painstaking direction, plays her part in high key in keeping with her screen character, while Enrico Pagani, as the boy, is somewhat in the shadows, though giving an okay reading in his first screen role. Feature, effectively filmed in Technicolor and with VistaVision adding to pictorial values, is a four-way effort for Wilde, who also directs and co-scripts with James Edmiston. Narrative leading up the racing sequences is confusing, and often dull as it rests on a retired former racing champ who is goaded into a return to the wheel. Characters never ring quite true although entire cast trees hard, and Wilde's direction does little to hurdle in the fault. In Jean Wallace as a Martini-swilling his work out the film shows good, Paul Fix lends credence to a mechanic part and Ross Bagdarsian makes the most of a pianoplaying role.

There are shades of the "Postman Always Rings Twice" in this slick melodrama. An itherent artist saves a drunk and takes him home with him, eventually making him his chauffeur. Artist is ruined financially and commits suicide. Then the wife enlist's the bewildered hero's aid to disguise it as a crime. All because the husband said he had cut out the suicide clause from his insurance policy. Familiar bundle of suspense appears to limit this for art houses in the U.S. The telegraphed development may hurt some, but it should have a better fate than some dualers since its theme and some exploitable macabre bits may help. Some twists, franil love scenes and dialogue bolster its Stateside chances. Daniel Gelin adds some weight, too, as the quizzical re-converted chauffeur who goes along with the machinations of the widow, coldly played by Michele Mercier).

HOW 'BRITISH' YA GOTTA BE?

Public, Unheard-From, Big Partner In Common Market-Sez Gordon Knight

"For that matter," said Knight, "foreign producers right now can send in all the pictures they want into Britain. They can import thousands of them. The only restriction is the British quota, which forces the theatres to play a certain percentage of British-made films."

Loew's Must Pay For Proxy Quest By Tomlinson

It will open its regular run on Thursday.

Loew's: Tomlinson Has His Facts Cut on a Bias

Affidavits of Joseph Tomlinson filed with the Federal District Court in Delaware in an effort to have the proxies of Loew's prexy Joseph R. Vogel invalidated were described as "inaccurate and distorted" in a reply by Loew's.

described as "inaccurate and distorted" in a reply by Loew's.
Loew's answer contained affidavits from John L. Hennessy, partner in Arthur Anderson & Co., Loew's accounting firm; Robert H. O'Brien, financial v.p., Vogel and directors George Killion, William A. Parker and John L. Sullivan. Hennessy, declared that the firm's survey of Loew's resulted in a clean bill of health as far as integrity as a corporation was concerned. Outsider's basic suggestions concerned only modernization of

He denied Tomilinson's statement that Loew's was in a bad cash condition. He noted that Tomilinson's figures omitted many millions of dollars which are available to Loew's from various divisions of the company.

linson's figures omitted many milions of dollars which are available to Loew's from various divisions of the company.

O'Brien, in his affidavit, charged Tomlinson with distorting the recommendations made in the Booz, Allen & Hamilton report. He stated emphatically that there was no foundation in the charge of corporate ineffciency. O'Brien maintained that "Gone With the Wind" has provided 10.7% of Loew's profits during the last 10 years and not 50% as stated by Tomlinson. Tomlinson, O'Brien asserted, has represented Booz, Allen as predicting a monthly loss of $1,000,000, but that Tomlinson had omitted the important phrase "if Loew's management had not taken positive action for improvement. Loew's financial vp. pointed out that the losses were "hypothetical" ones and were based on the release of only 20 pictures. Actually, he emphasized, the company made $4 pictures in addition to releasing 11 from outside producers. O'Brien said further that a corporate-wide system of budget and cost control is well along toward organization with the unqualified support of Vogel. He noted further that Vogel was not responsible for conditions which resulted from decisions made before he became president of Loew's. He stressed, however, that Vogel was responsible for the progress that has been made to-tward correcting and improving such conditions and for launching the application of sound budgeting, reporting, accounting and cost control techniques. Wilmington, Oct. 8.

Joseph Tomlinson faction in the battle for control of Loew's won a point in its flight to unseat the present management when Chancellor Collins J. Seitz following a hearing in the Gourt of Chancery ruled that it can bill Loew's for expenses incurred in soliciting proxies for the special stockholders meeting set for Oct. 15.

The decision gives the Tomlinson group the right to ask for the corporation to pay for proxies it will solicit in an effort to keep Joseph Vogel, Loew's president, from ousting Tomlinson and Stanley Meyer from the board of directors.

The ruling granted a motion by Tomlinson which was, in the chancellor's words, "nothing more or less than the 'other side' of the problem presented by the determination of the right of the Vogel group to spend corporation money proxy solicitation."

Tomlinson had moved to intervene as a party plaintiff in the suit of Ralph B. Campbell against Loew's management. Campbell, described as an associate of Tomlinson, has asked the U. S. District Court here to stop the use of approximately 2,700,000 proxies at the Oct, 15 meeting on the basis that they were obtained under "false and misleading statements" in a letter sent out by Vogel Aug. 9. Hearing on this request will be held in the district court Oct. 10 at 10:30 a.m.

NEW FILM LAW TO RE-DEFINE

Possible re-definition of what properly constitutes a "British picture" will be studied by Britain's Board of Trade as part of its preparation for the 1960 Films Act, Gordon Knight, assistant secretary to the Board, reported in Gotham last week.

Knight said that, in his opinion last week.

Knight said that, in his opinion, this is the key point around which debate will center. Board is beginning to solicit industry opinions this fall, and the Films Act legisiation should be presented to Parliament late in 1958.

Current definition of what is a British film was arrived at some time ago and took into consideration the desire of British producers to ayall themselves of international talent. Knight said. He added that great care would be taken in coming up with any redefinition, inasmuch as—inevitably—it would have an effect on British producers as well as on the Americans.

Tied in with this question, of course, is the allocation of the Eady coin. There have been powerful pressures in London, seeking to draw a distinction between "pure," or wholly nature, British films and those made by the Americans in London.

Knight acknowledged that, sometimes the definition of "Ritish" or wholly hattre, British films and those made by the Americans in London.

Knight acknowledged that, sometimes, the definition of "British" film was a little precarious, and he cited an instance recently where a picture had an American producer, American director and writer, and two American stars, but had some studio work done in London and subsequently claimed British quota.

All factions of the British trade, including the Americans, will be asked to submit their views to the Board of Trade re the upcoming Films Act, which will be passed in 1959 and adopted in 1960.

Knight, who has been travelling coming Films Act, which will be passed in 1959. and adopted in 1960.

Knight, who has been travelling all over the world but never had been to the U. S. before, stressed the importance of British film advances in the American market. "It's not only that we need the dollars," he said, "but, also, it makes our job in London so much more easy if there is a two-way, street. The lack of British film success in the U. S. is always a very potent argument for those who want to restrict the Americans in Britain." Quite apart from that, he held, the exchange of films was important as a link of friendship and understading.

Knight acknowledged that the considerable American production activity in Britain had retained the status quo re remittances, etc., at the recent Washington confabs where the Anglo-American films agreement was extended for a year. At the same time, he said, he did not believe that, even had Britain insisted on a reduction in dollar transfers, that this would necessarily have meant a reduction in American production activity in England.

British Product Bettered, Dates In Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Oct. 8. Minneapolis, Oct. 8.

British films, with a few Alec Guiness and other exceptions, ordinarily have had to be content here with uptown neighborhood first-runs, mostly in the "fine arts" houses. But the product situation (or Rank's new salesmanship) is such that now they're getting playdate, breaks downtown.

The State, a leading Paramount downtown first-run theatre, for example, has dug back to a J. Arthur Rank June release, "Reach for the Sky," for its attraction starting Thursday (10), while another British picture, "The Green Man," distributed by DCA and also a June release, is the World offering.

Exhibitors here are greatly worried over the present scarcity of important releases. They say it's one of the slimmest periods yet to be encountered and they point to the loop boxoffice sag at the very time, the start of the fall-winter season, when grosses should be climbing.

With so few major entries arriving downwtown now, subsequent-run neighborhood theatreowners, requiring two or more changes a week, foresee in the months, ahead such a famine of boxoffice product that will present one of the most difficult of their many serious operating problems.

In Minneapolis "Commandments" had a 13-week territory exclusive downtown first-run here as a $2.25 top hard-ticket attraction. But in St. Paul more than a month later the policy was continuous with a slightly lower admission than here and no reserved seats.

Article by Robert Walker (staff by-line) points out that a financially-successful feature has never been made in Canada. The commercial firms cannot afford the money risk and the National Film Board won't run the political risk of full-length story-telling.

Recent costly move of the Board's production facilities from Ottawa to Montreal is called a $1,000,000 miscalculation. To be nearer "falent" sources in Montreal was a spurious argument because nearly all Board documentaries use amateurs. Also the claimed benefit of proximity to the Canadian Broadcasting Co. plant breaks down because the new film plant is five miles out of central Montreal in an industrial suburb. Worst of all the new film plant is right next to a jet-testing airport and in an area of heavy trucking.

Although the Government's filing have won prizes all over the world and are rated technically first rate, Liberty article argues that the Government operation is open to suspicion as turning out shorts which are "propaganda" for the party in power. There are Canadians with an abstract objection to the Dominion government dominating communications mediaboth broadcasting and screen.

Magazine points to a number of horrible examples of NFB "goofs." One was a 10-minute short taking three years to produce. Title: "How To Build An Igloo." Another was "Horizons de Quebec," costing $45,000, which had to be junked because two English-speaking employes dealing with the always-sensitive French Canadiens had been "condescending"—a sin Quebec only slightly less onerous than birth control.

Also detailed in the Liberty article is the campaign of a French charges the NFB with purging French-speaking employes and maintaining "an oppressive atmosphere" for the Quebecois.

Local first-runs are off sharply this week despite five situations eyeing slightly better trade than a week ago. "Joker Is Wild" is showing the greatest strength among the regular engagements, looking to a sturdy $21,000 in scoond frame at three houses plus one nabe and seven ozoners which should bring total to okay $60,000. Six openers lack strength being paced by "40 Guns" for mild $17,500 in four houses. EVALUATE 92 NEW IMPORTED FILMS: LIVELY ENTERTAINMENT, FEW CLICKS

Fact, unpleasant though it may be, is that the number of really outstanding imports has diminished within recent years, European quality has gone down quite considerably and "art" audiences are more selective than ever. All of these factors combine to make the foreign film importing and distributing biz more risky than ever.

A Varenty check of 12 indie dis-uting biz more risky than ever.

A VARIETY check of 12 indie distributors shows they are offering a total of 92 new films for the season ahead. Figure is apt to fluctuate as additional pix unquestionably will be acquired as the year progresses. Also, the total does not include the large number of Mexican. German, Italian and Japanese pictures that go to specialized foreign language houses via certain distributors like Azteca, Casino Film Exchange, Grand Prize, etc. Prize, etc.

Prize, etc.

With the Italians once topping the field the French today are leading the race among the various foreign language imports. The dozen distributors polled have set 32 French features for release during the coming year. Figure includes one or two French films that have played New York but are yet to get field bookings.

Out of the 92, the British count for 36, of which at least 20 in turn will come from Rank Film Distributors of America. Apart from Rank, fully 16 British features have been set by the indies, and to these must really be added the British pictures being released by the major companies, such as Warner Bros. and Columbia.

Only nine Italian films have been announced. In addition there are four German films, four from Swefour German hims, four 1rom Swe-den, two from Japan, two Span-ish, and one each from Greece, India and Mexico. The German total may well rise before the year is out. One or two German films already are in prospect, but aren't included in the total since no distribution has definitely been

Foreign film distribution biz Foreign film distribution biz, though being constantly pushed, has its troubles getting into the big league. Even dubbing, though now widely tried, hasn't necessarily helped some of the pictures make the grade. Since "Dibolique" and "Riffi," both from the Richard Davis stable, only "La Strada" (in both dubbed and original version) has really made it into the bigtime. According to the indies, while

According to the indies, while the potential is there, it's still much of an uphill battle to get foreign pix played off and their potential scope is strictly limited. The exceptions, say the distribs, merely prove the rule.

Following are some of the top contenders for b.o. honors in the foreign film sweepstakes:

France—"Gervaise," "God Created Woman," "Rouge et Noir," "Four Bags Full," "Mitsou" and
"Grand Rue."

Italy — "Of Lime and Love,"
"Guendalina," "Nights of Cabirta," "Calabuche" and "Wife for a

Too Much 'Forcing' of Art Films?

Boston's Cy Harvey Sees Some Traces Growing of Delusions Grandioso-Time Alone the Best Expansion Factor

Foreign film business in the United States suffers from "big" thinking, says Cy Harvey, partner with B. Haliday in Janus Films and just recently returned from a lengthy European trek.

Harvey, who with Haliday owns the Brattle Theatre in Boston area, said he was extremely disappointing by the kind of films he saw in Europe. "It's not been good for this season, but it'll be a lot worse for next year," he commented.

He explained that European producers were cutting costs and, in their low-budget pix, were using local radio and other stars to give the films an even chance to recoup locally. "Sometimes these pictures outgross the ones with the conventional stars," said Harvey, "but they of course have no value at all for us here in the States."

Harvey opined that too many of the U.S. indies handling imports were trying to make the business into something which, by its very nature, it can't be. "This is a limited field," he emphasized. "Artificially expanding it, and pushing it, won't help. There is no use pretending that American exhibitors are just waiting for foreign films. They aren't. Except for a couple of top pictures, the rest actually get very small circulation, let's face it!"

Except for a couple of top pictures, the rest actually get very small circulation, let's face it!"

Harvey said he favored "natural" expansion, which was a matter of time, and noted that his own Janus outfit wasn't in any hurry to enter the "bidding" race for the top overseas product. "We aren't that prestige hungry," he said. "We don't insist on wide distribution with a tremendous overhead, But, we can also point to the fact that we don't have a single picture in the red."

Janus is releasing the Swedish "The Summer Wind Blows" and has picked up the Spanish "Death of a Cyclist" and the French "The Heroes are Tired." It's closing a deal for another French film.

Janus' policy is to stay away from the top-rated Continental films and, instead, to concentrate on the smaller European pictures which the rest of the distribution setup with product; come what may," and said his answer was in the careful handling of fewer films, with the lowest possible overhead.

In sum and substance, Harvey argued that the big findies, with their own offices all over the country, have grown beyond the safe economic scope of the foreign film and now have become prisoners of their own bigness.

Financed by Yank Coin, West Berlin's $5,000,000 Congress Hall Opens With U.S. Talent Lineup in Varied 'Arts' Bill

INTERNATIONAL

Berlin, Oct. 8.

Congress Hall, intended to be a public discussion auditorium, Yankee-style, has opened here in West Berlin on the perimeter of Communist Germany. Costing some $5,000,000, the highly modernistic edifice which has been described by Berliners as two open oysters joined together, is the pet project of Eleanor Dulles, sister of John Foster Dulles, the U.S. Secretary of State. The money was provided via a so-called Benjamin Franklin Foundation, established for this purpose in the States.

This was the setting under which the N.Y. legit manager, Gertrude Macy dong with Katharine Cornell), staged the inaugural week's entertainment events. These were selected to bring a varied "arts" tone to the occasion, despite the basic political debate purpose of the hall. American funds (State Dept.) subsidized the visits here of a variety of U.S. talents, including Lilllan Gish, Eile en Farrell, Martha Graham, Hiram Sherman, the Julliard Quartet and Virgil Thomson.

Congress Hall debut coincided with and overlapped Berlin's own annual 'fall Arts Festival. Mrs. Virginia Inness-Brown, head of the New York City local chapter of the American National Theatre & Academy, has been here as State Dept. delegate.

Undoubtedly, the loudest applause went to French avantgardist Maurice Bejart and his troupe from Paris. Bejart had feared that the stage of the 400-seat theatre in Congress Hall was too small. It was so small he had to skip nearly all decors. Nevertheless, it turned out to be a big success for this ballet ensemble. The whole thing, admittedly interesting in parts, bordered often on the banal if not silly. Result was that part of the audience turned yawns into catcalls and gave out with loud opinions. Objection was found also with the jazzy music by Hans Werner Henze who seemingly never fails to raise a rumpus. However, there were also lots of bravoes, particularly Babilee. Reviews were more on for the graceful Frenchman Jean the negative side for the entire production, However, some wrote that every experiment deserves appreciation.

Arg. Exhibs Ask B.O. Tax Repeal

Buenos Aires, Oct. 1.

The Federation of Argentine Exhibitors, which represents the eight associations banding together exhibitors throughout the country, has submitted a note to the Provisional Government, recommending repeal or temporary suspension of the 15% boxoffice tax decreed last Aug. 1, and designed to provide funds for national school building. The exhibitors' note underlines the fact that cinema admissions have been frozen since April of 1953 and a deaf ear has been turned to all pleas that prices be increased to a level consistent with rising costs. Nevertheless, this 15% tax was applied.

Combined with the Screen Institute's 10% tax for promotion of local production, a total increase in admissions of 25% has been imposed on the public this year. To these must be added other national, municipal and provincial taxes, which must inevitably force down attendance figures.

Exhibs also point out that in general the net admission must be shaded 50% with distributors of the films, leaving them a net insufficient in most cases to cover all routine costs of exhibition. Then there are other taxes which the exhibitor pays and not the spectator. The Federation of Argentine Ex-tor.

Part of the note stresses that exhibitor pays and not the spectator.

Part of the note stresses that through a progressive stage of taxation, film theatres are being converted into tax-collection agencies for the government, from which third parties benefit, and quite in opposition to the policy hitherto vaunted of insuring cheap entertainment for the population.

The note is couched in terms adopted lately by other business and enterprise when the government has asked for assistance in combating a gerenal rise in the cost of living. Businessmen have been frank in pointing out that the government alone is to blame, through adoption of mistaken policies and measures at the instance of demagogic political advisers and inexperienced ministers.

It is understood in production circles that the National Screen Institute has been negotiating with the Industrial Credit Bank for the purchase of the old Emico studios at Martinez. Proceeds of the 10% National Screen Institute tax on cinema boxoffice would be used to produce Argentine films there. Some of the proceeds also may be used to subsidize the three native newsreel producers who are unable to make both ends meet.

Johannesburg, Oct. 1.

Theatre business in Johannesburg is booming. Brooke Theatre, built two years ago for actor-manager Brian Brooke, has just broken all South African records with "The Boy Friend," being the longest run of any show at one theatre in this country. Author Sandy Wilson, imported from London to produce his money-spinner, proved with his polished staging that given the right entertainment, audiences here can sustain a show long enough to make it profitable. When the season ends the middle of this month, "Boy Friend" goes off on a sixmonth tour of the Union and the Rhodesias. Another record set here was to make the first time a show in South Africa has provided actors with over a year's continuous employment actors with over a year's continu-ous employment.

Independent producer Taubie Kushlick moves into the Brooke after "Friend" closes to stage John Osborne's "Look Back In Anger," just given N. Y. preem, the same month. Actor Alan Dobie, who took over the role of Jimmy Porter from Kenneth Haigh at London's Royal Court Theatre, is starred. Supporting east is culled from local artists. Forthcoming shows at the Brooke include Hugh Williams' "Plaintiff In A Pretty Hat," starring Leo Genn, and the British musical success, "Grab Me A Gondola."

ring Leo Genn, and the British musical success, "Grab Me A Gondola."

At the Rep Theatre, London actress Sonia Dresdel stars in the Hugh Mills thriller, "The House By The Lake." Home again after a European search for plays, producer Leonard Schach has scheduled a Cape Town opening of "Look Back In Anger" at the Hofmeyr Theatre in November. Johannesburg excepted, Schach holds all South African and African Federation rights for this play, which will tour following the Cape season.

In December, Schach transfers to Johannesburg to stage "Summer Of The 17th Doll," presented in association with National Theatre Organization at the Rep Theatre, with Marjorie Gordon in the feminine lead. Miss Gordon comes to "The Doll" straight from "Dial M" For Mirth," an intimate revue at the Library. This rapid leaping from role to role is characteristic of Johannesburg's expanding entertainment scene, where there are currently more plans for new productions than theatres in which to house them.

A revue production on a larger scale is booked in at-His Majesty's Theatre in October when British comedian Tommy Trinder opens in "You Lucky People," presented by George and Alfred Black in collaboration with African Consolidated Theatres. Among the acts supporting Trinder are Shirley Burniston and Harry Morney, Parisienne singer Odette Crystal the Lentini Brothers and the Tanner Sisters.

African Theatres (now controlled by 20th-Fox) will present Broadway's "Pajama Game" for Christmas, with some U.S. principals to add zest to the South African Scene.

French Legit Season Starts Slowly; 'Golddigger' Shapes 1st Real Hit

Paris, Oct. 1.

New legiters are pouring in as theatres get their entries started in an effort to cash in on the biz that stems from the Auto Salon in October. Second batch is then siphoned in for the Christmas season. New group aims mostly for "boulevard" audiences. These are some which look in for good runs, but only one seems of top hit calibre so far.

This first real hit is the one up by Jacques Deval, It is his. "La Pretentaine" (The Golddigger) at Theatre Ambassadeurs-Henri Bernstein, Stereotyped but glib and racy, this pokes fun at obvious U.S. types as a Frenchman and Frenchwoman head for America to find rich mates. Both lose their rich prey and the French pair falls in love, deciding to go back to Paris where the Yanks spend their money anyway.

in love, deciding to go back to Paris where the Yanks spend their money anyway.

It has enough clever lines to overcome the conventional plotting and familiar satire. This is the kind of light fare which will get a following here. For the U.S., it looks too slight and too Gallic for Broadway. It is neatly acted and well mounted.

Alfred Adam's "La Terre Est Basse" (The Earth is Low) pulled into the Theatre La Bruyere for what appears like a short stay. Play is about a chronically lazy man who becomes the confidant of a dynamic businessman. He legs the man when biz fails. But when he realizes that he might have to go to work, when the executive type is again going to the top, he prefers to take a prison rap for him, Idea is okay but never fully realizes its possibilities, long talky strethes hurting its chances.

Theatre Antoine has "Le Coeur Volant" of Claude-Andre Puget. This is about the "fillibustiers," legal pirates in the 17th Century. It mainly concerns a captain who returns to marry his intended. But the law of the milieu has the buddy system allowing the friend to spend the first night with the bride. As a play, this lacks the swashbucking element, and is somewhat slow. This is of little interest for Broadway but seems to have screen posway but seems to have screen pos-sibilities. Locally it has enough to make it probable for a good run. Word-of-mouth should help, but crix were lukewarm here.

FRENCH RAPS RUSH TO START NEW FILM FUND

START NEW FILM FUND

It was a "risky thing" for the statutory levy to start operating on Oct. 20; when there was a vital doubt existing in the interpretation of regulations governing its distribution, said Sir Henry L. French, president of the British Film Producers Assn. He was speaking at a press confab about the clause which bars pictures from the benefits of the British Film Fund in certain circumstances when excerpts from them are screened on tv in this country. The clause in regulations states that a film, which is exhibited to the public on tv, other than as an excerpt lasting not more than five minutes, will be precluded from the benefits of the Eady levy.

In effect, if a film is screened for five minutes as an excerpt and at a later date aired again as an excerpt, it could technically mean that it was no longer entitled to payment from the fund. Sir Henry said that in its present-form the clause was not clear enough to decide whether a producer, who had no intention of turbing his picture.

French Drama Is Crimped Badly By Old Ways

Paris, Oct. 8.
Legit producer actor director Jean Mercure has just published, in the highbrow weekly Arts, the results of a study he had made on the poor state of theatregoing in France today. This public opinion survey was underwritten by private funds and has turned up some interesting facts on France's perennial legits "crisis."
France has more legit houses.

funds and has turned up some interesting facts on France's perennial legits "crisis."

France has more legit houses than any other important center and averages about 160° plays per year. Rising costs have made amortization difficult and Mercure felt his study was therefore necessary to make some recommendations to improve conditions as a new legit season gets under way. Report states that 60% of the Parisian population do not go to the theatre and among these most are between the ages of 18 to 24. Thus youth seems to have left the theatre to the oldtimers. Those that do go frequent the state subsidized Theatre National Populaire and the Comedie-Francaise. These thave mainly classics, so it looks like the younger set has dropped the living contemporary theatre to a great extent.

Some reasons given for this are the poor system of ticket sales, with boxoffices closing just when workers complete their labors, plus the high prices which sometimes makes it difficult eyen for the medium-salaried workers. Traffic congestion has also led to less theatregoing.

Some solutions suggested have been a free telephone ticket service to be paid for hy the theatres, and a card for reduced tariffs for different social and wage groups allowing them at least six attendances per at special rates.

Royal Albert Hall Goes 'Professional': Has Okav For Sunday Costumes

London, Oct. 8.

The Royal Albert Hall is entering showbly management for the first time in its history. The corporation is tying up with impresario Victor Hochhauser to present the Soviet Cossack company for a two weeks' season next February. If the 100 dancers of the company are the colorful draw that is anticipated it will certainly lead to further managerial projects by the corporation. Because of a clause in the Royal Albert Hall charter the Soviet dancers will be free to use markeup and wear their costumes at Sunday shows. This is banned on Sundays at all other London theatres and coheert halls.

Italian Press Divided. Like British, on Merits Of Chaplin's New Pic

Ut Linghin's New Fic Rome, Oct. 1.

First reactions to the Ischia preem (for Continental Europe) of Chaplin's "A King in New York" essentially mirror the British pressions of a few weeks agosome raves, several thumbs-down opinions. The accent was on the political slant of the film's second half. While some of the local press avoided comment entirely, others carried lengthy reports about the Ischia opening, Chaplin's arrival and personal views and feelings, and about the pic itself.

Most raves came from the left-and about the pic itself.

Most raves came from the leftwing elements. Others deplored the comedian's new bitterness, especially in the scenes coming near the end, when they claim he switches to pamphleteering. One observer felt the pic had a "feeling of revenge" about it.

These scribes who test time out venge" about it.

Those scribes who took time out from political analyses of the pic noted that, generally, the pic disappointingly, lacked humor except in spots. Dawn Addams' performance in the pic was, however, unanimously praised, some citing it as "brilliant," and adding it to the long list of Chaplin "discoveries" in the field of young femme talent.

An elaborate affeir the ies" in the field of young remme talent.

An elaborate affair, the preem was staged on the Island of Ischia with Angelo Rizzoli (whose Cineriz Is releasing pic in Italy) acting as host. Several observers noted that many members of the governmental group of pic officials, which had heen present in Ischia (also hosted by Rizzoli) for three days previous to the Chaplin opening to discuss plans for the European Common Market, burriedly left the island only a few hours, before "King" was unveiled. Some see in this a pointed snub, others merely a diplomatic avoidance of what might have been viewed as official Italo government (or industry) endorsement of the still-controversial film figure and his latest film.

Parisian Comedy Scores in Zurich

Zurich, Oct. 1.

Following a pre-seasonal limited engagement of the Munich Lore Bronner Co. with Swiss author Peter Buerki's comedy "Dreams in Paris," local legit house Theatre am Central has opened its regular 1957-58 season, with Karin Jacobsen's German adaptation of a Paris hit comedy, "La Maniere Forte," by Jacques Deval Play's offbeat title here is "Simone, the Lobster and the Oil Sardine." It is directed by Erwin Kohlund.

Swiss' preem of the "Tovarich" author's comedy, first performed two years ago in Paris with Robert Lamoureux and Genevieve Page, looks promising. It clicked here with both public and press. This is chiefly because of racy, steppedup direction and ideal casting of the femme lead via Hedda Ippen. She imparts slick acting as well as glamour to the role. Pero Aexander, from Munich, is properly suave as a playbby whereas Rainer Litten is miscast in the Lamoureux part, but makes the best of fit. Karl Wagner and Lisette Oesch contribute effective bits.

It is doubtful whether Theater am Central will finish the current ute effective bits.

It is doubtful whether Theater am Central will finish the current season as a legiter. It may have to switch to a picture policy, a move contemplated at the end of last season. This is because the financial burden is getting too heavy for this house which operates with out a subsidy.

Yanks Watch Progress Of Europe Film Pool For Combine Vs. U.S.

For Combine Vs. U.S.

Rome, Oct. 1.

Yank observers are watching results of the recent three-country Ischia conference (at which another step towards five Edropean Film Pool was announced, three nation co-productions) with interest, especially in view of possible sharpening of restrictions on U. S. product as a result of the new Continental setup.

According to the grapevine here, the question of actual cutting of screen quotas for U. S. films (or, in some countries, of their adoption) has been put off for the time being, perhaps even until next year. Another interesting note on the conference is the fact that the Germans, who have always been known as the more reductant members of the common market compifies this time conversated tulls. Germans, who have always been known as the more reluctant members of the common market committee, this time cooperated fully. At the time of the recent Venice Film Festival, there were persistent reports that the Germans would even boycott the Ischiameetings in protest over the non-acceptance of a German pic, "Robinson Soll Nicht Sterben," in the Venice competition. Same sources also indicate that the Germans will soon push for film aid legislation in their own country, in order to place themselves on an equal footing with France and Italy, both of which receive government aid. This step is felt a vital premise to further concrete establishment of the three-country pact.

Next meeting of the permanent committee has been scheduled for Hamburg, Nov. 25-27.

stances presents itself in other areas other moves in exhibition will be forthcoming.

Par was the first major producer-distributor to divorce from domestic theatres. The effective date was Jan, 1, 1950. That the corporation did take the lead was regarded as particular noteworthy because it had the greatest theatre holdings, with about 1,000 houses operated in partnership with local exhibs and over 400 others owned over 95%.

Par's decree in the industry an-titrust suit contained no language curust suit contained no language enjoining the film company from re-entering exhibition. Similarly, the new Par theatre company which was organized, United Paramount Theatres, was not barred from going into production, which it has done. it has done:

The RKO picture and theatre companies likewise have freedom to move. All other majors require Department of Justice and Federal Court approval, the first being Court approval, the first b tantamount to the other. Where Stand the Feds?

But to what extent can Par re-enter exhibition without incurring the wrath of indic exhibs? The point has significance for if enough point has significance for it enough upon the D. of J. the Feds would be in an embarrassing position. How come, it might be asked, Par is not restricted in the same manner that are Warners, 20th-Fox and Matrix? Metro?

And if the indies don't ask the question, perhaps WB, 20th and M-G will.

M-G will.

The District Court in N. Y. has retained jurisdiction in the industry legalistics. Meaning the case conceivably could be opened almost at any time by any of the parties. Exhibitors, including the major chains, have expressed themselves as agreeable to the idea of other exhibs going into production. But they haven't said anything yet about a major film company seguing back into exhibition.

In Westerns, As In Sex, Vive La Diff

Almost unconsciously, moily wood has picked up the tag line of an old joke to symbolize its neightened battle for the attention of the entertainment-minded public. The gag, of course, is the one about the backbencher who interrupts a learned French parliamentarian's discourse on the minor, but im-portant, difference between men and women.

"Vive la difference," he cried—and Hollywood is saying the same thing.

It's the difference that counts,

It's the difference that counts, producers contend.

The attitude is well expressed by Julian Blaustein, currently the man under the gun because he is readying release of a $1,750,000 seceptush saga at a time when the secentish saga at a time when the television screen mirrors endless repetitions of the deadly walk down a dusty street and speakers vibrate with the clatter of hooves. Blaustein's film is titled simply "('owbo,'' At a quick glance, it would seem that the title represent exists is an experience of the control of the cont

"Cowbo," At a quick glance, it would seem that the title represents quick jeopardy in a market saturated with cowpokes of all sizes, shapes and schizophrenic qualities.
"There's a difference." Blaustein contends with vigor. "And it's the difference that will keep motion pictures flourishing despite television. It's scope and quality against a small screen and no real production values."

Not, the producer hastens to add, that he's knocking the rival medium. But he points out that television is limited economically by what can be spent on a half-hour or even an hour-tilm since the coin represents an outlay by a sponsor and not an investment against a possible return from the boxoffice. As a result, westerns in particular must have a familiar look on television and the theatrical film producer is therefore wise to take the ducer is therefore wise to take vision and the theatrical film producer is therefore wise to take the most possible advantage out of locations and natural assets to give his picture extra value.

The physical, look, however, is only part of the difference. The size of the screen is another important factor, particularly in terms of any kind of an action story. And, Blaustein points out, features can develop and present story points that television doesn't have time to offer.

"The average half-hour western," Blaustein believes, "generates appeal only after repeated viewing. The set characters become familiar and their actions understandable. It has to be that way because with only about 27 minutes in which to work, the writer has to get into the action q ick. Features on the other hand can take some time to develop the characters before getting into the q wa. Features of the other half can take some time to develop the characters before getting into the real action sequences. As a re-sult, the general story unfolds with more validity and with greater au-dience enjoyment."

Blaustein firmly believes that audience enjoyment."

Blaustein firmly believes that audience will see and recognize these differences. Consequently the big western will attract while "the runof-the-mill western, the programmer, may find it tough sledding in view of the preponderance of western fare on television."

Overall, however. Blaustein is convinced that television can help the well-made film more than it can hurt. Good western programming on television whets the appetite for more and longer stories of the same kind. And there's always the strong possibility that an audience previously not to interested in the outdoor type of film may be drawn to it by a succession of well-done short telefilm versions.

Who Needs Press Agents?

[AFTER THIS DeMILLE WHOPPER]

San Francisco, Oct. 8.

Burton W. Parker drove a 1957 auto from El-Paso, Tex., to Sacramento, Cal., arriving in Sacramento last Sept. 10. That night he went to see "The Ten Commandments."

Next day, driving south through the Frisco Bay area, he thought about the Cecil B. DeMille film and at San Jose, 60 miles south of Frisco, went up to a priceman.

In Federal court last Friday (4) Parker told Judge Oliver J. Carter: "I was mulling the picture over. I vowed to go straight from then on, and to turn myself in."

For the car Parker was driving didn't belong to him. He'd stolen it in El Paso, and, as it turned out, three times before had served prison terms for driving stolen cars across state lines.

Judge Carter took note of the voluntary surrender, and the film's apparent effect, but said: "I have a duty to society, and this is an extensive case of car theft."

Parker is now serving five years.

Columbia, very active in Mexican production (if distributes the successful Cantinflas pictures among others), decided earlier this year to handle this product on its own in the U. S. Plan is to have 24 films for release in the year ending next July. Gradually, this total will be increased. There are some 500 houses playing Mexican pix in this country. The annual gross delivered by them is estimated to be around $3,500,000. What appears to have happened is simply that Azteca to maintain its position in the market, told exhibitors that, if they played the Columbia films, their regular supply of Mexican product would be reduced or cut off. With Columbia offering only 24 films. such a threat is a potent one and, if carried out, would in effect force the theatres to close.

What Azteca reportedly has pro-posed is to let Columbia have a booking every seventh week, which would cut Col to 14 films (counting the double change). Columbi: has rejected any such notion on the theory that there should be free competition in the market. Columbia

According to those close to the Mex film field, the distribs have shled away from no method in their determination to dominate the market. Situation became confusing last year when Sam Seidelman set up a third Mexican film distribution outfit in New York. That' was at approximately the time that Azteca and Mohme were negotiating. Conclusion of the negotiations saw Seidelman moving over to become the Azteca head in New York and dissolving what many had called merely a "front" organization. Since then, Seidelman has departed from Azteca amidst considerable ill-feeling and charges of mismanagement.

Due to Mexican financing arrangements, many of the local Mex producers are bound by Cimex, i.e., their pix automatically go via that setup. Some producers have more freedom of action, but their number is comparatively small. Of all the foreign industries, the Mexicans achieved by far the biggest U. S. gross for their films in 1956.

When shooting was completed, only one minor line of dialog drew an objection and when it was removed, the Seal was granted.

However, Hartman pointed out, changing mores probably had as much to do with the green light for the film as did the changing regulations of the Production Code Administration.

Administration.

"In some quarters," Hartman admitted, "this is regarded as a dirty story. Actually, its' a highly moral one. There's an attraction between the son and the young wife, but it's a normal one and there's nothing suggestive about it. Then they have an affair and eventually she kills the baby. But they know they've committed a sin. No outside force is needed to achieve punishment. They go themselves to the sheriff."

The idea actually can be attributed to the playwright.

"In his treatment," Hartman revealed, "we discovered that he suggested that the girl be an immigrant, rather than a school-teacher. He felt it had greater dramatic value—and with this recommendation from O'Neill himself, the casting of Sophia Loren became plausible."

Production represents the culmination of a longtime ambition for Hartman. He has been engrossed in the drama since, as a young actor, he saw it in New York. When he became production head of Paramount a few years ago, he discovered it could be purchased for $5.000 down, with a maximum price of $75.000. He encouraged its purchase and kept on picking up options. petish, buried himself as a real thorn in the MPEA side in that he repped really both sides. He was sent by the State Dept., after a thorough briefing, and yet he's also one of Hollywood's top directors. Thus his status appears to have blanked out Baldwin, and Perlberg aoparently iddn't play a shrinking lily role in his dual capacity. It appears, from a distance, that Baldwin held his fire for fear of creating open friction in the American camp at the fest.

MPEA feels that much of the criticism revolving around the se-ican camp at the fest.

MPEA feels that much of the criticism revolving around the selection of the American entries at the various fests is unfair and reflects ignorance of true conditions. Fact is, says MPEA, that the choice of entries is greatly narrowed by a host of circumstances that have basically rothing to do with the event i'self. For one thing, the evanuaries nominate their own, films for MPEA to choose from. For another, the selection quite often depends on whether a given picture is ready, and whether it is convenient for the company to have it at the fest.

Under most fest rules, an entry can't have been released anywhere except in its country of origin. This in itself is an inhibiting factor, particularly now when American films frequently open abroad before they're even seen in the U. S. Latest evample would be "Bridge on the River Kwai," which preemed in London last week, but won't be seen at the Palace in N. Y. until just before Christmas.

MPEA exces have the whole question of fest selections under advisement, and they themselves make no bones about the fact that MPEA also isn't overly happy with the type of film it's been sending to the fests. Nevertheless, no drastic departure from current selection methods is expected.

One-Horse Burg (Louisville) Turns One-Picture Town for 'Raintree'

Wednesday, October 9, 1957

By GENE ARNEEL
Louisville, Oct. 8.
The records aren't clear as to when Hollywood started the junket but it goes so far back that sychoanalysis at the junket device would hardly be in order today. But consider the results—the causes and effects—and it's obvious why this method of drawing attention to a picture is important currently. That is, of course, if the picture is of sufficient stature to warrant a trip of a couple of thousand miles to see it. Otherwise, only resentment would be stirred.

A mention might be made up

it. Otherwise, only resentment would be stirred.

A mention might be made up front, too, of the possible dangers entailed. As every pressagent knows, if the traveling newsmen are subject to bothersome delays in getting from one point to another, if accommodations aren't suitable, if other inconveniences crop up, or the right kind of protocol isn't conformed to, well, fourth estaters are known to air their beefs via the line-o-type, and their beefs via the line-o-type, and the picture is the loser.

Metro, who perhaps wrote the junket book, had a party fiere in Louisville last week. And the "few chums" who participated, reporters and critics from New York, Los Angeles and Boston plus screen personalities, about 90 in all, found the machinery well oiled.

The junketeers were transported to the downtown business district to the downtown business district from the airport in 48 new cars and found the streets lined with local people three deep. This came after the skillfully maneuvered arrival, the debarkation from the two DC-47's being simultaneous and thus was avoided any awkwardness in the reception by the civic brass. Plane from Chicago had to circle the field about 20 minutes to accomplish this (the N.Y. flight was a little late). The burg's police were out in force to escort the motorcade and maintain order.

Fox Midwest Theatres closed its Omaha, Oct. 8.

Fox Midwest Theatres closed its Esquire Theatre at the close of business last Tuesday (1), leaving the circuit without a standard firstrun in Omaha's downtown loop for the first time in years. In recent weeks operation of the house had simply become too marginal to risk, and it was therefore shuttered, according to Leon Robertson, city manager.

An 820-seater next to the Tower Theatre, Esquire has had a spotty career over the past half dozen years, being opened and closed a score of times, playing top specials at one time, grinding actioners at others, and most recently being in the first run combination playing day and date with the middown Uptown, suburban Fairway and Kansas side Granada.

'Sunrise Semester,' TV's First 'Hit,' Gets 'Renewal,' Unprecedented Space

By BOB CHANDLER

First unquestioned hit show of the new television season has already gotten a "renewal." Show is the WCBS-TV, N. Y., "Comparative Literature 10." the college "Sunrise Semester" course aired 6:30 to 7 a.m. cross-the board in coopération with New York U., and the "renewal" is the decision by the school and station to televise "Comparative Literature 20" next February.

Program, despite for next are the second and the product in its promotions.

Program, despite for perhaps be-cause of) its early hour, has taken Gotham by storm, grabbing off more space both in the dailies and national mags than any other new national mags than any other new show this season and certainly any other local show in WCBS-TV history. Special rating has given it a 1.3 Trendex, which translates to 62,000 homes (WCBS-TV figures 124,000 viewers). At that, because the special Trendex covered urban areas and the show gets a heavy suburban audience, the station believes that the audience may be underestimated. The "Comparative Literature underestimated.

The "Comparative Literature 20" course's subject matter hasn't been decided yet, primarlly because N. Y. U. has never offered such a course and the demand for it was created by the success of the current series, dealing with the modern novel from Stendhalto Hemingway. Prof. Floyd Zulli, of the school's romance languages department, who's conducting the current course, will also do "Comparative Lit 20."

Press and magazine reaction, current course, will also do "Comparative Lit 20."

Press and magazine reaction, much of it pegged to the sellout of Stendhal's "The Red and the Black" and Balzac's "Pere Goriot" in all New York bookstores (and an unprecedented run on library coples), has been unprecedented in scope. On the national magazine side, both Time and Newsweek devoted their lead pieces in the radio-tv sections to the program. In preparation are pieces in Life, Glamour, the Saturday Review of Literature, the New Yorker, Readers Digest and Harper's. Aside from heavy local coverage, stories were carried by the AP national wire, Publisher's Weekly, and yarns are in the works for the Wall Street Journal, the Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald and Hearst's Pictorial Weekly supplement. Zullins made two Voice of America broadcasts, in German and French, while the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. did a story on the show.

7-Up's $300,000 For 'Dec. Airlift'

Chicago, Oct. 8.

Seven-Up, spreading its Yuletide cheer early as it has for the past two years, has scheduled a budget of $300.000 on four tv and five radio shows for its annual "December Alrifit." Idea is to saturate the airwaves in a concentrated period—one, incidentally, in which a lot of soda pop product is sold—hitting all age levels and segments of the family.

Through Jack Mosman, radio-tw director of J. Walter Thompson agency in Chicago, Seven-Up bought 12 quarter hours (36 commercial minutes) on ABC-TV's "American Bandstand," eight commercial minutes on NBC-TV's "Tonight," two participations on NBC-TV's "Wagon Train," and a single one-minute announcement on ABC-TV's "Wagrfoot" (Nov. 26.) On radio, Seven-Up purchased three participations on CBS' "Amos and Andy" and three each on "Bandstand," "One Man's Family," "Peper Young's Family," and "My True Story," all on NBC. In addition, Seven-Up has alternate weeks of "Zorro," its regular series on ABC-TV, with AC Sparkplugs Saturation sked begins Nov. 18 with first participation on "Band-

AFTRA's Beef: 'Too Many Walk-ons'

An increasing source of bitterness among New York's television acting fraternity is the use of non-union amateurs in one-shot walk-ons in the live dramatic field. Under AFTRA rules, anybody can do a walkon once before having to join the union, and there's been an increasing tendency to turn over such one-shot bits to favored amateurs.

an increasing tendency to turn over such one-shot bits to favored amateurs.

In one recent instance, a w.k. star had his three children do walk-on parts in a program in which he was starred. In another case late last season, the final show of the year had secretaries and other personnel in the production staff doing the walkons. In still another case this year, a third dramatic show used a retired real estate dealer and a housewife.

Actors are sore because the people used were doing it just for "kicks," without any intention of making a career out of acting. Producers weren't trying to avoid paying regular fees—the amateurs got scale salaries. But, say the actors, the producers were doing wrong by the professionals. Every walkon helps, both in terms of feeding a family among the lesser-known thesps (and it's the hungriest actors who need the walkons), and in giving them credits which can help them further their careers. There's also many an instance where a walkon becomes a speaking role in the course of a rehearsal, and the professional actor is deprived of that much more of an opportunity for a break.

Both sponsors want to use their ABC performers on NBC, and both, evidently, liave been successful in impressing this fact on ABC. In the case of Miss Shore, while no promises have been made, it is held possible that she will appear on Boone's ABC show for Chevy. Initially, ABC cracked down when NBC announced that Sinatra would appear on a Nov. 23 "Oasis" stanza. Network said that it had not been informed of the move, and initially merely wanted to protect Sinatra, who begins in mid-October, until he was firmly established as an ABC performer before permitting him to do an NBC stand. Sinatra, says McCann-Erickson, agency for L&M, is in fayor of the NBC special.

MEET ME AT THE BEVHILLS'

Kaiser-Armstrong to NBC: 'Thanks'

It hasn't taken NBC-TV too long to regret the day it chased Kalser Aluminum and Armstrong Cork away. For within the span of a single week, both advertisers gave NBC plenty of cause for regret. Kaiser, which switched over to ABC and agreed to chance the risky Sunday night slotting for its "Maverick" series, gave NBC grief week before last by clobbering Steve Allen in the 8 to 8:30 time period (and beating the 7:30 to 8 "Sally" as well).

And Armstrong, which switched its "Circle Theatre" over to CBS, made an auspicious bow last Wednesday (2) with its "Dead Sea Scrolls" script and promises to establish it as the strongest alternate programming yet to CBS' "U.S. Steel Hour," posing a sharper competitive threat to NBC's "This Is Your Life" than ever before.

NBC point was that research proved that live drama gets bigger audiences at 10 p.m., and that NBC wanted to program the 9:30 period differently anyway. Both advertisers balked, refusing to buck the competing "$64,000 Question" without some kind of leadin advantage. When the situation became a standoff, NBC issued its ultimatum, "10 o'clock or nothing." and Kaiser and Armstrong strolled.

Court Dismisses Suit Aimed at Barring Schrafft's Coffee Wagons From CBS Bldg.

CBS has won the battle of the coffee break.

New York Supreme Court referee Isidor Wasservogel last week dismissed a suit filed by Colbee's, the w. k. restaurant in the CBS building at 485 Madison Ave., seeking to enjoin rival Schrafft's restaurant chain from bringing its coffee wagons into CBS quarters for coffee break service to the network's employees. work's employees.

Colbee's had brought the suit on the basis that the Schrafft's service constituted a violation both of the Colbee lease and the CBS lease of the premises. Building is owned by the Madison 52d Corp., and the landlord as well as CBS and Schrafft's were named defendants.

Schräft's were named defendants.

Seems Colbee's had an outgoing service which it abandoned about eight years ago. Since then, the CBS employees have had to fend for themselves, sending out to neighboring drug stores and lunch-conettes for coffee, etc. Last February, CBS invited Schrafft's, located across the street, so bring in its wagons, and Colbee's promptly filed suit.

Basis of the Colbee complaint is that its lease gave it the exclusive rights to any outgoing order business in the building, and enjoined the landlord from permitting any other portion of the building to be used as a restaurant or eating place or cigar stand. Lease allowed CBS, however, to maintain private dining facilities for its executives.

The Beverly Hills Hotel has, to all intents and purposes, become the "world capitai" for "v.p.'s in charge of delivering shows." "Coffee and pilots" is the menu's piece de resistance as the buyers & sellers congregate daily. To this end, the first 13-week goround will probably wind up with some half-hour program lopoffs. Particularly in trouble are the batch of new situation comedies, notably on NBC and CBS, which have not only failed to catch fire but have invited some diminishing Trendex returns in contrast to last season. Both NBC and CBS are always aware that the slotting of their respective Sunday 7:30 entries, "Sally" and "Bachelor ABC's "Mawerick" to move in lock, stock Trendex, with subsequent harm to the Ed Sullivan-Steve Allen 8 o'clock shows.

But "Sally" and "Bachelor Father" are not the exceptions. CBS-TV's "Dick and the Duchess," "Eve Arden Show" and the heldover Gale Storm Show and "Mr. Adams & Eve" along with NBC's "The People's Choice" (also a holdover) are already either trouble spots or potential ones. It's possible that one or two will make it (since it's traditional that situation comedies build slowly) but there is virtual agreement among the networks, based on early Trendexes, that the day of the universal acceptance of the situation comedy is over. Sponsor resistance to this area of programming is at its peak.

If ABC's Ollie Treyz and his

It ABC's Ollie Treyz and his program chieftain Jim Aubrey aren't exactly strangers to the Bevhills precincts these days it's because of the awareness that this is the season ABC will have to make good. Now that most of the new season's entries are accounted for, there's a realistic evaluation going on with an eye toward an early scrapping of the weakles and boltering the more soild segments. But of immediate concern is the desire to grab off a promising half-hour entry for the Sunday night 8:30 slot to bridge "Maverick" and the upcoming Sid Caesar show.

NBC, heartened by its new com-

NBC, heartened by its new competitive status on the basis of ratings thus far (see separate story), nonetheless is the first to admit that there are a minimum of half a dozen soft spots that will have to be eradicated. Three and possibly four of the 7:30 to 8 segments are in trouble, including the aforementioned "Sally" on Sunday which, despite an impressive initial episode, has since been a disappointment. Nat King Cole's Tuesday 7:30 show has been delivering declining ratings. The Friday "Saber of London" 7:30 segment is extremely doubtful. Thursday's "Tic Tac Dough" is still a question mark.

The Procter & Gamble-sponsored

The Procter & Gamble-sponsored "Meet McGraw" Tuesdays at 9 is just a question of time. The network would like to chuck it pronto. Similarly the network isn't happy about Thursday's "People's Choice," with Young & Rubicam, on behalf of sponsor Borden, inquiring as to new availabilities. Friday is practically loaded with shaky entries, including "Saber," "Life of Riley" and "The Thin Man." "Court of Last Resort," which premiered last week, is still a wait-and-see proposition.

Major Saturday concern revolves around the alternating "Club Oasis" and Polly Bergen shows.

Studio One' Gets 2-Year Renewal: May Go to Coast

CBS-TV scored a major coup this week in getting Westinghouse to renew "Studio One," not for just one year but for two full seasons. There had been some doubt that Westinghouse would renew the longrunning Monday night dramatics at all, so that the two-year renewal comes as an extra coup for the web. Renewal takes effect Jan. 1.

Still unresolved, however, is the question of a shift in origination from New York to the Coast, Sponsor and McCann-Erickson have been toying with the idea, on the basis that the Coast origination would make available a lot more of the name talent than is currently on tap in New York. The greater reliance on names stems from Westinghouse's hopes of boosting the show's ratings.

Deciding factor in the renewal,

from Westingnouse's nopes of boosting the show's ratings.

Deciding factor in the renewal, or at least in its timing, was Monday night's show, which with Barbara Bel Geddes starring, out-Trendexed NBC's "Suspicion" stanza (see Trendex boxscore. There had been some concern the week before, when "Suspicion" easily outrated "Studio One" in its premiere on NBC, that the new MBC entry might prove too potent competitively for "Studio One." That concern was largely erased by this week's ratings, and the renewal came through yesterday (Tues.). Westinghouse is also said to have been impressed by the quality of the "Studio One" shows thus far this fall, and the upcoming plays now on the drawing boards.

NBC-TV Dickers Studio Lease With N.Y. Space At Alltime Premium

Studio space in New York for television drama is at an alltime premium, so much so that NBC is currently negotiating a lease with ABC for the latter's large TV-2 in which to house the live vessions of "Suspicion" Deal, if one materializes, should be set this week. "Suspicion" situation exemplifies the overall situation, according to producer Mort Abrahams, who did is first show Monday night (7) at NBC's 8-H in Radio City, and moves all the control room study and the proposed show, but said it would not be a vaude type offering. Likelihood is that either one or both of the entertainment segments will be scrapped, though no decision has been reached. NTA Canada Deal On 20th Features National Telefilm Associates has scored the first large-scale sale of feature programming to a national advertiser in Canada, with American Home Products taking one-third sponsorship of 20th-Fox features for weekly telecasting in 17 Canadian markets.

Deal, set by Young and Rubi-cam in Toronto, is on behalf of American Home Products White-hall Pharmacal Division. Repping NTA was David Griesdorf, prez and general manager of NTA Tele-films (Canada) Ltd.

GUILD EXPANDING BLURB PRODUCTION

Guild Films commercial division, which may shortly fall under the command of Norm Alperin, is plan-ning to expand by establishing blurb production facilities in Mexico City and London (where it also will do regular telefilm programming) and in Puerto Rico. It will also maintain the New York

Alperin, now called commercials sales exec, is expected to take over as official chief of the blurb setup for Guild. Job was held by Wally Gould until he moved over to Television Programs of America several months ago. Nox Lempert will continue as exec producer.

KTTV's 'Gee Whiz' Promosh on Pix

Hollywood, Oct, 8.

Potatoes aren't cheaper, tomatoes aren't cheaper, and neither is the cost of promoting a tv show. Last year, when KTTV bowed on its Colgate-sponsored package of old Metro pix, station launched what was then a block-busting campaign, which added up to approximately $100,000 in cost. One year later, to bow on a new batch of Colgate-sponsored Metro films last Friday (4), the tab hovers around the $124,000 mark.

This sets some sort of record hereabouts for promoting a single program. Across the street from KTTV, Paramount-owned KTLA has a campaign underway which approximates the figure, but KTLA is promoting its entire new programming lineup for the fall.

As with most such campaigns, the KTTV figure represents mostly spots and plugs on the station itself. However, at going rate card prices, over the past two weeks KTTV has

Hollywood, Oct. 8.

The power of old pix was again demonstrated when the Metro backlog bowed on KTTV for a second season under Colgate sponsorship. Special 2,000-call survey by ARB, ordered by the Colgate agency, showed "Boom Town" swamped all opposition in its 150-minute period.

withheld some $91,500 in time from other potential advertisers to plug the "Colgate Theatre" debut (which, incidentally, preemed with "Boom Town" this year). There is no way of pinning down these costs precisely, but the figure represents some 183 scheduled teleblurbs, from 10 seconds to five minutes long, ranging from Class AA ($600 a minute) to Class B ($300 a minute) time periods. Another $19,600 represents time allotted to KTTV talent (George Putnam, Jackson Wheeler, Bill Welsh, Sheriff Jonh, Steve Martin, Dick Whittinghill, Del Moore, Dick Joy) for promotional plugs. Not included are some 35 "stay-tuned" plugs over closing credits of shows with non-competitive sponsors.

Newspaper advertising over past week in all metropolitan dailies and a large number of regional dailies represents another $10,000. This also includes followup advertising for at least another two weeks.

Another $1,100 went into outdoor advertising, with 200 seven-sheet posters. All day Friday (4), a helicopter towed a banner promoting "Boom Town" over the L. A. area, and a skywriter emblazoned the pic title over various parts of the city, at a combined cost of $900.

'MDM'-Program or Spot Carrier?

Is WOR-TV's (N.Y.) "Million Dollar Movie" a program or a spot carrier? That's what Screen Actor's Guild and the advertising agencies are going to decide when negotiations begin early next year for a new codified telefilm commercial contract.

SAG seeks the program rate for all unionites who appear in in commectals on "MDM." It is higher than the spot carrier rate. SAG says that it long ago went on record as having declared "MDM" a program, and hence has been collecting fees for it as a program.

SAG maintains that its position—which can affect many other multi-exposure feature stanzas throughout the country—has always been clear: That because WOR bills its advertisers as the show owners, in a sense, it is a program and not a spot carrier.

A SAG spokesman the other day adlibbed an "MDM" sponsor intro: "Presented by . . . " (followed by the name of the sponsor or sponsors). However, it has been noted, that WOR sometime in the not too distant past began to refer to sponsors in their introductions as "participators."

There are very few Hollywood holdouts, actors and actresses who refuse to play on tv, according to Broderick Crawford, in New York for some p.a.'s in between shooting on third year production of Ziv's "Highway Patrol."

"Personally, I know only of only five and they're simply afraid to make the step, the way I was afraid," Crawford stated. Things have changed quite a bit on the Coast, when the going phrase among unemployed talent was "can I borrow $2 until to blows over?" He credited "Playhouse 90" and "Climax" for making efforts in that direction, though, but adding they've been taking an awful panning by the critics.

On "Highway Patrol," there are 15 in the can of third-year production. He is discussing a new series with Ziv for which he would be a director. He explained that his deal on "HP" calls for him to direct six out of 39 episodes, but feeling that an actor cannot direct himself, he's declined the directorial chores. But teledims has opened the directorial chores. But telefilms has opened the direc-torial field for him as it has done with other Ziv star performers, Barry Sullivan and Wendell Corey.

The burgeoning telefilm commercial industry is expected to gross a new high of almost $\frac{8}{49},000,000 by the end of 1957. In the past few years, in keeping pace with a growing to medium, commercial producers have been building their establishments to new strength.

Furthermore, a top limit on the amount of blurb production is expected to have serious consequences on the nature of the business. With the probability of no place to go but down after 1958, the several production companies could readily be forced to accelerate their competitive practices in order to justify large operations. That means an increase in everything from straight salesmanship and service to an increase in the alleged payoff that pockmarks the industry.

The maximum earning power of $52,500,000 or $52,600,000 for 12,000 commercials is arrived at by the projection of current earning and production figures. The results of an as yet unpublished survey of the field show that so far this year some 10,000 blurbs have been made for advertisers and that by the end of 1957 the figure will have gone up to between 10,500 and 11,000.

At the better rate of 11,000 commercials a year, producers can collectively gross about $48,900,000 in 1957. In 1956, producers reported a gross of $35,000,000 when 9,000 commercials were made for tv consumption by filmers. However, the money amount is known to be actually larger than $35,000,000 since some major production companies never publicly reported their billings. A generally accepted estimate on the true gross in 1956 is one of almost $40,000,000, and it is on this figure that all the projections for 1957 and 1958 were based.

On the network level, it was found that over a period of about a year and a half, the period extending, from Jan, 1956, to Oct., 1957, the casualty rate was 58% with only 42% of the 1956 programs surviving. Taken into consideration for that computation were the 138 sponsored evening network programs alred during the base period in 1956. Programs were counted as surviving despite the change of program length, time, or day of telecast of network.

In contrast, the Pulse survey of syndicated film programs for Jan., 1936, the same base period, listed 80 syndicated film properties which, as of that date were on the air in most of the top markets of the country. Of the 80 syndicated programs already well established in January, '56, it was found that 52 or 65% are still playing in a sufficient number of major markets to warrant inclusion in the latest Pulse Spot Film report of September, '57. Furthermore, with one exception, every one of the 80 syndicated programs is still on the air, cated programs is still on the air, although not listed in the latest Pulse Spot Film report. Radio & TV Join Forces to Give Soviet's Sputnik a Fancy Whirl

With the news break on Russ Sputnik earth satellite coming on Friday eve (4), the radio and television networks happed on the story for an all-weekend coverage that dwarfed the weekend news-vision networks helped on the story for an all-weekend coverage that dwarfed the weekend newspaper breaks on the development. Among all three webs, no less than six special television shows were devoted to the story over the weekend, along with the spot breakins to regular programming and extensive coverage in the regular radio-tv news shows.

Of the three webs, NBC came out on top with its coverage, granbing the story off as its own via the pickup of the satellite's radio signal by RCA Communications. When the first Reuters and AP dispatches came in at 6:30 on Friday eve, NBC newsroom supervisor Ed Gough called RCA Communications, suggesting they monitor Radio Moscow for the announcement. And when Moscow announced the frequencies of the signal, RCA caught a faint signal at 8 p.m. and a strong one at 8:07. At that point, RCA got back to Gough and the signal was taped and placed on the air at 9 p.m. with a break-in to regular programming.

By that time, all three webs were busy placing their assignments and planning special coverage, RCA meanwhile got tapes out to all broadcasters, getting on the air credits from CBS, for example. And the networks yanked into their files for an International Business Machine-produced animated sequence showing how a satellite would be rocketed into its orbit. That same night, with all the news shows devoting virtually all their coverage to the story, NBC did a 15-minute panel at 2:30 p.m. out of Washington, and at 11:15 that night, David Brinkley did an interview of John P. Hagen, project officer of the U.S.' own Vanguard satellite program. On Sunday, wedid another special preempting "Outlook," in which Joseph Kaplan, head of the American Committe of

Web followed this up with additional coverage on "Sunday News Special."

At ABC, web's radio and tv arms carried the story via regular news shows, then on Sunday airel a radio and a tv special, the AMer at 7:30 and the telecart at 4 to 4:30. Italy's TV Poser: 'How Far Dare We Venture on Com'ls'

Rome, Oct. 8.

The question of video advertising, long a thorny controversial subject in this country, has been brought into the spotlight once more following the recent Cannes and Trieste conventions and festivals of publicity films made for pic houses and television.

Italo tv commercials currently are confined to a 10-minute evening segment, billed as "Caroseilo." and containing four two and ning segment, billed as "Carosello," and containing four two and a half minute ad shorts each. It's known that RAI-TV is contemplating taking fuller advantage of its permit for video advertising in the future, though realizing this is a dangerous move in the current developing stage of the local video picture.

Some observers here note that, while some of the "Carosello" spot ads are entertaining enough to "draw" weekly audiences to see their comic or musical attractions, their comic or musical attractions, others are less satisfying and weigh down the "program" as a whole. A suggestion has been made that RAI-TV pre-screen the ads for entertainment values (as well as for the surrent censorial angles). It is improbable that such a move will be made, also because there is currently little criticism of Italo video advertising on the part of viewers (even though these are already paying a yearly $25 fee for use of their sets.)

WEEP Some More My WILY

Radio Row is still buzzing with talk her about the wild campaign put on by ex-WILY in heralding change in its call letters to WEEP and withdrawal from a strictly local Negro beaming to the general market. One of seven broadcasting properties owned by John Kluge, wealthy food broker, and managed by Ernie Tannen, vice-president who has a piece of the business, the WEEP promotion was such a success the telephone operators are only now catching up on their sleep a week later.

After letting the columnists and dallies in on the upcoming switch after pledging them first to secrecy, Tannen started off with run-of-the-paper teasers merely saying "WEEP FOR JOY." Pittsburgh Courier, mose influential Negro weekly in the country, broke the release date early, apparently in protest of WILY deserting the race field, but by that time it was longer a trade secret anyway.

descring the race field, but by that time it was longer a trade secret anyway.

The big gun was reserved, however, for the finale. On the day the actual change took place, WEEP, which airs only in the daylight hours, played just one recording from the sign on to sign off. It was Perry Como's "Just Born," and that did it. Switchboard was deluged. More than 4,000 calls came in; thousands of others got a busy signal. They were still telephoning days later to inquire what it was all about.

Later in the afternoon, WEEP beeped an interview in New York with Como himself, and played it in partial explanation and, of course, in appreciation from the singer. Tannen picked the letters WEEP because he said it opens so many offbeat opportunities, among them a sign-off that might go "and now you won't here a peep out of WEEP for the next 12 hours."

Previously staffed by Negroes, WEEP is retaining only one of its Negro deejays, the one who calls himself Sir Walter Raleigh and speaks a haugh'y British bop jargon. The station's other toprated platter spinner. Bill Powell stays on but he'll be the music librarian and program director.

Can. Crackdown On Boxtop Shows

Boxtop giveaway shows are on their way out in Canada, and fast. Warning came from the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. board of governors, meeting in Ottawa, that stations must meet "minimum standards" in these alrers or a crackdown will come in the form of formal broadcast regulations and probable disciplinary measures.

These standards include "contest participants should not be required to send in boxtops, labels or other proof they have bought a sponsor's product, or show they know some information broadcast by the station," and "contest participants should be in the studio and take part in the program, or if and take part in the program, or if written entries are involved there should be arrangements for their consideration on merit."

These were set up, said A. D. Dunton, CBC board chairman, in consultation with the Canadian Assn. of Radio and Television Broadcasters, representing most non-CBC stations.

This type of quizzer got big attention three years ago when CBC sisued warnings to radio stations to ease up on them. They did, but recently an upsurge in boxtop quiz shows had been noticed and CBC and CARTB decided it was time to point the finger. Dunton said CBC will "study" contest shows from now n and broadcasters not living up to the minimum standards will rack up official demerits.

AARON COPLAND'S 'LIVELY ARTS' SCORE

AUDIENCE SWING

With the early Trendex returns already covering most of the competitive programming areas of the new season, this year's network hew season, this year's network battle for supremacy will prove the hottest competitive dogfight ever. NBC-TV has already substantially closed the gap between it and CBS, while ABC, with much of its new programming still to premiere, has already improved its position.

But the big chips are in the NBC-CBS battle, and the seven-night. Trendex averages show a major swing of audience toward NBC and away from CBS. As of now, with figures based on the October Trendex, NBC is only 6% behind CBS in nighttimes average share of audience, as compared to its 22% lag at this time a year ago. CBS shares have dropped 12% from last year, while NBC's have gone up 6% and ABC's are up 7%, but substantially behind its competitors.

Roberts told the Commission that NAFBRAT's complaint presents "a prejudiced and one-sided point of view" and that it is not within the agency's province to evaluate "whether the claims of a particular religious group are justified or not." To embark upon such an inquiry, he said, would open the door for critics of other faiths to raise questions concerning the validity of claims of other groups.

"There is no religious group," Roberts said, "which does not sincerely believe that its approach to a solution of the problems of life and immortality are valid and each of those groups has its faithful followers—as well as its critics and skeptics. NAFBRAT, in a complaint filed nearly a month ago, called for hearings looking toward revocation of KCOP's license. It also attacked station's children's shows, its news programs, and commercial practices. There's nothing essentially wrong with the Danny Thomas Show that laughs won't cure. Long since he's demonstrated his sock comedic talents as a video performer during the several seasons he was pledging allegiance to the ABC-TV colors. But the audience that tuned in for his CBS-TV premiere Monday (7) was short-changed. It was more situation than comedy.

Marjorie Lord is now Thomas' new tw wife with Sherry Jackson as the daughter, and Rusty Hamer a valuable holdover as the male offspring. Angela Cartwright, the third child, is an "inheritance" from Thomas' "second wife." As ty families go, it's a sound combo. But Arthur Stander's script (he also gets billing as story consultant) left something to be desired; specifically, some of those genuine comedy segments that distinguished the Thomas show two-three seasons back when, for reasons having more to do with network facilities than talent, it failed to produce the deserved ratings.

But CBS now has him, in the same Monday at 9 period that commanded the No. 1 Nielser year after year during the Lucy & Desired, and in a season, too, when the competing NBC entries have made scrious inroads on the Monday and the Competing NBC entries have made scrious inroads on the Monday at 9 period that formarder of the monday towards balancing the rating scales.

Obviously it doesn't work out that way fa break for the tva audience, for it's only when Thomas goes to work in the closing moments that the half-hour redeems itself! P. Lorillard (Old Gold) has a potential winner in "Court of Last Resort." Title derives from the organization of the same name which looks into the cases of convicted prisoners wrongfully "sent up." Its roster includes Eric Stanley Gardner and Harry Steeger (founders), Dr. LeMoyne Snyder, Raymond Schindler and others making up a board of high-minded investigators and sleuths bent on freeing those who've been incarcerated through false or faulty testimony, etc.
The initial case was pegged on a man imprisoned for 22 years who's finally declared innocent through the untiring efforts of the panel. Story and action were handled with care, discipline and with an aura of public service devoid of the violence and pyrotechnics usually associated with such police dramas. Lyle Bettger was especially effective as Sam Larsen, chief investigator.

The roles of the committeemen are impresonated in the series. Writers and directors are in the "various" category. John Meredyth Lucas staged the opener competently; other directors of the series are Tom Gries, Peter Godfrey and James Sheldon. Robert A. Klein is the script editor. Elliott Lewis' production was first-rate. Packagers are Walden Productions in association with Palsan Productions, with Jules C. Goldstone as exec producer.

Except for the female guests, Skelton had little to work with on the preemer, but he was able to wring live yocks from even the dullest gags, and there were plenty in that classification. Marie Wilson and Marilyn Maxwell contributed something in comedy, besides something to latch the orbs onto, but mainly to was and always is—a one-man exhibition. Skelton can make the most uninspired script look good. Bob Hope's initial stand on his once-monthly visitations seems like many others from the same Hope chest. Working in front-of servicemen gives him the best possible sounding board, and once he makes out well with his standup comedy, the entire show gets a good tone. Hope's fast chatter combed with topical comedy and local GI jokes hit an extremely effective mark among the troops at the Nouasseur Air Depot in Morocco.
Hope is sufficiently versed in GI tastes to provide a gam-filled show, with Ann Miller and Marie McDonald filling that angle sufficiently well. However, in the performance sector of the femme contingent, Miss Miller, expert on song-dance and who can deliver lines, gave an excellent account of herself. Miss McDonald sang a tune in a fetching costume and gathered the required number of whistles.

Eddie Fisher, a singer of distince-gathered the required number of whistles. Eddle Fisher, a singer of distinction, also got off well. Pfc. Gary Crosby, son of The Bing, has a vocal and physical resemblance to pater. He's a coming performer, although he seemed a little rusty now that military matters interfere with his theatrical career. Konetheless he shows a lot of the family affability and charm.

Two skits utilizing most of the cast had some moments. Although the show had its hits and misses on the civilian front, it was sock in army circles. The pace was rapid and with Hope lines taking up a good deal of the time, it was a fast full hour show with a good amount of laughs strewn about. John Cameron Swayze does the live commercials on this otherwise filmed session.

The General Electric Theatre's season-starter, "The Questioning Note," presented last Sunday (6) night, didn't carry much voltage. The play, costarring James and Pamela Mason, had to do some fast maneuvering to tile up its loose ends by wrapup time. The result wasn't very effective.

Once its pivotal point had been established, the play had to race along to reach a conclusion, leaving little time for the development of characters. A contrived situation was brought into play when a novelist (Mason), recovering from a nervous breakdown, encounters a man who subsequently disappears without anybody, but Mason, admitting having seen him to begin with.

NBC, may make the "Steel"-"Armstrong" parlay a powerful one for Columbia.

This is the impression, at least, given by the Armstrong premiere show, "Buried 2,000 Years: The Dead Sea Scrolls." Although the series is tied to a formula—the "actuality" semi-documentary style—producer Robert Costello hasn't construed this as a restriction on the imagination (which seems in short supply elsewhere this season), and in his first telecast came up with an intriguing, topical and wholly dramatic subject in the form of the story of the discovery of the now-famed scrolls.

If Costello is willing to go this far afield from the "hard news" type of dramatic documentary, this augurs well for the series. The current fields of archeology, science, medicine, business and other offbeat sources can prove fascinating subjects that will provide solid dramatic values and prove even more intriguing due to their offbeat and lesser-known natures. "Dead Sea Scrolls" was such a story.

With Israeli actor Yoseph Yadin

even more intriguing due to their offleest and lesser-known natures. "Dead Sea Scrolls" was such a story.

With Israeli actor Yoseph Yadin playing his own father, the archeology professor who first discovered the scrolls, Costello delivered still a further dramatic impetus to the story, which was set in Palestine just about the time the United Nations voted for partition and so sanctioned the creation of Israel as a free nation. Scripter Irve Tunick, a veteran at the "actuality" format, heightened the dramatic values by timing, the discovery with the actual UN vote, giving the story of a sense of destiny 'fit was just as if the scrolls were waiting for this moment, as Yadin put it in the teleplay). With this, the element of danger and suspense was added via the necessity of the professor's going through hostile Arab territory to get the scrolls.

With these dramatic devices, along with the intriguing subject of the scrolls themselves, Tunick had a natural-made drama, and he made the-most of it, maintaining suspense all the way down the line. Yadin, though stumbling occasionally on his lines, gave a fervent and believable performance as his own father, and the supporting cast, Sarah Burton, Charles Aidman, David White and Simon Oakland, were excellent. William Corigan's direction raced the story along as if it were a thriller, which in some respects it was.

Douglas Edwards is the new narrator for the show, and he's excellent. Customarily calm and easygoing in his news delivery, Edwards got into the spirit of the script on the opener and injected a sense of excitement into his narration. There aren't very many people in the television industry who would gainsay that ABC-TV has been very lucky these past few weeks in establishing itself in the afternoon. From some almost totally surprising program sources, the network has, to its own amaze-ment, arrived as a rating giant in ment, arrived as a rating giant in many of the pre-dark tv hours—and with programs that hardly stack up in the main as novel or costly. One of the few shows that is costly and of sufficiently different dimension to be singled out is the new "Woody Woodpecker" telefilm produced by Walter Lantz for ABC-TV, through Universal International, It's also one of the few shows, apart from the 5:30 to 6"Mickey Mouse Club," that appears to cost some dough.

"Mickey Mouse Club," that appears to cost some dough.

ABC has a goodly number of reruns at 5 p.m., which are sponsored by Kellogg, with a little help from other bankrollers. A handful of new shows are to be mixed in with the old "Supermans," "Sir Launcelots" and "Wild Bill Hickoks," but sponsor Kellogg is conserving the coin because the Battle Creek boys figure they can do it without a heckuva lot of money or inspiration, and, judging by the "Superman" ratings of last week, it looks as though they are probably right. That's four days a week, and on Thursday, in Lantz time, there is no doubt that Kellogg will have the strongest show in its cross-the-board lineup.

As for "Woodpecker" Lantz has

As for "Woodpecker," Lantz has tled some of his original theatre animations of the engaging bird (that had never before been shown on tv) to some new tv product by the Hollywoodite. There is hardly a doubt that it was modelled after successful "Disneyland" format on the same network Wednesday nights. Not that the daytime Lantz show has as broad a base in material, but cartooner Lantz (a la Walt Disney himself) acts as the show host. He has other Walt Disney production tricks too: from cleverly telling the story of how his principal character was "born," to sitting in his office, at his posh desk, and using real props to enhance his narrative. He's a pleasant man, but hardly a polished performer, though since when do kids need the Kind of polish adults demand in adults?

"Woodpecker" on Thursday (3), a coerie of short made, a per-mand in adults?

"Woodpecker" on Thursday (3), in a series of shorts, made a perfect assault on the moppet viewership and was a great lead-in for "MMC." It should help ABC sell nationally the part of the Thursday "Mouse" half-hour that is now a being co-opped, if it is contractually not too late. "Woody" cartoon characters are cute, funny and well-drawn. Stanza has quality and offers the juves a lively, harmless Thursday half-hour. Art.

Ever since "Tom Sawyer" 'delighted the reading public, the innocent charm of little boys trying to fit their lives to the pattern of an adult world has made for effective tears and laughter. In "Leave It To Beaver," which bowed over CBS-TV last week (4), the formula Is squeezed unabashedly. Going by the first installment, this promises to be good, family-type entertainment, not outstandingly original perhaps, but certainly full of the sort of chuckles that are bred by familiarly comic situations.

There are quite a lot of "ty families" on the air and the Cleavers are just one more. Comedy is built around the little eight-year old, nicknamed "Beaver" and played with fetching naturalness by little Jerry Mathers. Maybe he's a little sophisticated for an eight-year old—his vocabulary despite some deliberate mispronouncing certainly is remarkable for a second-grader—but there's nothing precocious about Beaver and the part is kept properly simple.

Writers Joe Connelly and Bob Mosher, doubling in brass as producers, obviously have an ean for the talk of little boys. Some of the dialog in "Beaver Gets Spelled" was fillarious and the situation itself was the kind that must have been duplicated in millions of real homes at one time or another. Director Norman Tokar must be credited with deft touches and with never allowing the situations to never allowing the situations to slip from the funny to the ridicu-

Eventually, he runs away and is finally discovered up a tree from where his parents coax him down. Yarn was acted convincingly throughout and, in spots, generated warmth and a feeling of intimate family relationships.

Barbara Billingsley and Hugh Beaumont as the parents did firemather obviously isn't far removed from being the kind of kid he's supposed to act out. Tony Dow did okay as the brother and Dlana: Brewster was easy on the eye as the young and sympathetic schoolteacher.

All in all, "Leave It To Beaver" shapes as a pleasant entry that should attract a core of "regulars."

It's backgrounded by what appears to be "canned" laughter. Show could do well without it. Hift.

In the situation comedy field, there are a number of different types making the rounds currently, ranging from attempted sophistication to frank slapstick, but now with "The Real McCoys," the cornball, hillbilly variety has moved in Chief saving grace of this program was the presence of vet film more mileage out of an Ozark line

once in a while, because Brennan delivered the line, it nearly registered as well with the viewer as

But this is strictly Ma and Pa and strictly for the Smokey Corners addicts. Opener concerned the arrival in California of the McCoy family from the hills of West Virginia—the remote hills, at that, for there's a lot of banter of marriage at 13, water wearing away the skin, and other "Tobacco and of course, minus its social content. Episode spun on getting grandpa McCoy to like the new daughter-in-law, a Mexican farmhand who comes with the property, etc.

art & form of tv Programming, that's something else again.

Technically, the first installment in the series had in its favor some plus values, not the least of which were some realistic camera shots of nighttime Manhattan (with Lindy's as home base for the WW police-car prowling) and in backgrounding the pursuit of a trio of criminals up First Ave.

Winchell's commentary as the reporter on the all-night beat threads its way through the half-hour segment (these are fictionalized dramatic and news stories supposedly based upon true-life experiences in 30 years of news coverage), thus providing a sense of WW "participation" in this "Country Boy" crime saga which ted off the Revlon-sponsored series. But the major kicks stemmed from the visual documentation under Jerry Thorpe's direction and some off-beat realism injected into the Adrian Spies script.

Thus the story came to grips with a New York City detective who frankly scared on his initial plainsclothes assignment which brings him face to face with a psychopathic killer (the guy likes his victim to talk about his family while he's doing him in), and only a couple of blocks away from the hospital where the dick's wife has just given birth to their first child. Similarly a taxi-driver commandered for the getaway up First Ave. is spared by the ringleader. The cabbie breaks down in unbashed weeping punctuated by silent player. It packed an emotional wallop not generally found in these make - 'em -in -a - hurry shootin' dramas.

Otherwise, Spies' script pretty much adhered to the conventional wallop not generally when when you could be rach with the conventional pattern of films inspired by somehady or other's files, with Winchell on deck for the touch of realistic journalism. It's time, though, those WW bromles ("twisted flotsam," etc.) were laid to rest. It could be racy without being rusty.

"See It Now" traced the roots of the problem to two factors: obsolescence of equipment and the inability of the P.O. to charge enough for its services. In the latter case, the charges of alleged multi-million dollar subsidies to the big magazines, such as Life, Reader's Digest, Saturday Evening Post, et al, were aired. Rep. George M. Rhodes (D., Pa.) charged that the P.O. lost over $300,000 on delivering one issue of Reader's Digest, Arthur L. Cole, general bustness manaver of the Reader's Digest, disputed the figures and the existence of any subsidy to the magazines. Cole said that reduced mailing rates on magazines was a subsidy, not to the publishers, but to the public who thus are permitted to get wide variety of information via the mails at a low cost.

The issue of subsidies was raised by a number of Congresseme and 'See It Now" traced the roots of

The issue of subsidies was raised by a number of Congressmen and, at the finale, by Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield. The latter charged that a powerful combination of magazines and third-class users had been effectively lobbying to prevent a hike in mailing rates, Summerfield also pointed out that the P.O. was hamstrung by an antiquated plant and an inadequate fiscal policy. Unlike most high Government officials, Summerfield hit the problems square's with no diplomatic hedging. As he put it, "I want the public te know that there is a substidy. Then if it's the will of the people and the wish of Congress to continue that subsidy; then they should do it openly and not keep it the best guarded secret of history."

Miss Byington, a cross between a fluttery and a competant mother-in-law, remains a good peg for the story, while Harry Morgan continues as the wry n-ighbor, with Dean Miller and Frinces Rafferty as the man-and-wife team in the series. The opening episode had Rudy Vallee and Joel Grey as the guests. Grey showed up as a roll "n' roller who is remade into the mould of Vallee, but returns to original format when Vallee hears a $10,000 salary is possible with the juve style of singing.

It would be simple enough to let singers sing and, if laugh-getting is needed, book a comedian. There's time enough for Mitchell to develop into a "personality" over and above his disk status wherein he's come through with a number of smasheroos including "Singin' the Blues" for the Columbia label. He is an alert and lively performer, a good song delineator, and well poised for caper and chitchat.

blatible. The is an alert and livery performer, a good song delineador, and well poised for caper and chitchat.

The opencr surely covered a lot of ground in its half-hour—too much so for viewer comfort. The writers (headman Ben Start, staffer William Derman) overwrote, though Irving Graham's special song material seemed to have possibilities had it been applied to a less frenzied session. Dizzy Dean was an okay novetly booking, especially while the World Series was in the air, but he was hardly of the required size in a strategic spot as one of the two guestars. Other guest, Marguerite Piazza, is of course a fancy triller, which she proved in a couple of numbers, and those gams of hers are something to behold hesides. But why try making a comedian of her?

What with soloing, duetting and bantering with his two guests. Mitchell had his work cut out for him, but he was in there pitching all the time and gives evidence of making the grade in the "personal appearance" department. He did a nice medley of some of his clicks, and in the interpolation section also mentioned a clinker or two among his disks.

Eddie Joy (Mitchell's personal manager and show's exec producerican fix things right quick by calling for a more disciplined handling of the script and better and more appropriate use of guest talent. As is, the bow show had little style and appeal—not enough to resist the temptation to dial over to CBS. "Burns & Allen" and NBC's "Restless Gun," Trau.

In this season of timidity, there was some worry in sponsor quarters, before P. Lorillard for Kent cigs took the plunge, that "Assignment Foreign Legion" may be too controversial, possibly allenating nationalistic Arabs.

The opener did cast the Arabs as the heavies, similar to the type-casting of Indians in U.S. Westerns, But this skeln, made in England and North Africa, starring Merle, Oberon, as host-narrator and occasional player, doesn't appear that important to warrant controversy. More or less, it seems to be conventional half-hour drama, judging from the initialer, but with some of the plot mechanics and characterizations coming off better than many skeins.

It has played in England, enjoying quite a good rating record. On CBS-TV, the Merle Oberon starrer follows the "$64,000 Question," giving it a potential good lead in, and it may garner better ratings because of its position, than if the show had to stand on ts own legs.

Opener dealt with the story of a mistakenly identified French collaborationist who joined the Forcign Legion "to die," life had become so miserable for him. There was the usual Legion patrol, the meeting with the fighting Arabs and the prior face-to-face encounter with the ann he was thought to have betrayed. Some suspense was developed as the man's character and background was uncovered, creating interest in the conventional proceedings. But Miss Oberon, as the foreign correspondent, steps into this man's world, not only to lend glamour (which she has) but to mastermind the outcast's complete exoneration. Well, the vindication phase was hardly credible, depending on a lot of obvious plot contrivances.

"Trackdown" is a moderately good western half-hour telefilm, with a moderately good star performer in 27-year-old Robert Culp, and it may be the source for a Mexican standoff with ABC's "Jim Bowle," another westerner (with a touch of the south). But there seems to be an uneccessary clamor among the networks for establishing beyond a doubt (not that they ever do) that their hoss operas are authentic.

among the networks for establishing beyond a doubt foot that they ever do! that their hoss operas are authentic.

ABC did it with "Bowie" and again with "Wyatt Earp." NBC did it with "Californians." and now CBS is doing it with "Trackdown. billed in its press releases as the "only ty series with the official approval of the State of Texas and the Texas Rangers." This didn't begin with tw westerns; it may have begun with "Dragnet." but that one's enough. Besides, the network program officials, if they're serious about all of this, are amoly missing the point: The authenticity should be conveyed through the believability of the characters and the plot, not in the press releases.

In these regards. "Trackdown" has a one-and-one record. Characterizations, as drawn by writer John McGreevy, were by and large well delineated, giving some good actors, including the star: a decent platform on which to perform. But—and here's the rub—the plot, which presumably was taken straight from Ranger files (and embroidered on slightly, of course) was as loaded with holes as the villains were; at the end of the preem half-hour Friday (4).

It was probably because of the individual roles that the new stantas seeds of the individual roles that the new stantas seeds of the first was patently phony.

several weeks ago. What prexy Bob Eastman and his cohorts are striving for is a cumulative result, one that will jazz up the web audience and consequently the web coffers. But dealing in cumulatives is at best a tenuous thing; who, including ABN executives, is to say what the longview will bring in the way of stimulation. However, Eastman, through his sales pitch on this overall programming inception (which he tagged the "All-American Package") has given some points from which to take off, and thereby avoid to some degree the tenuous, in passing on the merits of the plan. He said that his "all live," mostly-music listen differs from the ubliquitous local deejaying done these days. Well, on, neither of these shows, which cover most of the time between 1 and 3 p.m. every weekday, was there especially present that hazy thing "spontaneity" that a live personality and live music are supposed to bring to set networks apart from local stations, certainly not to a degree, it seemed here, to justify the elaborate plans and measures instituted by ABN.

Take for instance, the hack talk of Reeves; it came straight from a script, or at least sounded as if it came straight from a script, since it was stilted for the most part. On the other hand, the Backus gab was on a much higher plane of interest; it was sharper and set Backus off as more of an individual. His jawing had sparkle and a certain fan magazine appeal, since he is qualified to discuss Hollywood, stars and the other components of that peculiar world of mystery to the layman. But, in the fuller picture, Backus is going to have to prove at least three times as good as the best local jocks in the ABN chain, in order to justify a station settling for 33% of a dollar instead of 100%.

In any event, ABN's new block of shows are all of a fundamentally musical nature, obviating the need for too much personality. The music—song and orchestral—heard on both preem stanzas was dam good. But can anybody say that it was sufficiently superior to local canned stuff to justify the "All-American" scheme? To this quarter, there is a definite body of similarity: ABN is carefully following the expedient of top tunes, so much so that the same tunes were repeated on the Anderson, Reeves and Backus shows Monday. Will his design unnecessarily limit ABN to material that, in the final analysis, is so minutely different from local radio?

Finally, Joe Culligan, NBC Radio topper, challenged Eastman's theories on networking several weeks ago, asking, in effect, if the ABN musical stanzas, in all their live glory, were very different from local radio?

When it did combine the fun and live factors, the show sparkled, live factors, the show sparkled, even if those moments were surrounded by blocks of standard material. Not that the 40-minute stretch was unpleasant, for there was pop, standards and novelty numbers aplenty. But if the network is going to succeed in replacing station reliance on disks and local deejays, it needs some standout live programming, above and beyond the so-so niche. Merv Griffin is a good, polished vocalist. Perfanaent singing members such as Darla Hood and The Spellbinders performed ably, as did guestar Jaye P. Morgan, all with a fine assist from Jerry Bressler's Orch. Separately, on the whole, they were okay. But they didn't mesh too well as a "family." Griffin, as emcee, was too boisterous, like a host running around to his guests constantly reminding them loudly that they should be having a gay, great time. He and the show might do well to adopt some of Perry Como's tv tactics. In the service department, Griffin gave a rundown of the weather nationally, gagging it up somewhat, but still partly intelligible to the listener. When guestar Miss Morgan did the weather, it was virtually completely ununderstandable — hardly a service to listeners.

The best number in the parade of tunes was a duet sumg by Griffin and Miss Morgan on how to become a big recording star. It was a gem.

The coffee-klatch conversation in the trade still has as one of its intriguing speculations the question of who on the New York Herald Tribune will review CBS-TV's "Seven Lively Arts," since Trib critic John Crosby will be hosting the show.

Written for radio, and already performed once at the Scala Theare, Nino, Rota's opera made for an interesting and viewable hour in its video version. Spiti-screen devices appeared to update it even more, heightening the original effect. Might be worth considering for a stateside projection, especially in its present televersion, with a new cast.
Briefly, tale told is of an anhappy backstair "romance" between a boy and girl, both too timid to confess their love for each other. Via a series of operetizish misunderstandings, another woman and another man, respectively, are told they are the ones the two people love. In turn, they propose, and the timid ones have not the courage to change the situation, resign themselves to a separate future. Despite the slightly aged assumptions of the plot, Suso Ceechi D'Amico's dialog (book) is intelligent and bellevable. Music by Nino Rota is appropriate to the subject, fivolous when needed, sombre or moving when the mood calls. It indicates influences of Pizzetti and GianCarlo Menotti in certain pasages, Singers were mainly chosen for voice, rather than looks, and they carried out their chores diligently, with a minimum of operatic gesturing and in keeping with the modern setting. Uncredited set design and an excellent lighting and lensing job were to the production's further credit, along with Vito Molinari's crisp direction.

dramas in the "Suspicion" series, producer Mort Abrahams placed tongue in cheek and came up with an amusing murder farce in Sarett Rudley's adaptation of Gore Vidal's nutiey's adaptation of Gore vidals' Re-fitled "Murder Me Gently," it got a good working over from an able quartet of performers, Kurt Kasz-nar, Jessica Tandy, Joseph Buloff and Reginald Gardiner.

Yarn concerned an obese old multimillionaire who decides and wants to die but hasn't the guts for sulcide. So he enlists the willing aid of a lady mystery writer who proceeds to bungle the job so often and so painfully that the victim changes his mind and decides he wants to live after all. Then to his terror, he finds out that most of her 58 murder novels were based on fact, and when she insists she's got to finish this book, he finally gets his wish and dies of a heart attack.

Simple enough, but director Don Medford and the cast had a field day with the zany plot and characters. Miss Tandy, as the eccentric writer, turned in a fine job, giving the gal a businesslike and thoroughly joival manner that fit the farce just right. Kasznar, as the suffering victim, was excellent, writhing and shaking under the inflictions of Miss Tandy. And Buloff, as a Syrian hotel rflanager and Gardiner as a Scotland Yard detective on Miss Tandy's trail, lent just the right touches.

In terms of pure farce, this

In terms of pure farce, this didn't have the frantic pace that good farce should have, with the action proceeding at too leisurely a pace most of the time. But the basic situation and the various plot developments were annual to developments were enough to compensate for this and make the show one of the more pleasurable of the season.

In all probability a victim of type casting in the extreme (seems he's played nothing but cowboys or cops.), Hayden revealed himself to be an actor of depth, force and perception. Letter-perfect in his role, he also brought to it a great sensitivity that made the transformation of the character entirely sympathetic and believable throughout.

Supporting cast was excellent. Diana Lynn, as the girl with whom he falls in love and who guides him into books and ideals, was spirited and lively, providing a fine contrast with the society and making Hayden's motivation an understandable one. John Ireland was convincing as the unthinking, nar-coilc-happy bookman who gives Hayden away and then succumbs to the books himself. Brooks and Colleran held the show down to a lean (fast-paced half-hour with a maximum of entertainment and a minimum of small talk, and brought off a cleanly entertaining segment.

Kovacs is a comic of the first order, and his Percy Dovetonsils characterization was firstrate topped only by his conversion of his Niarobi Trio into a fullscale symphony orch (the Niarobi symphony) playing Beethoven's Fifth. With Kovacs playing it straight, the literal monkeyshines of the orch (especially a beautifully gowned but ape-faced cellist) were hilarious. As a closer, he duetted nicely with Miss Bergen in the "Up the Avenue" tramp bit.

Val Parnell's "Spectacular"

Val Parnell's "Spectacular"

Mel Torme has become a familiar figure on the British commercial tv network as well as with vaude audiences throughout the country. "The Mel Torme Show," which was featured in Val Parnell's "Saturday Spectacular" (28) was a typical vaudeo layout, crisply staged and presented with a blending of songs, comedy and specialty routines.

The show was presented by Eric

The show was presented by Eric Sykes, who, himself, was responsible for much of the comedy bit, and other featured personalities were Jill Day, Hattie Jacques and the Four Gini Fredianis. Tormetook good care of the vocalistic stakes with such entries as "Judgment Day," "One For My Baby and "From This Moment On." Miss Day provided additional single and made a personal click with her version of "Two to Tango." Miss Jacques, an outsize comedienne, had a highly diverting running sag as Nell Gwynn.

The entire production was distinguished by its pace and vitality and came to a lively end in a drum session featuring Sykes, Torme and the resident drummer. The Four Gini Fredianis turned in some routine stuff in their tumbling act, but their last minute was one of the action highspots of the program.

M'waukee Camera Shots Zing Up World Series Telecasts: Tint a Poser

Aside from NBC's color spread on the games from the Yankee Stadium in New York, television coverage of this year's World Series followed a pattern that's been well-established over the regular season. Video's reportage of baseseason. Video's reportage of base-ball has grown so expert over the past decade that it has virtually overcome the limitations of the relatively small home screen. In some respects, in fact, the home viewer gets to see more of the game than those seeing it live.

That was particularly evident in the excellent camera work in the games played at Milwaukee this year. In addition to standard semi-closeup shot of the infield, the Milwaukee tv crew accented one telescopic camera picking up from center field and another from right behind the home plate. The the Milwaukee tv crew accented one telescopic camera picking up from center field and another from right behind the home plate. The center-field camera thrust the viewer right into the middle of the infield, even to seeing the catchers' signals for the pitcher, while the behind-the-plate pickup was as close to the umpire's viewpoint as you can get. Strategic switching among the cameras and the video crew's general ability to keep their eye on the ball added to to a firstrate job.

The role of color in the coverage of a baseball game is more speculative. While NBC considerably improved the color quality in the second Vankee Stad' un game, the tinted images added very little to the game. Unlike football where the ability of the color cameras to separate the uniforms of the contending teams would be a definite plus in clarifying the action, baseball is an open game that's just as clear in black-and-white.

The color cameras, however, did get some incidental pretty effects. The multi-colored stands, the greenness of the turf and a shot of Red Schoendelst's hair as he took off his cap all were caught by the tint process. On the other hand, there was considerable color distortion in some of the shots and a general inability of the color cameras to adjust to the contrast between sunlight and shadows, Mel Allen, who does the playby-play for the Yankees during the regular season and Al Helfer, who works the Brooklyn games, team up for a savvy, non-partisan, but dramatic commentaries.

Gillette's insistent stream of testimonials from various big leaguers have been lightened this year with the occasional interjection of some clever animated cartoons.

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and nasional spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 toprated film shows listed in each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This VARIETY chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time—day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quiz; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the station's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. TV LIVING ON BARROW TIME?

Washington, Oct.-6.

Just in case anything's been overlooked by the House Committee on Inferstate and Foreign Commerce, a Special Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight, headed by Rep. Morgan M. Moulder, has gone to work on the tv networks and other industry sources to extract more info. Letter that went out last Thursday (3) to all the interested parties, signed by Moulder detailing its authority to review, study and examine the execution of the laws by the FCC as well as other Federal regulatory agencies, has caused no end of disquietude because of its implications. (All the desired into must be returned by Oct. 17).

Moulder's letter, which top industryites believe to have harmful overtones, more or less assumes that conniving, payoffs and kickbacks are a common practice within the industry. For example, among other things, it asks for:

Specification of any and all gifts, honorariums, loans, fees or other payments, in money or other things of value, given or made directly or indirectly to any member or employee of the Federal Communications Commission or his immediate family.

Specification of any or all benefits, other than those specified in (3), directly or indirectly paid or provided for any member or employee of the Federal Communications Commission or his immediate family, including but not limited to any travels, vacations, entertainment, hotel or other accommodations, memberships, etc.

As the networks' upper eebelon sees it, Commissioners Robert Bartley, Rosel Hyde and Robert Emmett Lee will back the report with its unprecedented restraints on network practices. Chairman John C. Ford holds the key) goes the ultimate way.

The networks feel the ultimate rap will encompass the two vital recommendations—"option time" practice which the Barrow report charges restrains competition and limits the exercise by the station of its programming responsibilities, and the multiple ownership rule on stations. While the report calls for limiting networks (and other multiple stations owners such as Storer, Westinghouse, Crosley, Time-Life, etc.) to three VHF outlets in the top 25 markets, this is regarded as merely an intermediate measure. Actually, it's contended, the ultimate aim is to limit the networks or any one else to a single V station ownership.

Timetable

One top network exec viewing the immediate future realistically estimated the following timetable: Within the next two years, the multiple ownership broadcasters would be stripped of one V. Within a period of the following two years they would lose another.

The alarms over the "option time" clause are serious. The networks maintain that the aboiltion of the prevailing practice assuming a continuing upgrading of business generally, could be nothing short of calamitous. Washington, Oct. 8.
Dr. Warren C. Baum of New York was appointed last week as chief of the Office of Network Study, established by the Federal Communications Commission to implement the recommendations of the report of the Network Study staff.

Dr. Baum has been a member of the Staff for nearly two years. Dean Roscoe L. Baryears. Dean Roscoe L. Bar-row, who directed the study, returned last week to the U. of Cincinnati College of Law.

NBC, CBS-TV Webs More Profitable In 1956 Than 0&0's

Washington, Oct. 8.

CBS and NBC made more money from their tv network operations last year than from their owned and operated tv stations while ABC o and o outlets accounted for the bulk of that network's profits, according to data contained in the report of the Network Study Staff to the Federal Compunications. Federal Communications Commission.

The report, which draws on figures collected by the FCC, puts ABC earnings in 1956 at $9,727,000 and the proportion contributed by the n and o stations as 73.9%.

Profits of CBS in 1956 are listed at $40,733,000 and the proportion accounted for by the o and o's as 45.1%.

Earnings of NBC for the same year are shown to be $34,910,000 and the proportion contributed by the o and o's as 47%.
The report shows that a large proportion of each network's profits come from its stations in the three top markets of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. In the case of ABC, they provided 68.8% of total o and o earnings. For CBS (which had only three VHF stations last year) they accounted

CBS (which had only three VHF stations last year) they accounted for 99.5%. For NBC they contributed 82.8%. CBS earned $86,000 on its UHF stations (Milwaukee and Hartford, Conn.) last year as compared to a loss of $130,000 in 1955 on its only UHF operation, according to the report. (CBS acquired its Hartford station last year.)

As long as VHF facilities are limited, prospects for a fourth national network comparable to the three major webs are dim, according to the report of the Network Study Staff submitted last week to the Federal Communications Commission.

The report finds that while net-work profits of NBC and CBS have risen to high levels in recent years, there are major obstacles to the entry of new webs.

"These barriers," it asserts "arise in part from the nature of the network-station affiliation arrangements and the mutual henefit derived therefrom, from the existing structure of A.T.&T. rates for interconnecting stations, and from certain economies of large scale operations in 'networking.'

operations in 'networking.'
"The principal factor, however, accounting both for the high concentration in 'networking' and for the effective barriers to the entry of new networks is the shortage of competitive tv station facilities in the VHF spectrum."

the VHF spectrum."
Unless there is a major technological change in the nature or form of tv, the report suggests, network operations "will continue to be characterized by a small number of firms enjoying substantial profits without the possibility that new networks will be able to enter and compete for these profits."

and compete for these profits."

While there is little likelihood in the near future for more nationwide networks, the report finds that "an additional competitive element exists in that the networks are in competition for national advertising business with the national spot system of advertising made up of national station representatives and independent program suppliers." It also sees a prospect for development of specialized "network" organizations such as National Telefilm Associates (NTA), Program Service, and the Sports Network.

"Although the existing degree of

"Although the existing degree of network concentration in the national ty advertising market is high," the report declares, "whether or not the present structure of networking is compatible with the networking is compatible with the public interest in an effectively competitive tv system cannot be conclusively determined until the possibilities of greater competition from national spot and specialized networking systems are examined.

networking systems are examined.

"The obscentration analysis, however, highlights the fact that the public interest in a workable system of competition can be achieved in part by encouraging competition between network and national spot tv. In this connection, the network practices in affiliation, rates, option time, compensation, and other relationships with affiliated stations play a vital part, since they bear directly on the ability of non-network organizations to compete effectively with the networks."

this preference is the advantages that may accrue to the network from affiliation with other of the stations held by the multiple owner. This preference is contrary to the Commission's policies of promoting local ownership and the widest diversification of ownership in the tv medium. Also, the preference granted to multiple owners effectively hinders competition among stations for affiliation; a licensee having a scarce facility in one community thereby obtains an unwarranted advantage in the competition for affiliation in another community.

On option time: "An antitrust analysis of option time on the basis of court decisions — indicates at least a strong possibility that it would be found to be a per se violation of Section I of the Sherman Act on analogy to the motion picture 'block-booking' practice condemned in the Paramount case. Substantial support for each of the elements of the 'block-booking' formula can be demonstrated. vassed.

Series would be Freberg's first regular solo outing on tv, since he broke in several years back on KTLA's "Time for Beany." Since "Beany," he's only done guest shots on various shows. (However, it's known that he and sidekick Pete Barnum once prepped a series format called "Scope" for NBC, because execs had said they wanted a "series with scope.")

Present format would integrate

Present format would integrate commercials into program, and is tentatively planned to include va-riety acts as well as comedy.

The TV film syndication business, though young, already has its traditional forms of communication. Take the way "action" series are talked about. First of all, "action" shows are going—well, "great guns." Some of them are even "white hot action" shows, which is a different thermal intensity altogether. It's the "white hot" ones that usually feature "39 blistering episodes."

Most of these shows have virtues on a Homeric, or compound-epithet, scale; for instance, "excitement-charged" or "thrill-packed." At the very least, a number of them are "brand-new." And inevitably they all lead to a more ennobling kind of action: "action at the cash register."

Many of these shows offer simple, straightforward "thrills and chills." A few declare themselves "a new dimension in TV." This may mean that when the hero is seen to kick a rock, you may be sure his foot won't go through it.

Every one of these shows has indescribable "opportunities for promotion and merchandising." Frequently, these are "built in"—which would seem to present the problem of prying them loose. But never mind now. The chief opportunity may be the "star" of the series. He's usually that "rugged, handsome star of stage, films and TV," and for the life of you, you can't remember in what you've ever seen him.

What are you supposed to do when you're confronted by an "action" series of this sort? You know very well, because you're told in words of one syllable: "wire, write, phone!"

You get exposed to this standard vocabulary long enough, and suddenly it stops meaning anything at all. We'd never use it with our new series, Boots and Saddles—the Story of the Fifth Cavalry, because it just wouldn't fit. If you're a non-network advertiser, looking for prime syndicated product, we'd rather just show you some actual episodes. No other language communicates as well.

Variety's weekly chart, based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau's latest reports, on feature films and their competition covers 120 cities. Each week, the 10 top-rated features in a particular city will be rotated.

Factors which would assist distributors, agencies, stations and advertisers in determining the effectiveness of a feature show in a specific market have been included in this Variety chart. Listed below is such pertinent information regarding reatures as their stars, release year, original production company and the present distributor, included wherever possible along with the title. Attention should be paid to such factors as the time and day, the high and low ratings for the measured teature period and share of audience, since these factors reflect the effectiveness of the festure, and audience composition, i.e. a late show at 11:15 p.m. would hardly have any children viewers, but its share of audience may reflect dominance in that time period. In the clitics where stations sell their feature programming on a multi-stripped basis utilizing the same theatrical throughout the week, a total rating for the total number of showings for the week is given, the total rating not taking into account the duplicated homes factor. Barring unscheduled switches in titles, the listed features for the particularly rated theatrical filmed show are as accurate as could be ascertained from a multiplicity of station and other data.

Although paying tribute to the accomplishments of the nets and their contributions to the dynamic growth of the visual medium, the voluminous document (1,400 pages) nevertheless strongly supports many of the basic recommendations in the staff report of ports many of the basic recom-mendations in the staff report of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and the report of House Antitrust Subcommittee.

It also gives considerable backing to the network monopoly report by Sen. John W. Bricker (Roll, and the bill by Sen. Bricker to place the webs under direct FCC regulation.

under direct FCC regulation.
What effort the report will have en Justice Department operations on the tv network front is still to be determined but its overtones would indicate closer collaboration between the two agencies. Significantly, it recommends that FCC chain broadcasting rules be applied directly to network as well as stations, and that, barring Justice objections, Congress be asked to provide the necessary authority.

asked to provide the necessary authority.

Perhaps the most far-reaching impact of the report, if adopted, would be en network ownership of stations. NBC would be required to divest itself of two of its five VHF stations, ABC of two, and CBS of one. Since the recommendations would limit multiple owners to three of the top 25 markets, it would be expected that the webs would keep their owned and operated outle's in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

This would mean that NBC

This would mean that NBC would dispose of Philadelphia and Washington, that ABC would sell San Francisco and Detroit, and that CBS would sell its notyet-established St. Louis operation. In place of these, the networks could have VHF stations in smaller markets. A period of three years is suggested for divestiture.

Other multiple owners would be affected, notably Westinghouse, RKO Teleradio and, possibly, Storer.

Storer.

Adoption of the recommendations, according to the report, will mean more freedom for tv stations in programming for the community: give independent producers greater access to station facilities; furnish more opportunities for greater access to station facilities; furnish more opportunities for newcomers to enter the station field; and provide the viewing public with a wider variety of tv services and program fare.

Goldman Sees % Formula as Answer To Rising Cost of Features-on-TV

As costs of feature product to distribs go up, it's inevitable that distribs will turn to a percentage formula for selling theatricals to tv, according to Harold Goldman, exee v.p. at National Telefilm Association.

When "Mama" returned on the CBS-TV network last December, for its eighth season, going on film for the first time, the net only aired 10 out of the 26 episodes be fore it was yanked. Now in syndication, 16 of the episodes are firstrun, never before aired. Judging from the "Love for Sale" episode, its good to have this series around its good to have this series around. Friday's (4) outing concerned the way of young love with a vamp. Caught in the trap was Dick Van Patten, the son, and Nancy Rennick, the wholesome girl friend. The femme fatile was played by Monica May, who like the rest turned in a competent performance, although she had a tendency to overplay her part. Of course running through the entire course of the story was the venerable mama, Peggy Wood, a winner from away back.

mama, Peggy Wood, a winner from away back.

In the midst of westerns, who-dunits, highly artificial situation comedies and blood and guts adventure skeins, "Mama" stands out as a series concerned with human values. How a family reacts to war, the concern of a mother whose son is tangled with a superficial girl were the anchors for the episode. Scripter Frank Gabrielson did not delve too deeply into the situation, keeping a light touch and the serio-comedy flavor of the series, but whatever the scripting weaknesses, the episode delivered a charm and engaged the viewers' interest in the people.

Judson Laire as papa and Rosemary Rice as the daughter, as well as other performers, were their usual competent selves. Horo.

Format has emcee Richard Hayes planning a shindig at a U. S. Army Camp. Helping along in the assignment is Sue Ann Langdon and a western and country team F. On hand as a guest was vocalist Dorothy Collins who belted "Sometime I'm Happy" in good style. Future guest stars on the program will include Gisele MacKenzle, Martha Wright, Jonathan Winters and Denise Lor.

A segment of the program dealt with the pictorial story of a recruit in the guided missile field, attempting in documentary fashion to show the opportunities to learn a new field offered by the Army.

Ziv, helping local sponsors to create goodwill in their hometowns, has provided special film messages for the current United Community Fund Drive, delivered by the stars of three Ziv programs. To date, the 20-second-appeals have been ordered for over 300 markets.

National Telefilm Associates is attempting to give public affairs stature to an otherwise straight action series, "Official Detective," by tieing in with sheriffs and police commissioners of certain syndication markets. NTA hopes thereby to sugarcoat the series slightly for advertisers who are chary of an onus from sponsoring crime and violence features. An advertiser in point is Peter Hand Brewery in Chi, which is looking for a little prestige with its ratings.

For the purpose of "prestigitying" its property, NTA is willing to fly out a number of law ehforcers from several locals to Hollywood to film them in brief tag-on messages anent how ordinary citizens can help the crime busters, etc. To everyone's advantage, presumably, the local lawman is an eventual candidate for public office. French TV to Aid Of Film Biz With Preview of Ideas

Here is a case where burgeoning video is coming to the aid of the theatrical film rather than presenting further competition and obstacles in a time of still shaky pic conditions here. Believing that one of the main problems in pix today is the lack of unusual subject matter, and the prohibitive production costs, a new tv show production costs, at her its show will give previews of new film ideas in monthly hour shows which public opinion and reaction will peg as desirable or undesirable film fodder. It will be called "Point of Departure." It begins its November in November.

in November.

Denise Tual, head of Promofilm, has come up with this idea which she will do in conjunction with vid commentator Francis Chalais. Writers and directors will get a chance to present ideas they have always wanted to film. The talk with the writer or director will be live while scenes on the cherished subject, made by the creator, will be shown in film form during the program.

It is felt that besides making a program this may point the way to cautious film producers. Unique and provocative subjects may thus get screened again for mutual benefits of pic people and the public, provided the resulting films, if they are made, are of high calibre.

A public referendum will be held in conjunction with these programs to determine tastes and attitudes towards these newer film subjects to see if they are really wanted. Animators point out that in the U.S., where video is a direct competitor of films, a healthy influence has come from tv via new directors, stories and ideas being transferred from one medium to another. Here video would serve as a testing ground rather than a another. Here video would serve as a testing ground rather than a creative aspect of its own, which it has not achieved as yet.

TV Rights to Italy's Soccer Games Becomes A Big National Issue

Rome, Oct. 8.

A silent battle is currently in progress over the television rights to Italy's Sunday-afternoon footto Italy's Sunday-afternoon foot-ball (soccer) games. Issue is a vital one, it's felt here, as football is far and away the national sport and pastime (witness the large sums spent each week in the foot-ball pools, etc.), and setowners have long clamored for more than the current plc clip coverage of selected, games. (Radio handling of soccer games is to broadcast the second half of a previously undis-closed game every Sunday).

closed game every Sunday).

Difference is one of money, and it has held up coverage to date (season has already started) despite two meetings between RAI-TV the national telenet, and the Football League. League at first asked a flat $150,000 for the 34-Sunday season. RAI refused, countering with a $40,000 offer for the same period of coverage by its video setup. The League then dropped its sights to some $135,000, but RAI, at least to date, has stood fast.

Observers here are speculating that RAI may want to make a legal issue out of the controversy, citing "press freedom" as it's felt that the RAI offer is relatively low, especially when compared to the figures the Italo telenet hands out for other shows and presentations with much less potential popularity than the football games. Felt also that a $120,000 figure would be fair to both parties, working out to roughly $35,000 per game, relatively low when compared with the potential listener gain. RAI has reportedly spent up to $75,000 for a single variety show in the past.

London, Oct. 8.

Stanley Kramer, here for the opening of 'The Pride and the Passion' at the London Pavillion tonight (Tues.), said he was sure producers would welcome the introduction of pay tv, as this method was a surefire way of recouping investments quickly.

Kramer, speaking at a press conference, said that if for example, a picture cost $1,000,000 to make, it would be able to show a substantial profit from one night's screening on tv. On an average Thursday night in America a tv audience of 1,000,000 homes would not be an overestimate. At 50 cents a time, even after overheads, it would show more than a fair profit.

He visualized the time in the near future, when normal household tv equipment would take up most of a fair sized wall. When that came about there would no longer be any room left for the arguments that suggested the big theatre screen could never be replaced by the small tv screen. Kramer added that pay tv could be the saviour of the film industry.

cause that reputation to fall flat on its face.
The play istarted off with a promising comedy idea. A newlywed was persuaded to take out a zany insurance policy against losing the affection of his wife. His business crashed and he set out to turn his wife against him in order to cash in on the $56,000 policy. Meanwhile, a fake psychiatrist made a play for the wife. This could have been developed farcically, satirically or simply as a genial light comedy, but the authors bogged down their own idea with limp talog and scrappy situations.
Leonard Brett's mannered production did little to help a struggling cast.
Joan Greenwood, just back from W. S., Brian Reece and Robert Urquhart battled bravely with the monumental task of breathing a little life into these sorry proceedings but only Reece emerged unscathed from this disappointing evening.

NTA will hold onto the "Rocket 56" feature film package, which it originally sold to WATV and which, more recently, was on the block for resale in New York. Moreover, it is expected that the station under the new management will recapture the "NTA Film Network" from rival WPIX as soon as the WPIX contract ends.

WATV and WAAT call letters will be changed to WNTA-TV and WNTA AM & FM when the FCC approval is given. Before going on the air under the telefilm distrib's aegis, the station will be closed for a week.

Mosque Theatre Bidg, in Newark, has been taken on a long-term lease.

In past weeks, Rosenhaus, uncertain of a sale to NTA, began to make sharp cutbacks in his operating expense. A week ago, the biggest was made. Approximately $9,000 a week was sald to have been shaved from executive sal-

During the period when the NTA-Rosenhaus dickers were on shaky ground, when NTA claimed to have pulled out entirely, there was talk of United Artists and Zenith both showing an interest in the actions. It seems the anytery Zenith both showing an interest in the stations. It seems the anxiety to sell WATV and WAAT stemmed from intramural conflict, in which the Pollocks wanted out as quickly as possible. Rosenhaus has since denied that there had been any serious trouble in the family.

Purchase price gives NTA 100% of the stock of Atlantic Television Inc. and Bremer Broadcasting Corp., the companles controlling he Newark stations. NTA also owns KMGM-TV, Minneapolis, pending FCC okay.

As a former laborer in the film commercial vineyards, I feel hidden commercials give the "blurb" producer an advantage over the client. Now that commercials can't be seen, how can the client criticize them? Or better yet, even if the producer falls to meet the production deadlines, how will the client know the difference? This is indeed a boon for the commercial indeed in boon for the commercial indeed a boon for the commercial

A friend of mine even suggests that commercials be a half-hour long and the program content be subliminal. But, this might lead to client's payments being very subliminal.

Seriously, I am against this sort of mass manipulation in the communications industry. The moral objections might subliminalize us right into direct government regulation.

ning power, the relative longevity of syndicated skelns.

Station by station selling has built a staying power for its commercially good product through a variety of practices. They include: the widespread growth and virtual standardization of the 39 plus 13 method of selling; the adoption as a standard operation procedure by stations of rerunning product, ranging from a one-a-week basis to a Monday through Friday stripping operation; some of the most successful skeins have gone into second and third year production.

Some of the hardlest skeins that have bucked the passage of time include: "Ramar of the Jungle," "I Led Three Lives," "Cisco Kdi," "Badge T14," "Count of Monte Cristo," and "Mr. District Attorney," to expose more than 12,000.

It seems, counting all the net-work; national spot and local ad-vertisers who use filmed commer-cials, the time is just not available to expose more than 12,000.

The one possibility for creating a larger market for filmed blurbs is that advertisers will use new spiels at a faster rate than currently is their habit. It is hard to say—without generalizing or going into a very lengthly and exhaustive study—just how long the life of a commercial is today. But, apart from many made for network use, there are relatively few spot or local blurbs which are not used several times, or even a few dozen times, over. Turnover would have to be mightly quick, certain sources state. over. In nover would have to be mighty quick, certain sources state, for there to be any need for ap-preciably more than 12,000 com-mercials a year at any time in the future.

There is the distinct possibility that the gross intake of the commercial producers will eventually exceed the $52,500,000 quoted herein, but that will be the result of additional increases in the cost of labor. Hence, a new high will not mean any greater net earning power for the telefilm commercial makers.

Young Sez Nielsen 'Double-Talking'

Adam Young Inc., which last week blasted Nielsen for "forgeting radlo," lashed out again this week by stating that they had contacted 106 timebuyers from the leading 20 agencies, 91 of whom had not heard from the Nielsen format. A Nielsen representative according to Young claims that he took a survey of some 250 time-buyers.

Young further contended that Nielsen is now double-talking. Nielsen, according to Frank Boehm, in charge of the Young research staff, says that the reasonresearch staff, says that the reasonthey are now reporting ratings rather than homes (in the case of the metropolitan area) is that all the buyers they queried wanted ratings for their clients. Nielsen in the past has stressed the homes reached in lieu of percentage ratings because, according to Nielsen, "the latter are misleading, and make it difficult to compare one area with another. Furthermore, accurate information on homes reached is essential to a sound determination of cost per homes

Bobby Brookes: "This is The Night" (RCA Victor) introduces a new singer with a good set of pipes. Brookes registers best on the uptempo ballads which he belts in straightforward swinging style. His stylistic approach to the slew ballads is less certain. However, he's always a pleasing performer on a repertory that includes such oldies as "Suddenly," "Same Old Saturday Night," "Am I Blue" and some new entries.

"Kurt Weill's Suite from The Threepenny Opera" (MGM), an outstanding piece of show music in its original form, has been framed in a new and interesting format here as a quasi-longhair piece originally prepared by Weill 1929 for a symphonic performance. The various melodic themes from the opera are skillfully played by the MGM Chamber Orchestra under Itler Solomen's baton. Philharmonic & 802 Deadlocked On Eve of Preem

The N. Y. Philharmonic, whose season was slated to open tomorrow (Thurs.), and Local 802, N.Y. wing of the American Federation of Musicians, were completely stalemated in negotiations for a new pact. Following a rejection of the Philharmonic's offer Monday (?) of a $7.50 raise, the N. Y. City Commission of Labor, Harold Felix, called for a parley of both sides in his office today (Wed.). The Philharmonic placed ads in the dailles today notifying its subscribers that there would be no concert Thursday.

Basic issue revolves around Local 802's demand for a longer season and higher wages. After an opening bid for a 36-week season, as against the current 29 weeks, the union lowered its demand to 32-week season and a $25 weekly raise over the current minimum of $145. The Philharmonic management has stated that its annual deficit of over $400,000 makes it impossible for them to meet the union's demands.

In its century-old existence, Philharmonic postponed one concert after Lincoln's assassination, cancelled one on President Roosevelt's death. The N. Y. Philharmonic, whose

B'way Needs New Cleffers, Fryer Tells BMI Forum

Robert Fryer, legit producer, told a forum of young songwriters that Broadway needs new writing talent since composers and authors who have already arrived are "well nigh unapproachable as far as the average producer is concerned." The forum was held last week in New York under the auspices of Broadcast Music Inc.

According to Allam Becker, in charge of the legit musical department at BMI, additional symposiums will be held in the near future to discuss various phases of theatre activity and to make the trade aware of the new talent potential among the younger writers. Lehman Engel, musical director, kicked off the forum series last month.

Court of Appeals decision holding sellers responsible for pirated disks (see separate story), Harry Fox, publishers' agent and trustee, is planning to crack down on all others who have been involved in the manufacture of bootlegged records. Julian T. Abeles, lawyer for the group of publishers represented by Fox, is particularly aiming at those who do the pressing for the pirates and already has one suit against an indie plant in the works. Abeles holds that those who make the tapes, and the stampers for the pirates, as well as those involved in other phases of the manufacturing process, are also liable for damages.

Some large retailers, meantime, expressed concern over the implications of the court's ruling making retail outlets responsible for damages. Abraham Lowenthal, lawyer for Goody's, indicated that a conference of retailers, publishers and disk companies might be necessary to set up clearance machinery so that dealers could be protected.

Otherwise, Lowenthal stated, retailers like Goody would have to ask the record companies for some kind of guarantee or indemification before they would agree to handle the company's product. He pointed out that while the major companies might be able to afford such a setup, it would hit some of the indies.

Col Jettisons LP Bargain Counter; Eve Other Lures

Columbia Records is calling a halt to its price reduction programs. Campaigns were a con-sumer promotion which used sliced prices on LP's as retail traffic Iures.

According to Hal B. Cook, Columbia's sales veep, the price programs have served their purpose in building retail traffic and stimulating renewed interest in Col's catalog. The lowprice pitches had been applied to new releases tied in with catalog items. Cook added that the diskery will now concentrate on other forms of merchandising.

Getting pinkslipped in Col's merchandising programs are the "Buy ways" campaign. "Buy of the Month" which offered one pop LP and one longhair LP each month at a special $2.98 tab, was launched in May, 1956, as a summer promotion. It's held on since but Col will end its run in December.

The "Buyways" plan offered one LP at $1.98 for every one pur-chased at the regular $3.98 price. It was launched in January as a two-month mood music promotion under a "Buy of Your Dreams" heading. The following two-month concentration was on showtune sets and used the "Buy of Broad-way" tag. For May and June, Col pushed its jazz catalog with a "Jazz Buy Columbia" pitch.

RCA Victor's TV Kiddyaps

The hoss opera epidemic on television is now spreading into the disk field via RCA Victor. Latter company, which has been, stepping up it kidisk releases, has rounded up virtually every western show on tv for kiddie platter song material.

Lineup of oater shows to be spotlighted in Victor disks are as follows: "Tales of the Texas Ranger," "Wagon Train," "Wyatt Earp," "Cheyenne," "Broken Arrow," "Jim' Bowle," "Restless Gun," "The Lone Ranger," "Gunsmoke" and Tales of Wells Fargo." All of the theme songs from these shows will be utilized. Victor, which is packaging its kiddie LPs in polyethelyne bags at a $1.98 price, has had a 130% increase in its kiddie biz over last year. Some 60% of the total sales are registered on the supermarket and chain store racks. At the same time, sales through regular retail channels have also gone up sharply over last year. Victor is now on a regular kiddie release schedule of two of three disks per month. Included in the program are 45rpm single releases at. 49c per platter. All platters are being packaged in four-color jackets for counter-display impact.

Jimmie Rodgers' Goldisk Jimmie Rodgers has moved into parking before the gridition games and putting on its elaborate halftime shows. The Musicians' Union, Local 47, called on James C. Petrillo, AFM prexy, to support the section that "membership restrictions based on race be eliminated," as embodied in local's anti-segregation resolu-tion introduced at the recent AFM convention.

J. J. Robbins-Fine Arts Suit Vs. R&S. Cleffers Settled in New York

The J. J. Robbins and Fine Arts Music Corp. suit against R&S En-terpirses Inc. (Samuel Senar, Joe Raymond, Teddy Brooks) and songwriters Frank Reardon and Ernest G. Schwiekert was discontinued and

Raymond, Teddy Brooks' and songwriters Frank Reardon and Ernesti G. Schwiekert was discontinued and settled. A motion to show cause why the defendants should not specifically perform was withdrawn last week. Suit had been filed in N.Y.
Supreme Court.

According to the complaint, Robbins and R&S entered into an agreement on June 18, 1957, whereby latter turned over to Robbins the exclusive services of cleffers Reardon and Schwiekert for his Fine Arts Music firm. R&S had the writers under exclusive contract until 1961 and in consideration Robbins agreed to transfer 50% of the stock of Fine Arts to R&S and clear any liabilities owed by Fine Arts up to the signing of the contract. Fine Arts was to publish the music of the writers and Raymond and Sendar were to be elected as officers in the music firm to assure equal control in the Fine Arts' board of directors.

The complaint claimed that in reliance upon the signing of the contract, Robbins negotiated with various producers in order to obtain a production for the writers.
He finally set Reardon and Schwiekert for "High and Happy" with producer Arthur Klein. Robbins also held auditions to promote the comedy. But, the complaint had charged before the settlement, R&S breached the contract and refused to execute it. Complaint also charged that the defendants had threatened to assign and dispose of the rights in the musical compositions.

Inside Stuff-Music

Demand upon all radio-ty station operators in Mexico by women of the Mexican Legion of Decency that they omit totally all songs of Agustin Lara, vet top romantic songwriter who is a big name on Mexican air and screen, was answered with typical Latin definess by Emilio Azcarraga Sr., boss of Televicentro, which ho uses air stations XEW, XEQ, XEX and XHTV. The women explained they deemed words of Lara songs "offensive to society" and that they had beefed because of the Pope's recent call upon Roman Catholic bishops throughout the world to prevent radio-ty from becoming "vehicles of moral corruption." "The Intimate Hour of Agustin Lara," upon which the old maestro nearly always appears, has long been a top standard program of the Azcarraga stations. Without saying yes or no to the Legionettes, Azcarraga declared: "During the 27 years I have presented radio (he opened XEW in 1930) I have always endeavored to have the musical and artistic programs unify the Mexican family. It is a fact that a large proportion of Mexican workers prefer to gather early in their homes for radio-ty diversion) instead of squandering their earnings in centers of vice."

Showtunes on Disks 'Come Clean'

'West Side Story' Album Not the Only Crossover From B'way to Be Altered

The censoring of a showtune lyric for a disk conversion is not new with "West Side Story," which Columbia Records sapoloed into the groove last week. In the "Story" waiting, a blue Yiddishism (rhynes with cluck) was changed. According to Stanley Green, a historian of the musicomedy. theatre, RCA Victor did it. recently with Bob Merrill's "New Girl In Town." A line from the tune "On The Farm" which mentioned "vicious sons of bitches," was changed to "lecherous, treachmerous cousins." Green also points to Columbia's original cast set of Cole Poter's "Kiss Me Kate" where a line from "Tve Come to Wive It Wealthly in Parua," which originally read "God damn nose." "Sometimes, happill,; times change; and with the times ethical values. There's apparently no rule of the production of "Porgy and Bess."

was switched to "goldarned nose."
There's apparently no rule of thumb in the waxing of a showtune.
For example: The Cole Porter rhyme for "Anything Goes"—
"Good authors, too, who once knew better words now use four letter words." A RCA Victor album of the score with Helen Gallagher retains the original line but a Columbia Records workover with Mary Martin minimizes it to "three letter words."

The Oscar Hammerstein 2d lyric has to "Ol' Man River" also has gone through several disk transitions, stand the original line was "Niggers all work on the Mississippi." It was subsequently edited to "Colored rope folks all work on the Mississippi."

It became "People all work on the Mississippi."

In Columbia's clicko "My Fair Lady Package," a line from "Get Me To The Church On Time" was altered for the waxing. On the stage, Stanley Holloway sings "For God's sake get me to the church on time." In the album it's "Be sure to get me to the church on time." On lyric changes, Columbia prexy Goddard Lieberson had this to say in a foreword to Cot's album of Gershwins' "Porgy and Bess." "Sometimes, happll, times change; and with the times ethical values. It seemed proper when we turned to the production of "Porgy and Bess' to eliminate certain words in the lyrics which, in racial terms, had proven offensive, and the first person to join enthusiastically in person to join enthusiastically in the making of these changes was Ira Gershwin who has supplied new lyrics when they seemed de-sirable."

This year's show is hewing more closely to the original concept of the hl-fi movement since it's accenting the component parts rather than the fully packaged equipment. Such majors as RCA Victor and Columbia, both of which have extensive hi-fi lines, are not represented in the exhibition this year. Neither is Magnavox, another major manufacturer of fully packaged phono equipment.

In recent years, the packaged hi-fi units have captured a big part of the market. But while much of the packaged equipment was regarded as meeting minimum hi-fi standards, many low-priced units also flooded the market with a hi-fi tag. As execs in the trade see it, "it's impossible to get hi-fi for $49.95." It has been feared that the spurious claims for the cheap equipment will hurt the hi-fi movement generally and there have been moves on the part of some manufacturers to set up hi-fi standards for equipment using such a tag.

N.Y. Philharmonic Gets Into the Oct. On Col's LP Sked

The N.Y. Philharmonic is Co-lumbia Records' peg for October. Diskery has launched a "Philhar-monic Month" for October with the monic Month" for October with the release of three new LP packages. Key item in the Philharmonic push is the first-time recording of Beethoven's 9th on a single LP. It's Col's Masterwork "Buy of the Month" and conducted by Bruno Walter. (Col's "BOM" program offers an LP at a $2.98 tab. The pop "BOM" for October is Sammy Kaye's "Popular A merican, Waltzes". The other two Philharmonic issues feature Leonard Bernstein conducting the orch in a two-pocket set of Handel's "Messiah, which will sell for $7.98, and Dimitri Mitropolous conducting "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

To promote the Philharmonic

To promote the Philharmonic program on an educational level, Columbia is giving each of its 37 distributors a complete catalog of the symphs LP's (55 in all) as a donation to a local school or library.

donation to a local school or library.

Riding along with the Philharmonic push are about 30 other LP's. In the current issue, Col is attempting a new packaging idea for its pop LP releases. It's experimenting with a "double cover" presentation. In the past, front of the jacket sleeve usually was a photo presentation of the artist with a liner note on the back. On the new Polly Bergen and Four Lads packages, diskery was dispensed with liner notes and gone for photos on both sides.

ASCAP WAVING STICK AT 'NO LICENSE' AM'ERS

ASCAP is continuing its drive against radio stations which are allegedly playing tunes from the Society's catalog without a license. In most cases to date, the stations have been small indies whose licenses from ASCAP were suspended due to lack of payment. Latest suit against a radio outlet was filed last week in Pennsylvania Federal Court against the Rossmoyne Corp., owner of WCMB vania Federal Court against the Rossmoyne Corp., owner of WCMB in Harrisburg. Pa. Frank Music, an ASCAP affiliate, claimed that several songs from the "Guys and Dolls" score were played without authorization. Plaintiff asks for an injunction and $250 statutory damages for each unauthorized performance, together with court costs and attorneys' fees.

Gets 'Pinocchio' (NBC)

Although NBC-TV's got the upcoming "Pinocchio" spec, Columbia Records has the album and is running fast to get it into the market to tie in with the telecasting this Sunday (13).

The original cast album was cut last week with Mickey Rooney Fran Allison, Stubby Kaye and Martyn Green.

Rooney is signed with CBS, Col's parent company, but a prior commitment put the "Pinocchio" stanza on NBC-TV.

Score for "Pinocchio" was written by Alec Wilder (music) and William Engevick (lyrics). It's being published by Howie Richmond.

The court completely rejected the defendants' claim that to make the dealers and distributors liable for the acts and omissions of manufacturers over whom they have no control would place on "unduly onerous" burden on them. "This burden," the decision stated, "is not unduly onerous; most reputable manufacturers can easily demonstrate to their customers that their records are authorized. When dealing with unknown manufacturers the burden on a purchaser for resale to exercise caution is no greater than that required of the buyer of any merchandise which might infringe."

The court also rejected the defendants' arguments that since the plaintiffs had already made a separate settlement with the manufacturer, this relieved them of any claims. On this the court made a rulling of key significance for the publishers. It stated:

"To assess the impact of this settlement on the situation presented here, it is necessary first to determine whether the liability of the defendant-infringers under the Copyright Act is to any extent joint. We think not; we hold that the liability of each infringer, whether he be manufacturer, distributor; or retailer, is several. In short, even if the manufacturer finally complies with the compulsory licensing provision of the Copyright Act, the publisher still retains the separate right to recover from each distributor and dealer.

The Appeals Court remanded the case to the lower N. Y. district court to determine the amount of damages and legal fees. Rejecting a bid to get treble damages, the court limited the plaintiffs to the statutory maximum of 2c per tune on the LPs from each of the dendants. With each LP containing 12 tunes, each defendant will be asked to pay 24c for each disk sold by him. While the defendants have the right to appeal the case to the U. S. Supreme Court, industry lawyers point out that there's only a slim chance of the case reaching that bench since such applications are rarely granted.

UA's move into the music biz follows a long established Hollywood pattern. Warner Bros. has its Music Publishers Holding Corp. publishing subsidiary while Loew's and 20th-Fox are partners in the Big Three (Robbins, Feist & Miller) combine. Loew's also owns MGM Records. Paramount Pictures has its Famous-Paramount music operation. Universal Pictures, meantime, is tied to the music big by virtue of the fact that it's owned by Decca Records. Columbia Pictures also has its own publishing company via its deal with Shapiro-Bernstein, RKO, which embarked upon a publishing-diskery venture last year, has deactivated both operations.

A proposed working visit to the States by Lord Adrian Foley, the plano-pounding peer, scheduled to coincide with the Royal tour next month, looks like falling flat because of low money offers.

Foley planned a 14-day trip, playing one-nighters at private functions, accompanied by a trio, but his London agent, Derek Boulton, said that offers of around $1,000 a night were not considered high enough by the artist.

Theatre Guild, a community theatre organization, was in dress rehearsal for "Sabrina Fair," skedded to open last week (30), when the force-out went into effect.

the Siver Slipper Corn., stating its position. Special rep Ed X. Russell's notification of Equity's stand was this:

"Please be informed that this (Theatre Guild of Las Vegas Inc.) is a non-union amateur group and, in accordance with your obligations to the American Guild of Variety Artists, our sister union, and other unions and associations, you have agreed that you will only employ union people in the Silver Slipper. Should you allow this local non-union amateur group to perform in the Silver Slipper, you are in violation of your agreement."

Theatre Guild prexy Andrew Berg, taking exception to Equity's ruling on the Silver Slipper, pointed out that "our organization is not in the employ of the Silver Slipper or anyone else. We are a non-profit community organization brought together to present the best of theatre for the Las Vegas area. We, and other little theatres throughout the nation, supply Actors' Equity with members ready for eligibility after performing and learning the ropes in such non-professional theatres as ours. Our first season in Las Vegas has brought a new scope of living theatre to the community. 'Sabrina Fair' was to have been our sixth production, and perhaps the most ambitious to date. We have spent countless hours in rehearsal, building sets and getting the play ready for the run from Monday through Saturday night. It will have to be postponed indefinitely under the circumstances until we find a suitable place for holding the production."

Berg said that Theatre Guild's previous shows, which had been presented at the Hacienda Hotel's Palomino Room, were ousted from there by AGVA and Equity, but the group had an understanding that the Silver Silpper ballroom was a public hall not under the jurisdiction of either union.

Saundra Meek, local highschool girl and terper at the Riviera Hotel, had to be withdrawn from cast because of her AGVA membership, as was Bill Willard, director of "Sabrina Fair," who also had an important role. Willard formerly was an entertainer in the Silver Silpper show.

COMICS CUED FOR NEW ROLES

Scorecard on B.O. Winners & Losers [YE OTHER WORK Eruption at AGVA Board Meeting At Feld Bros.' Amphitheatre in D. C.

Washington, Oct. 8.

How much does it cost to operate a summer of varied entertainment in a large outdoor arena?

The Feld Bros., who operate Washington's Carter, Barron Amphitheatre, claim their overall nut for a three months' season was close to $600,000 and that they lost a little money. Past summer's lineup included Jose Greco and Pearl Primus dance troupes, New York Opera Festival, Louis Armstrong and Jazz Festival, Cab Calloway and Czark Jubilee, Jimmy Durante, Jerry Lewis, Bob Hope, Ballet Theatre, and Harry Belafonte.

Boxoffice losers included the Jimmy Durante opera, included the Jimmy Durante stand, the opera, Boxoffice losers included the Jimmy Durante stand, the opera, the split week of Cab Calloway and Ozark Jubilee. Finally the sudden illness of Belatonte forced the Felds to refund $110,000 taken in advance sale for the 11-day booking. Under their contract the Amphitheatre orch—a summer pop group composed of members of the National Symphony—received partial pay for the 11 days.

The Felds pay a small daily rental plus a percentage of the gross to the U. S. Public Parks operation which owns Carter Barron. In addition, there is a basic fee of $1,750 weekly to keep the place clean after performances, Irveled says, On top of this must be added the guaranteed minimum for the 20 musicians. large staff of ushers, unionized boxoffice, four electricians, a carpenter, propman, curtain man, public address system man on a regular basis, plus extra union stagehands for certain attractions.

to rebuild some of their former top earners. Problem of major concern is now a crop of comics whose weekly salary within the past few years has been decimated and whose bookings have become scarcer.

Many percenters feel that these performers still have a lot of earning power within show biz, but talents have to be redirected to fields where scarcity now exists. It's felt, by some of them, that if they can be induced to try their hand at writing, for example, they could be spotted on television scripting staffs at takes several times their present salary. Some of the comics have been encouraged to try their hand at submitting scripts. Difficulty in some cases lies in the fact that these comedians have been buying scripts throughout their professional career, and redirection on this tangent becomes extremely difficult. Another effort is an attempt to make straight actors out of these comics. Some have been doing a few odd jobs on the summer circuits and there are some possibilities that they can stay in this field. Some are being persuaded to go in for straight legit during the winter season.

There are drawbacks in each instance. Comics frequently find their best season during the summer when the seasonal resorts buy all that are available, and they wind up with the major part of their earnings during these months. At any time of year, it's difficult to make the performer take a drastic cut in salary even to try new fields. However, some pressures are still being exerted to make the change.

From the agency viewpoint, the reshuffling of talents is a sound project. Should any hit as writers or actors, they remain on the agency's roster. If they fail to do so, it's likely that many enter the agency and personal management ranks with little training for the job, and thus create a lot of harm within the industry.

3 PEELERS ARRESTED IN UNION CITY, N. J

Three dancers were arrested Sunday (6) for allegedly giving an indecent performance at the Hudson Theatre, Union City, N.J. It was the first arrest at the house since it was reopened last month. Held in $1,000 bail were Mickey Russell, Terry Lee and Melba Morris.

The Hudson was reopened recently after a panel of Union City businessmen agreed to act as censors for the show. The business community argued that the theatre brought in a lot of out-of-town trade and its closing would result in a loss to the city. The city council last season passed legislation outlawing peeling in public, but house was allowed to open when a censor unit was set up.

Defendants along with the union include former national administrative secretary Jack Irving, and Jackie Bright, president at the time of Jones' dismissal and who now holds Irving's job.

Among other poiats sought by Jones is an injunction forbidding AGVA from taking away his life membership card. He declares that only the juntor's convention can rescind this membership since it's granted by the convention.

Attorneys in the case are William J. Walker of Washington, representing Jones, and the firm of Towney, Updike, Cartier & Rogers, also Washington, for AGVA.

"But McCarthy told hitton the wanted to sign the lease—and make the effort' afterward." McCarthy finally moved the Cork Club elsewhere.

When Boudreaux heard about dickering, he was managing the Briar Club, a similar operation to International, but without entertainment feature. International corporation had afready been formed with 1,000 shares of stock, and with Porter Parris, Shamorck general manager, Jim Spring, manager, and Sperl Ellison, Hilton vice president, as directors. Sperl gave Boudreaux a verbal contract and a fixed salary.

International now has a staff of about 75, mostly walters, but rents rooms, furniture, sitverware, etc., from Hilton chain. Food is also purchased from Shamrock Catering Service.

Boudreaux says the club grosses "about $100,000 a month on the average," and spends $17,000 to $26,000 a month on talent. About two-thirds of talent figure goes to acts, he said, which are generally booked for two-week stanzas, where possible, Remainder goes for bands. Swann was found guilty at the trial.

Inference had been made that Swann had conferred with Abramson on being booked on cruises and therefore wanted action favorable to him. This was denied by Swann at the trial. Major charge was that Swann had, without authorization, revealed discussions that had taken place at an AGVA board meeting when he demanded that Bright repeat his statements in the presence of Abramson.

The Swann tiff becomes increasingly important as a means of measuring opposition that is springing up against the present administration. There are some important differences between Bright and Abramson on the administration of the welfare fund, and it has beeen charged by someboard members that Bright is seeking to dominate the non-partisan makeup of that body.

It has also been charged that since Abramson deals primarily in ruise dates: the hoard retailated

It has also been charged that since Abramson deals primarily in cruise dates, the board retaliated by raising cruise date minimums so that it will no longer be treated as a club date but as regular work. Thus, for a seven-day cruise, sach will be $125 for principals, and should cruise last an additional day, salary will be one-seventh extra. Organization expects to move into its new site at the end of this month, with formal dedication around Thanksgiving Day.

New clubhouse is located in the mansion once occupied by the American Physics Society. New quarters will have eating and bar facilities for members and guests as well as gymnasium, steam room and the traditional card room.

On this time around she performs her calisthenics at the shrine of a sacred goat and an occasional flash of red powder. Decked out as a geisha, she soon undecks her habliments behind a screen that has holes bigger than a manhole cover and does her ritual before the goat with bodily gyrations, a bump here and a grind there. For most of her skin-crawl she gives her well-shaped back to the sitters to let their imagination run amok. What has been for years a striptease is still that and no more. Her frame is large and her fame at such exercises wide, and to her credit she is a skilled practitioner at her dubious art.

Arden Orch (10); $2 cover.

Dorothy Shay returns to the Empire room after two years showing signs of outgrowing the stereotyped patterns developed around her early click material. Best response is for her newer material, a torchy takeoff on "Stout Hearted Men" and a novelty "You Gotta Have Charm." The Park Avenue Hillbilly fares well when she introduces the unexpected into her patter and drawled songalogs. This quality is lacking in the more weather-beaten repertoire which is appropriately abbreviated. Most successful trademarked material is a "Story of My Life" medley which gets a sock delivery.

Miss Shay is a well poised performer, and she makes a fine appearance in her gold gown both nostage and wandering through the house. Her peppery patter keeps the house lively through the show. Accompanist Dick Emmons contributes to a smoothly running performance.

Jackie Kannon is an frequent repeater at the Chez who this time does one of the sharpest warmup jobs this club has seen. The basic patterns of his comic routine are familiar here but plenty of fresh peppery comments are house rockers. Kannon is on for less than 25 minutes. In this time he alternates with deadpan and punchy lines, song bits and a flubbing magico act that rate him a big share of the credit for the success of this show.

The house line gets taller every show. Performance-wise the new Chez Adorables show a little better than previously but there is still an uncomfortable awkwardness in the routines. In a low-pitched voice to his own piano accompaniments Nino Nanni dramatically recites or warbles soags that tell stories, salute little boys and romantically address the opposite sex. Touches of satiric or other humor pleasingly punctuate the dramatics occasionally. Brief sallies into Italian and French lend variety.

It's a brand of entertainment that seems to satisfy patrons of this tony Flame Room. In consequence, Nanni apparently has taken his place among the bistro's half-dozen or more "regulars," having been brought back currently for the third time in as many years. Since his bow here as an unknown, the performer boasts an Ed Sullivan tw show appearance, inbreasing his boxoffice stature perhaps.

On this occasion Nanni offers some new material along with mostly perennial favorites that his fans undoubtedly would demand and without which his performance wouldn't be complete. His fancy pianistics and vivid vocalistics runte gamut from the near-classic to New Orleans dixieland.

Nanni receives flawless assistance from Don McGrane and his muscicans. A well-filled room greeted him at his opening dinner show. He's here until Oct. 24 when songsress Carmel Quinn takes over for her initial Flame Room engagement.

In her first local stand, Roberta Sherwood lives up to her press notices. Her fortnight here may set an Empire Room attendance record. Thrush, in a plain black dress and sans makeup, strolls through the room, shaking hands with patrons and, opening with "Love is Many Splendored," never departs from w.k. tunes in her sock 40-minute routine.

There's no doubt that the packed room was prepped for Miss Sherwood's opening via multiple plugs. And she easily confirms the printed kudos with an Irving Berlin medley, a trio of standards and reprises "I Got Lost," her first waxing. Her husky tones abet "Lazy River," when she returns to the cymbal beating, and "Just in Time" is animated via brief hoofing—when she admitted she played here 18 years ago as a dancer. A bow to Walter Winchell follows with the tune he first heard her sing, "You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You." Mitting builds with a trio of semi-westerns, backed by "Someday You'll Want Me to Want You" and a smash fibody Loves You." Mitting builds with a trio of semi-westerns, backed by "Someday You'll Want Me to Want You" and a smash finale of "Bill Bailey." Belting songstress is capably backed by her accompanists, pianist Ernest DeLorenzo and guitarist Red Newmark. Quartet; no cover or admission.

Besides making nice sounds, Wyoma Winters is socko in the visual department. She's an unusual combination of sleek femme and gal-next-door looks, collecting plenty ogling from males. Early training and professional work as terper enhances Miss Winters' microphone presence in her. stanza in the Circus Lounge of the Ottawa House. Piping is slicko and her tunes are right for this small room. Flaw in the stint is use of her own drummer and 88er. They replace two regular members of the house band, Canadian Jazz Quartet, which has proved top value as showbackers and would do a stronger job for this canary. Session is here to Oct. 12.

Henry Morreault, Circus Lounge chief, has almost completed renovation of this room, 'making effective use of murals and mirrors in classic design, replacing original big-top deor. Despite switch in looks, name of room, since it has been widely established, will remain the same.

Velvel, Starlets (8), Bill Clifford Orch; $2 minimum.

Celeste Holm, in her first outing in this area, proves to be a little rich for the blood. Charming and sophisticated, she gets respect even when the customers are not quite sure what they're being attentive about. But her popularity among the tourists is too much to hope for.

Miss Holm's delightful visit begins when she enters the room, or in her case, a cafe rendezvous, where she begins to count the minutes until a new-found love arrives. He never gets there, luckily for the few who enjoy her fretting and reminiscing. The act is a story complete in the one presentation, threaded smoothly together by Miss Holm's patter, her wit and her love songs.

Sitting first at a table where she works into a mike planted among the flowers, she then stands up to sing into a stage mike—then back and forth in the manner of an impatient woman, afraid she's being stood up, but still daring to hope for the best.

It would be regrettable if Miss Holm tried to arrange this whole narrative so it had "general appeal." In the first place, she's just not capable of being general. But the fact that she's probably wandered a little off course—in playing even as silck a bistro as the Riverside, is pretty evident. The boys who blew in town will sit quietly for this elegant femme, but they won't dig her.

Ricky Layne, as soon as he does what he came to do, works as a ventriloquist with Velvel the upstar dumny, makes out well enough. But the "warmup" period before he brings out Velvel is more like a deepfreeze.

Orch (5); $2.50 minimum.

Max & Joe Schneider's theatre nitery comes up with a nicely balanced layout for its second show of the season with partyites giving Lee Allen heavy palming for his comic repertoire of impressions, African native chants and birdcalls and pantomime. On the second lap of a two-weeker, Allen gets off a slick behopper routine, tap impresh of a train, and hokes up "Old Black Magic" for all around good effect.

Appletons, male and two femmes, apache act, amaze with organized mayhem in a bedlam of sound and tury which keeps ring-siders on chair edges. Evee Lynn, well: stacked brunet ballerina, opens the show with stunning display of graceful impressionistic ballet and wins salvos. Don Dennis scores with "Esseimation" and takes "Saints Go Marching In" for rousing and participation bit. Max & Joe Schneider's theatre

Jack Entratter, producer of the Sands shows, is always on the lookout for big names to put into his Copa Room, and occasionally he gets a star who hasn't played Vegas to whip up an act for him. This time he's snagged film star Jane Russell, and it looks as if he has another winner—and helped Miss Russell with a new career. (See New Acts.)

(See New Acts.)

Dan Rowan & Dick Martin, big faves in Vegas, are extra added on the bill. The boys, fresh from making their first starring film ("Once Upon A Horse" at U-I), have enough new material added to their regular act to make it one of the most refreshing bistro romps in the biz. Their wk. skit in which the beer-drinking Martin heckles "Sir Laurence Olivier" Rowan making his "Vegas debut," remains as the heftiest laugh-getter on the Strip. remains as the ter on the Strip.

Two new production numbers with the Copa Girls (12) and featuring the songology of The Vogues (3) give fine balance to the package. Antonio Morelli orch provides expert backing.

Special interest attaches to this bill as the hometown debut of Roberta Linn long she has become a name on the Coast and in music circles as the gal with the Lawrence Welk band. With her is Ronnie Eastman, the record pantomimist, also for his first stint in town. The duo work out a 45-minute show with a number of high spots well recognized by the house, but withal a moderately entertaining hill. ing bill.

Eastman tackles a wide range of songs, quips, dialog and sound effects on his tape recorder, miming them with split second timing and garnering a share of laughs. Basically, the special technique is good for a measure of interest, but as with most comedy turns the act is no better than the material. In this case the pantomiming is excellent, the turn but fairly funny. Much has been heard and writtinis case the pandomining is excellent, the turn but fairly funny.

Much has been heard and written here about Miss Linn in recent years, and a portion of the fortnight's biz will be the home crowd out to see their girl. The customers see a sharp brunet putting a good deal into a wide range of songs, including some of today's pops, an inning of standards from the pen of her uncle, Al Dubin, and one from her own clefting, "You Look Up To Him." She works from a full gowned attire, trimming with appropriate songs until she closes in a brief chorine costume, showing a mitty figure and winding to a goodly hand.

Next in at Eddys will be Don Cornell, opening Oct. 18 for a fortnight.

The King's IV is composed of Bill Kay, Stan Worth, George Worth and Frank Ciciulla and might make a good second act on a nightclub bill. Unfortunately, the quartet isn't strong enough to carry a bill by itself because it doesn't have much change of pace and tends to be ineffectually noisy.

Dave Brubeck Quartet

(SCHOOL AUD., OTTAWA)
with George Wein and Concert Jazz Productions presents Dave Brubeck Quartet with Paul Desmond, Joe Morello, Norman Bates. At Ottawa Technical School Auditorium, Ot-tawa, Oct. 5, '57; $3 top.

Brubeck followers were both delighted and surprised at the 88er's concert, with his foursome, in Ottawa. Some had expected temperament based on his demands for silence during ctratain items, but got none of it. Others who had expected solid Brubeck fare heard the concert close with "St. Louis Blues" a la jazz. After a few warmup minutes, the Brubeck onstage awesomeness disappears and the customers get a fine two hours of good jazz, finely presented.

Nothing deliberately spectacular is done but the group often becomes spectacular in its pureness and simplicity. Jazz flows cleanly from the small stage of the Ottawa Technical School, interrupted by announcements only three times.

Brubeck, at times, sounds like a concert pianist which, in a large way, he is. His untrammeled touch and gentle use of the keyboard is always thorough and brilliant, either when sending the auditorium echoing heavy chords or merely tripping the keys with two fingers. Paul Desmond's alto sax has superb tone and his playing is imaginative throughout. He exhibits a dry wit in inserts and inflections. He plays fine jazz, shyly.

Joe Morello's drumming has unfailing rhythm that lifts the group his expertness drawing ears and eyes his way consistently. He lighted and surprised at the 88er's concert, with his foursome, in Ot-failing rhythm that lifts the grouph his expertness drawing ears and eyes his way consistently. He shows a brittle sense of humor particularly when soloing and delights in picking fresh, cute beats and licks off the heads of his instruments and his cymbals.

Bassist Norman Bates is the shrinking violet of the foursome, standing rigid as his fiddle bringing clicko music out of it. Bates is seldom soloed but sustains the group continually.

Business was not overflow but the 850-seater was well filled with stubholders who were enthusiastic and eager.

Alan Gale, Arnold Dover, Midge & Bill Haggett, Will Gaines, Rover Boys (4), Leon Lichtenfeld Orch (11) under Roger Steele; produced by Alan Gale; at Harris Theatre, by Alan Gate; ut Chicago; $5.50 top.

Packaged chiefly as a nitery show, this production virtually sold out in advance its one-week stay at the Harris Theatre. Dominated by Alan Gale's billingual blusterisms and occasional humor, the show runs, and often drags, through two-and-a-half hours.

Gale condescends to a self-conscious set of Yiddishisms and bi-lingual puns that on occasion go beyond an assertion of self-impor-tance to verge on a sympathetic interpretation of Jewish humor but tance to verge on a sympathetic interpretation of Jewish humor but always unduly sweetened. His comfortably clad audience for the most part finds an easy identification with him, accepting his self-apraisals along with a bludgeoning of easy compilments aimed at the house. With continued reassurance from Gale, the audience voices agreement to his statement that it is enjoying the show.

Ice-Water Gals As New Stars

Chapin, Doug Farboans, national Lloyd, Clark Gable or Gre'a Garbo.

Efforts are being made, in the States and abroad, to "build" new talent. What appears to have changed is the public, which is less prone to hero-worship. In a sense it's all a vicious cycle. As the business suffers, producers look for greater risk insurance, i.e. they try to use the faces that have drawn the public before. Actually many of these personalities have lost a good deal of their drawing power, possibly because the segment of audience that once admired them no longer goes so often or at all to 'he movies.

A Paradox

A Paradox

In the private opinion of a good many film industry execs, a large handful of the top players today should get wise to themselves and gracefully retire. Yet, with desperate producers vying for their services, these stars can hardly be expected to "get the message." It's too paradoxical.

Just what it is that will attract audiences to a given personality today is a big puzzler to the 'trade, here and abroad. Some argue that the deliberate "de-glamoriza-ion" of the stars in the postwar period In the private opinion of a good the deliberate "de-glamoriza'.ion" of the stars in the postwar period is to blame. This line of thinking has cued the emergence of such offbeat glam femmes as Grace Kelly, Inger Stevens and now the ontoear giam relimies as Grace Kelly, Inger Stevens and now the model-turned-actress, Suzy Parker. What all of these actresses have in common is a certain detached, chas e, aloof air, often called a coldness, to go with their stunning looks.

coldness, to go with their stunning looks.

Miss Parker, for instance, has received a great deal of publicity, even though her picture—20th-Fox's "Kiss Them for Me"—hasn't even been released. Those who saw the preview of the film say Miss Parker looks great, but can't act a nickel's worth. Nevertheless, i''s apparent that the studios be lieve that the "keep your distance" type of performer has a future on the screen.

At the other end of the scale, every possible effort has been

There are those who, in weighing the results, hold that Miss Mansfield's uncertain status proves the public's resistance to the "manufactured" star.

Resistive Public

Resistive Public
What puzzles execs is that the phenomenon of the fading star system (mostly because the public seems to resist the emotional upsurge that is required in the creation of stars) is not restricted to the U. S. alone. In France, apart from Jean Gabin, Michele Morgan and Brigitte Bardot, few top names have come to the fore, though there certainly is no lack of young people with the necessary talent to appear in pictures.
In Italy, apart from Gina Lollothere certainly is no lack of young people with the necessary talent to appear in pictures.

In Italy, apart from Gina Lollorigida, Sophia Loren and the mature Vittorio de Sica, the scene is baree of "new" faces for the international talent sweepstakes. In Germany, a Maria Schell is popular and so is Curt Juergens, but certainly the top roster of "drawing" stars is limited. Ditto in Britain, though the J. Arthur Rank Organization as Universal, Warners and others in U. S. is conscientiously trying to do samething about the situation.

There have appeared some stars that ride the crest of the popularity wave in several countries. Mexico's Cantinflas is a favorite throughout Latin America. In Europe, Eddie Constantine (a completely unknown in the U. S. though he's, an American) is a top name in several countries. Same is true of Juergens.

There is some interchange between Europe and the U. S. None will deny that true popularity in America rarely comes to a European star until and unless he or she has appeared in 'Hollywood films. For instance, Miss Schell, who has made numerous German and other films, was virtually unknown to the American public until she came to the Coast to appear in "The Brothers Karamazov" for Metro. The picture is apt to give her great status in this country. The same was true for Miss Loren. While some determined attempts are being made to create a new cadre of Hollywood stars, players of primary appeal to the vame.

Some feel that conditions have changed to such an extent since the thirties, when the star system flourished, that it is virtually imflourished, that it is virtually impossible today to recreate the talent draw of yesteryear. They point, among other things, to the much greater public exposure to performers, via tv and other media. The player today has become a businessman, peddling his talent and much less inclined to worry about the creation of an air of mystery and an aura of high living. Furthermore, what were once the star's prerogatives as a uniquely high-salaried individual, today are enjoyed by the masses thanks to the rising standard-of-living.

Who, in this day and age, would seriously pattern suit or dress after the fashion being worn on the screen? And who would necessarily associate a Thunderbird with "high living?"

What really fouls up the works is that both the industry, and also the public, continue to think in terms of a system and a way-of-life that have lost their meaning and have been superseded by a more realistic, down-to-earth approach to the art of the cinema and the creative talent behind it:

ONA AINSLEY

ONA AINSLEY
Songs
40 Mins.
Hotel St. Regis, N.Y.
Ona Ainsley is a nice change-ofpace from the s.a. and French chantoosey cycle at the St. Regis' class Maisonete. She's an authoritative soprano of fine, full-range voice of obvious muny op and kindred background. This is her New York debut. She's a very satisfying thrush who should pick up some video guest-spots in between her mouth's interlude on the Gotham sceie.

Legit sopranos are not quite socko in the saloons, mass or class, but Miss Ainsley should make the rade with her surefire pot-pourri that opens with a medley that runs the ganut from Grace Moore to Julie' Andrewe' song creations.
Thereafter the accent is on the runsieomedy and operetta school, done with full appreciation of melody and the lyric content. She has the attractive looks to match as she uncorks "Mr. Wonderful,"
"La Guajara," a fine lyric titled may become a standard) set to Fritx

You," "HI Lili," "Ain't Necessarily So," "Around World" and one or two others.

"Who Needs A Voice?" is a tongue-in-cheek appraisal of the plush saloon circuits as she rhe-torically explores the necessity for vocal-prowess vis-a-vis the impact of sufficient s.a. exposure. While Miss Ainsley does not accent the gams and the other feminine endowments, which are stock in trade for the bistro belters, she is very personable and exquisitely accounted. And her voice is by no means slighted throughout.

This is a somewhat offbeat booking for the St. Regis but should an out plenty okay. Per usual, Milt Shaw's batoning is a terrificassist, along with his basic dansapation appeal, as is the alternating Ray Bari ensemble. Incidentally, that long overdue album by the Shawites is now scheduled va the Urania label.

Sands, Las Vegas Jane Russell's bistro debut was warmly greeted here because the film beauty proves she can parlay above-average chirping, a pleasing personality, and a spectarular body which showcases gorgeous gowns, into a top level night club act.
Miss Russell makes a grand entrance — she's carried in on an ornate couch, and in her first song scores with an amusing tongue-incheeker, "Be Happy With The Yacht You've Got." Audience reward her with salvos for such numbers as "They'll Never Believe-Mr.
"Wait Till You See Her," and her most outstanding offering, a "Gilded Lly" production in which she's gowned in a slinky red outfit.
Star intros her brother Wally, who sings while she makes a costume change. His pipery is of standard quality, but he's tall and handsome, which is a neat balance for the femmes in the audience.
Miss Russell displays herself as an okay comedienne at times (when she sits on the piano before one number, she says, "No, no — not Helen Morgan, I've been doing this since I was 14.") and the act should have no trouble finding bookers on the nitery circuit. Act was staged and directed by Jonathan Lucas;
Joe Rotondi is the musical director; arrangements are by Billy May; scenery by Ed Wassell; gowns by Michael Woulfe; special material by Ric Billman, Barney Ide and Portia Nelson. Duke.

FRAN WARREN Songs 32 Mins.

Royal York Hotel, Toronto
After a summer's six-week tour in "South' Pacific," Fran Warren is breaking in a new-nitery act at the posh Imperial Room of the Royal York Hotel. With Italian pageboy hairdo, plus a backless black lace evening gown over white taffeta, she presents an entirely new personality, thrush sticks to the standard oldies for nostalgia.

Her new numbers include a medley of "Lover Come Back,"
"You Make Me Feel So Young," her trademarked "Hey, There" and
'Tive Grown Accustomed to Her Face." (She has also just completed an album tagged "Hey, There with Fran Warren," for the Tops label but is one of tife few to scorn any plugging in her nitery stint.) On the two-anight policy at the Imperial Room, with management wanting only 30 minutes, Miss Warren opens with a bouncy "Back in Your Own Backyard" and then into "You Make Me Feel So Young." Neat tribute to Judy Garland precedes "Over the Rainbow," with chirp alternately breathless and hetty on the high notes.

Handling faves of past years and memories, her ladylike meanderings around the tables include her medlev of. "I'll Get By," "Always" and "Mean to Me," with a centre floor tempe change to "Stean Heat" and "Hey, There." The sveite Miss. Warren is also regal in hearing in her. whisper delivery of "Lover, Come Back to Me". and
"Sunday Kind of Love," latter one of her most successful recordings.
Shapely and pert, the brunet is dramatic in delivery, fills the room with her voice and ably switches from comedy to pathos. She had the otherwise staid customers enthusiastically, applauding whe n

Burns and Jack Olsen; her piano accompanist, Herb Mesick, who did the same chore for Miss Warren during her tour of "Pajama Game,"

American show biz has been hearing increasingly the last year or so about Britain's "angry young or so about britains angly young men," and in particular their lead-ing spokesman, playwright-actor John Osborne. Now at hand is the John Osborne. Now at hand is the London dramatic success, "Look Back in Anger," with its vehemently bitter, brilliantly articulate y outer, brilliantly articulate young mouthpiece-hero, Jimmy Porter.

Porter.

There'll be arguments about the play on Broadway, too, and audiences will be just as irritated and engrossed by Jimmy as were the more reserved English. But say what else they will about Jimmy his painful restlessness and caustic opinions, he's alive and vital, arresting and passionately theatrical.

"Anger" is about as pleasant as a raw nerve—and about as easy to ignore. It's a powerful, enthralling, frequently exasperating and undeniably stirring show, and it's a cinch to be a hit. Since American_audiences are probably more inured to tough plays than the English are, this dramatic diatribe click here than in the West End.

Jimmy Porter is a sort of slightly older, less gregarious and vastly more articulate counterpart of the adolescent mobsters of the new Broadway musical, "West Side Story." Hating a world in which he feels out of place, he vents his hostility and loneliness, not in batting a rival gang, but in blindly and indiscriminately inflicting pain on those around him, particularly those near and dear to him.

The play tends to he something those hear and dear to him.

The play tends to be something of a monolog at times as Jimmy heaps insults and abuse on his patient wife, ostensibly from resentment of the fact that she's his social superior, but basically as an outlet for his own sense of outrage and rebellion against an existence he cannot appreciate or cope with. Thus, while Jimmy is the immediate spokesman for the author, he is in a general way the counterpart of all of today's generation of angry young man who feel that life has betrayed them.

The scene of the play is Jimmy's has betrayed them.

The scene of the play is Jimmy's grubby lodgings in a midland English town and the other characters are the loving but exhausted wife, their understanding and devoted friend, the wife's old chum of uncomplicated girlhood days and, in a single-scene appearance, the wife's Victorian-outlook father.

her playing of the highly charged final scenes is intensely touching.
Alan Bates, the third original player, gives an eloquent, defly shaded portrayal of the sympathetic friend and Vivienne Drummond, a replacement during the original London run, is impressive in the difficult role of the wife's successor as a scarcely tolerated, reviled bed-mate. Jack Livesey is credible as a disapproving but little-heeded father.

British director Tony Richardson has recreated his original London staging expertly and the setting by Alan Tagg and costumes by Motley are valuable contributions to the most dynamic British import in ready memory.

There's probably not much for films in this high-pressure talkfest, but there's lots of theatre.

It would be hard to imagine a more complete reversal of mood than Howard Telchmann has made in this new play taken from the Nathaniel West novel, "Miss Lonelyhearts." For his last time out, Telchmann collaborated with George S. Kaufman on a farce, "The Solid Gold Caddilac," which made a boxoffice cleanup.

In "Miss Lonelyhearts" the tone is deadly serious and the effect unpleasant. This is no boxoffice item, therefore, although it could conceivably be a prospect for film adaptation. Any popularization will have to be in the treatment, however, as the story itself is anything but an evening's diversion.

The show has two strikes on it It would be hard to imagine 's but an evening's diversion.

The show has two strikes on it from the start. For one thing, it amounts to a sort of morality fable of despair, a defeatist yarn with a let-downish quality. Secondly, the hero, if not a fool, at least behaves like one, so he forfeits the sympathy of an audience that wants to root for him.

The hero is an idealistic young reporter assigned to write an advice-to-the-lovelorn column. He approaches it as a joke, but quickly takes it to heart, is assailed by self-doubts, tries to escape in booze and sex, but finally finds self-understanding and peace in spiritual love. The trouble is, he's so impractical that he brings disappointment to those who believe in him, unhappiness to the girl who loves him and trouble to those he tries to comfort. He ends by losing his own life uselessly.

Pat O'Brien, returning to the stage after 25 years in pictures, gives a direct, forceful and propulsive performance as the diabolic newspaper editor who cynically gives the decent young reporter the heartthrob column job and then sees that he's distillusioned and driven to an emotional crack-up.

There's a baffling final switch to The hero is an idealistic young rawling and groweling (literally) back, a sadder and the author apparently feels, a wiser woman.

The dialog crackles with vivid lines. "Don't take his suffering away from him," the wife says of Jimmy," hied have nothing left. Riffling through the Sunday newspaper, the hero sarcastically remarks, "This is full or receive for marks," This is full or receive from the faglish books, and half of tem in French." And, expressing his sense of dislikasionically its dead. There marks, "This is full or revealing line is the wife's plaintied by its dead there in the popular of his infrequent moments of self-deceiving self-dramating." The strongest in the best friend says he's going tog oway, the nero says, "I seem to be the loneliest," and later, when even his best friend says he's going tog oway, the nero says, "I seem to spend my life saying goodbye." But perhaps the most revealing line is the wife's plaintive reference to "pople who couldn't stand the pain of being human beings any longer."

The show is superbly presented Kenneth Haigh, repeating his original characterization, makes Jimmy a vibrantly, agonizingly alive person of varying moods. The performance is rresistibly believable, as tunning revelation. If Broadway and Hollywood and television had already been alerted, they can now awake to the arrival of an electrifying talent and personality.

Erich Kaestner, author of many children's books, presents himself in this work as a bitter cynic and satirist. "School of Dictators," is not only a heavy attack against any kind of dictatorship but also a rather pessimistic gesture of resignation: Plece shows that butte force is merely substituted by brute force. brute force.

nation: Piece shows that brute force is merely substituted by brute force.

Action of play takes place in an imaginary state whose dictator has just died. Since the functionaries, however, keep on ruling with exchangeable doubles, the population sees always the "same" dictator. One of the puppets (doubles) finally is a decent character. He arranges a revolution and succeeds in overthrowing the vulture government. However, the good man is overthrown himself and a new dictator takes over.

There is sharp wit and many fine bon mots. But script is too "constructed," less a theatrical presentation than an "extended political cabaret." So considered, it's imaginative and amusing. More pretentiously, as a tragicomedy, the characters appear too wooden and their dialog emerges as slogantype lines.

Hans Schweikart handled staging job with remarkable skill. He even led some of the actors to impressive performances. That primarily concerns Peter Luchr in the role of the professor who trains the various puppet-dictators. Fine performance is also turned in by Kurt Meisel who portrays the president who dies and also doubling as the one who later overthrows the government. First rate and imaginative are the settings by Joerg Zimmermänn.

CONCERT REVIEW

Little Orchestra, N. Y.

Rain explained some empties at Town Hall Monday (7) when the Little Orchestra took aim at its second decade. The evening forced more strongly than before the sense of careful selection of musicians and repertory, plus the collective enterprise of conductor-founder Tom Scherman, Thea Dispeker and William Weissel in creating such a unique artistic establishment. This does credit to New York and the culture of America—a fact which the timid subsidy sources will no doubt awaken to after a further lapse of time.

This season the Little Orchestra will be divided between a four-event series at Town Hall and a number of ambitious concert mountings of opera at Carnegie. It remains, of course, steady on the beam of its dedication to little played, or not played at all, musical works. For this it collects much merited appreciation. Its repertory enriches the town, as its knack for finding young musicians (without that being its pirpose) enriches the larger orchestras, and simplifies their recruitment problems.

Call it luck, showmanship or happy possibility—the Little Orchestra was able to open its 11th season with a master of song, George London. Here was a substitution, making substitution an end devoutly to be desired. The unfortunate foreigner who could not come because of surgery provided the chance of having London who will, later this month, be the opening night baritone at the Met.
London fiew in from Vienna to paratroopers in removing all vagueness. London wowed 'em with the first N. Y. rendering of Modest Mussorgsky's 1872 "Sons of Death," managing to be powerful, tender and musically commanding. To which, our Russian language expert adds that his diction in the Moscovy tongue was stupelying in an American born in Montreal.

Legit Increasingly Recruits Players From Film and Other Show Media

While Hollywood itself is trapped in a paradox of its own creation with respect to starsfewer and fewer of them getting bigger and bigger participations—other film names are turning their thoughts, and their agents, toward Broadway legit. (See related story, page one, this issue)

Besides the spread of film talent, headliners from other show bir media have also been tagged for Broadway shows this semester. Included in this category are Lena Horne, who's costarring in the musical, "Jamaica," Abbe Lane, who's scheduled to costar in the forthcoming tuner version of "Captain's Paradise," and Art Carney, who'll be in "The Rope Dancers."

Miss Horne has appeared in several films, but she's associated more with mitery appearances and records. Miss Lane, the wife of bandleader Xavier Cugat, has been singing with her husband's orch for a few years, and appearing in Italian-made films while Carney built up his rep as a regular on the Jackle Gleason videocasts.

An earlier version of the James Leo Herlihy and William Noble play was tried at the Westport (Conn.) Other backers, besides the Logans, include accountant Bernard J. Reis, listed for a $20,000 share; tobacco executive and former theatre owner Howard S. In the first issue there is a reprint of a N.Y. controlled Select Theatres Corp., stepped into a couple of surprises. For the first time in recent years, a member of the Shubert family was in attendance at the annual meet. And the firm paid a dividend on its preferred stock, the first such payment in 23 years. The company, though, still hasn't paid dividends on its common stock.

Present and presiding at the conclave was John Shubert, secretary of the organization. His handling of the proceedings drew a compliment from J. J. Gilbert, one of the professional needlers of chairmen. Elder Jake Shubert, John's father and Select's president-treasurer did not attend the meeting.

The dividend payment which came to $22,000, represented a payoff to the Shuberts only since all of the 38,000 shares of 6%, $10 par preferred are owned by Shubert interests, who also hold a majority of the common stock. According to the firm's annual statement, the net income for the year, ending last June 30, was $182,000 after taxes. The take the previous year was $174,000.

Although the net income increased, pfincipally from profits realized on the sale of fixed assets, the profit from operations for the '56-'57 period dropped to $321,000 from $714,000 the previous year. This huge decrease was attributed to lower earnings resulting from the sale of various properties Felinquished in accordance with a government consent decree. Coin was put into the "special promotion" fund for 13 of the 34 weeks "Millionaire" ran on Broadway. As to that, Dame Nina de Valois, director of the troupe, in a curtain speech Sunday (6) from the Met's stage made two oblique references: (1) "You (the audience) have given us this year our best N.Y. season" and (2) "I'm inclined to ask, "What's in a name?""

The bill for the overseas stand was footed by the State Dept. via American National Theatre & Academy, which sponsored the booking as part of its International Exchange Program, Included in the expenses for the layoff period was $7.186 rent for Helen Hayes Theatre, N. Kansas City, Oct. 8.

Starlight Theatre's 12-week season of outdoor musicals which ended in Swope Park Sept. 8, had total attendance of 375,000 and a gross about $25,000 short of a record budget of $670,000. The budget, upped more than $50,000 over any previous high, was geared to bigger names than previous-ly.

Television and recording personalities were the best bet, including like Don Cornell, Kay Starr, Dorothy Collins and Tony Bennett, according to business manager William Symon. A gamble on night club performers was less successful. Notable entries from this field were Hildegarde and Lillian Roth.

version." He concedes an error on his arbitration arrangement.)

The Dramatists Guild, although directly involved in Meyer Levin's controversy with producers Michael Myerberg and Leonard S. Gruenberg over their upcoming Broadway production of "Compulsion," hasn't taken an official stand on the matter as yet. It's expected, however, that the subject will come up for discussion at the Guild's board meeting later this month.

The Guild is in the middle of the dispute over script revisions on the play, which Levin adapted from his own novel, as the result of both its own member and the producers having violated Guild terms. By sidestepping action in the controversy, the Guild could be leaving itself open for similar future violations, which in this case involved the making of unauthorized side agreements for bringing in Robert Thom to assist in the writing of the play and the naming of the show's director, Alex Segal, as arbitrator on script squabbles between Levin and the producers.

Meanwhile, Levin's attorney Samuel Fredman filed an appeal last Monday (7) with the Appellate Division of the N. Y. Supreme Court to plead reversal, of a decision made earlier by Supreme Court Judge John Markowitz upholding an agreement between Levin and the producers to have Segal as script arbitrator. In doing this, Judge Markowitz ruied that the issue was not subject to outside arbitration as requested by Levin. The author, incidentally, placed an ad, in the N. Y. Times last week offering to halt legal proceedings if the producers would present his original adaptation and the revised version on alternate weeks. Myerberg claims such an offer was never made to him directly and that if it had been he would give it consideration.

2D EDITION OF 'OXFORD THEATRE COMPANION'

"The Oxford Companion to the Theatre" (second edition), edited by Phyllis Hartnoll (Oxford; $i1.50), is an expanded version of the first edition, issued in 1951, by the same editor and publisher. Encyclopedic in nature, and done in England, the volume nevertheless has hundreds of entries embracing the American stage. U. S. contributors include the late Barrett H. Clark, Savyer Falk, Mrs. Hallie Flanagan Davis (former director of WPA Federal Theatre), George Freedley, John Gassner, Douglas Gilbert, Stanley McCandless, Lee Simonson and Bernard Sobel. Ben Lucien Burman provides a thorough history of American showboating; and the editor credits Dr. William can Lennep, curator of the Haryard Theatre Collection, and May Davenport Seymour of the Museum of the City of N. Y., for special aid, Most Manhattan playhouses and their histories are covered.

There are blos of this country's top theatre personalities, past and present; also rundowns on stage practices and customs on this side the Atlantic. American readers may find some of the English references obscure, but there can be no quarrel with the excellent 10-page account of the Negro in the American theatre, written by Prof. Sterling A. Brown of Washington, D. C. Book is, perhaps, a bit bulky and the next edition may well require two volumes. Printing in double columns to the page and in a type-face somewhat smaller than makes for easiest reading are drawbacks to "The Companion."

A section of illustrative plates is an asset, and the work as a whole is an important, scholarly adjunct to all libraries, theatrical or general; a vital compendium of show biz lore. "The Oxford Companion to the eatre" (second edition), edited physics Hartnoll (Oxford;

coe succeeding George Voskovec and Carl Don replacing Alvin Epstein. Two shows that have already opened in New York also made some cast alterations before coming into town. The plays are "Four Winds" and "Miss Lonelyhearts." In the former, Luella Gear replaced Ann Andrews and Harry Mehaffey succeeded Harry Bannister. In "Lonelyhearts," Pippa Scott replaced Loretta Leversee.

Cast changes were also made in two three-character offerings, "The Saturday Night Kid" and "The Rivalry." The former, which folded out-of-town, brought in Jack Klugman as replacement for Joseph Wiseman and the latter, prior to embarking on a lengthy pre-Broadway tour, set Martin Gabel to replace Brian Donlevy.

Besides the cast change, "Kid" also switched directors with Warren Enters succeeding George Keathley. Other stager shifts occurred in "Copper" and "Nature's Way," currently in Philadelphia. Burt Shevelove replaced Mare, Daniels as director of the former offering, while Alfred de Liagre Jr., producer of the latter entry, took over the staging assignment originally held by Basil Langton.

"Copper" was also involved in a shakeup in the dance department, with Bob Fosse replacing Anna Sokolow in the staging of the teny numbers. A similar change was made in "Carefree Heart," currently in Detroit, with Diana Krupska succeeding John Heawood. A switch in another category was made in "Gameica," currently in Boston. 'Carefree Heart' Shows Sparkle

World Premiere of Musical Based on Moliere Comedies

BY J. DORSEY CALLAGHAN

Detroit's new fall season got off to a sparkling start Monday night at the Cass Theater with the premiere of "Carefree Heart," a musical based on the "doctor" comedies of Moliere.

New and untried from start to finish, the musical brought much joy to a first-night audience which filled the theater.

It is peopled by a gifted cast, topped by Jack Carter in the role of the woodcutter turned doctor, and aided by Jayne Turner as the mute heroine; Allen Case as her lover; Susan Johnson as the nurse, and Melville Cooper as the traditional man of wealth.

The give and take between him and Billie Worth is riotous and entirely funny.

The play moves to the impulses of dance and song, which include a number of show stoppers. Among the prospective song hits are the serenade, "I Would Love You Still;" the Physicians' Gavotte, "Bleed and Purge;" the patter song, "Formula, Formulae, Formulae, Formulae, Formulae." lorum," Are."

who prefers to disguise himself as a woodsman.
So powerful is his urge to be a woodcutter, Martina confides, that he must be beaten thoroughly before he will admit his identity.
The beating is duly administered and Sganarelle is whisked off to perform the miraculous cure, "a doctor in spite of himself."

IN THE COURSE of the comedy's unravelling, Sgana-relle becomes a romantic go-between for Lucinda and Leander, and the true lovers be-

Old age is put in its place in true 17th Century fash-ion; young love triumphs, as does the rascality of the "doctor in spite of himself;" Leander turns out to be a wealthy man after all, and the medical profession is giv-ent its lumps to the entire satisfaction of the author, who was notable for his dis-like of all medicos. like of all medicos.

The story is pleasantly familiar to readers of the French theater of the 1800s, when the stage was recently emergent from the set improvisations of the commedia dell' arte.

The names of the participants are from that ancient form by the most direct route. Lucinda and Leander are familar, as is Sgaasrelle.

The major problem, as faced by the 20th Century stage, is one of transferring typical comedy of some three centuries ago to the idom and pace of our times. The change must be such, though, as to do as little violence as possible to a renowned classic.

The result is a very happy
one. The music is of our time, with no compromise; the costuming and staging are bright and colorful and the choreography exciting and apropos.

Is "Carefree Hear!" a prospossible to tell. One would say, though, that this musical has better than even chance of making the grade.

Four shows of the 1957 season ended in the black, while one, "Silk Stockings," missed showing a profit by only $1,400 when it suffered a rainout on a heavy night. That compares with only two shows of the 1956 season which ended in the black. No show grossed as low as $35,000 this year, while three of the 1956 season which ended in the figure.

As in previous years the stall-wart of the season was the venerable "Show Boat," which chugged through the final two weeks at a top pace, and but for a rainy finale might have brought the season out even. It's first week was near the season's top at $63,400, figure.

Thomas season is here. With the opening at the Longacre Theatre of Emlyn Williams "reading" from Thomas stories, and with a production of Thomas "Under Milk Wood" imminent, devotees of the Welsh poet seem about to have their fill.

In "A Boy Growing Up," Williams is paying tribute to the legend that was Dylan Thomas. This legend was building prior to Thomas' death by mischance at a tragic 38, for the gifted Welsh poet was unruly of person, temperament and talent.

At the start of what actor-director-playwright Williams calls a "memory jaunt," he describes how the physical Dylan Thomas appeared to his contemporaries. Like sall surface examination, this gives little sense of who or what the man was, nor does Williams intend that it should. Two hours later, however, by choosing judiciously from the plethora of Thomas' work, williams has created a distinct sense of many facets of the poet's personality, phsyche and talent.

For fans of Thomas, the selections culled from the man's work have the easy familiarity of old friends. Passages from "Portrait of the Artist as a Young Dog," "Quite Early One Morning" or "Adventures in the Skin Trade," read with Williams, perceptive loving kindness, fetch laughs of recognition and the sign of known sadness.

Theatre audiences, however, are not necessarily composed of Thomas cognoscenti, even during a limited engagement of two weeks. Emlym Williams, the showman, therefore, has brought his considerable performing talents to bear in evoking the life and times of his countryman.

Ruth Warwick is capable in the virtually unplayable part of the editor's frigid wife with a yen for her husband's protege. There are acceptable portrayals by Henderson Forsythe, William Hickey, Irene Dailey and Peter Doyle in secondary roles.

Alan Schneider has staged the play, including kind of documentary lead-in scenes, with effective variation of emphasis and pace. Jo Mielziner has designed a brilliantly fluid and atmospheric physical production providing various changes of locale with minimum scenery, and Patricia Zipprodt has supplied appropriate costumes.

A San Francisco municipal judge last week freed a poet-publisher and a bookstore clerk and in so doing offered a carefully defined ruling on literary value.

Acquitted of charges that they had willfully published and sold an obscene book were Lawrence Ferlinghetti, a poet who published allen Ghisbergs "Howl and Other Peems," and also owns the City Lights Bookshop here, and the shop's clerk, Shigeyoshi Murao.

The two were arrested by police last May 21 and their trial has been dragging all summer.

Last Thursday (3) Municipal Judge Clayton Horn handed down his 30-page opinion, which gave police and public a measuring stick for judging obscene literature. Included in the opinion were these rules:

1) "If the material has the slight-

6) "Book reviews must be received in evidence if properly authenticated (the defense used them in this case)";

7) "Evidence of expert witnesses in the literary field is proper";

8) "Comparison of the material with other similar material previously adjudicated is proper";

9) "The people owe a duty to themselves and to each other to the this offense of the total proper in the literature of the literature as I have in the literature as I have in the labelity of our people to reject noxious literature as I have in the literature as I have in the labelity of our people to reject noxious literature as I have in the capacity to sort out the true from the false in theology, economics, politics or any other field.";

11) "In -considering material claimed to be obscene it is well to remember the motto: Tioni soit qui mal y pense (Evil to him who evil thinks)."

Judge Horn obviously referred to the landmark epinion (on "Ulys-ses") of the late Federal Judge John Munro Woolsey when he wrote, "In determining whether a book is obscene it must be con-structed as a whole."

With reference to the district attorney's charge that "How!" used "coarse and vulgar" language, Judge Horn wrote:

Continuing evidence that heaven lightens the otherwise leaden P. isian skies, with humor, and pours its beneficence even on exiled Yarks; is in its columnists. Buchwald has gone further than Bald, but basically his appeal is to Americans waiting for a rich uncle to die back home. There may, of course, be an exile here and there waiting for a sheriff, instead of an uncle, to kick the bucket, but these are fewer now due to the long on of the law, extradition agreements and other trespasses on fugitives' right of asylum.

Buchwald writes with a lively interest on everything from transient personalities to the position of cheese in the menu. In fact, he did several columns recently out of this prime ulcerian allergy. In his researches Buchwald learned there was an old French saying, "Enire la poire et le fromage" thetween the pear and the cheese, which indicated that at one time the French did finish a meal with cheese. The British still follow this practice, preferring a bitterish taste to prepare their mouths for the inevitable port. But in the main in England, cheese is for luncheon, not dinner—and whatever its name it is usually cheddar.

Maugham Put The Cheese First

Maugham Put The Cheese First

He said the British Embassy. I owever, follows the French practice as their guests are usually Frenchmen. But Somerset Maugham when he lived at Villa Mauresque on Si. Jean du Cap Ferrat used to precede the cheese with a sweet.

French peasan's and workers, of course, take a petit pain, a bottle of wine and some cheese and make their whole meal of it, and there's a restaurant near Notre Dame that serv-s a mixed salad and 18 varieties of cheeses for luncheon for $1.50. Between cover charge, nawkin, wine, coffee and service, however, you're close to $3 a head.

Scandinavians have cheese at all meals, including breakfast. It's a go.: cheese and by far, on rye crips, the most digestible. They have a special knife to cut it razor thin. It's a brown cheese and looks like cheap laundry soap. In fact, when we lived in Nice in the '30s and would receive a huge chunk of it from Norway, it looked like Saron Marseilles to the French customs officers and they passed it duty-free.

Now and then Buchwald slips into a junket and in July got to Mor-occo when Bob Hope was filming a tv show he was putting on for 'he American Air Force at Casablanca. Even supported by Marie MacDon-ald, Ann Miller, Eddie Fisher and Gary Crosby, Buchwald wouldn't play a bit without a fee. But he otherwise earned his part of the jun-ket's overhead, and might end, if he isn't careful, as one of Hope's army of gag writers.

Before Buchwald There Was Bald

He may think this a far-fetched destiny, but Wambly Bald, too, knew everybody who came to Paris in the '20s and '30s and could write pleces which were tree amagnt.

After years of it he decided to hit out for Hollywood and look up some of these friends who offered him all sorts of studio jobs when they were likkered up in Paris. I didn't happen to be among them, bu' when he reached Hollywood and found all studio gates seated, he looked me up.

bu' when he reached Hollywood and found all studio gates seated, he looked me up.

It was in 1936 and the depression was still on. We were building a home on the top of Whittey Heights overlooking Hollywood and Vine Called. Bedside Manor, it was fast becoming Layoff, Manor. The contractor had scrammed and there was a lot of outside work to be done. Anybody looking for a soft studio job was offered a dollar an hour, his meals and the privilege of sleeping on the porch couches till his luck turned.

Reld turned up one day at Layoff Manor and stated his beef.

Ten G Was All He Wanted

"You'd' think I was a toadstool," he complained. "All the guys who thought I was great in Paris treat me like a poisoned mushroom in Hollywood. All I want is $10,000 to get me to Tahiti and I'm willing to work six weeks for it. Well, even ten."

I offered him an axe to chop a eucalyptus tree into firewood lengths and a buck an hour. He soon complained that the axe handle made his palms sore, I gave him a pair of new work gloves. In a few hours he had disappeared. Later someone found him sleeping behind a hedge on the lower terrace.

At least we thought he was sleeping, but early in the afternoon two drivers of milk trucks stopped on the street below and began complaining about their routes. Both agreed biz was terrible.

Finally one said, "If I knew anybody who'd take this lousy route I'd sell it to him for a quarter."

But A Milk Route Would Do

Up jumped Wambly Ball from the bushes and shouted, "I'll take it!"

"It's both drivers, frightened at this gargoyle in the shrubbery, stepped on the gas and tore off as if chased by the cops.

Within two days Bald decided he had had enough of that sort of literary life and was saying to hell with i. Whether he ever got to Tahiti I never knew, but around 1950 I saw a piece on the World Series in the New York Post and it was signed Wambly Bald.

Of course, it could have been his son, but Bald was such a hobehemian, I doubt if he ever spawned any smallfry.

His friends were the old "transition" crowd. I see one of them is still around Paris. That's Robert Sage who does travel stuff for the Paris Herald Trib. But what has happened to Link Gillespie, Laurence Vail, George Antheil, Kay Boyle, Bob Brown and all those typographical screwballs who even as early as the 1920s were writing what they believed was 21st-Century English? I suspect the lowly planter of the dead has got most of them, though I see Antheil's name regularly among music credits from Hollywood and, of course, Kay Boyle made her way as a serious novelist.

tionment will be worked out as the husiness develops.

Elaborating on the cash-versus-billing, Novins had some decided views, based on protracted studies. For example, the Los Angeles area places such a home necessity as the milk bill as the No. 7th bill that is paid. First is the automobile installment—that's a must in a territory like L. A. where the auto is part of one's daily existence—and then comes the telephone, interest on the mortage, the appliances (tv set, refrigerator, washer, deep-freeze, etc.) and the milkman gets paid late. Almost as late as the doctor, but not as bad. In some areas the dairy houses will not distribute on a credit basis. These facts are cited vis-a-vis the proponents of "send me the bill."

Cash-in-the-slot brooks no equivocation, and it also recognizes that the Telemeter advocates know they will have to come up with some potent want-to-see films, or else.

Hazards of Credit

Among the hazards of the credit versem as the tallytision mattern

like Buffalo, it is cited, has the lowest per-capita checkbook accounts in its banks. There is no hurdle in 500 or $1 in the slot, say the Telemeterites, but there is when (1) the charges might mount, and (2) the muisance of buying a postal order or a cashier's check.
Novins envisions a $100-per-box investment for Telemeter installations, up to a $5,000 community of investment for Telemeter installations, up to a 5,000 community of subscribers, and these can come down to $$40 and $$55. The subscriber pays none of this—that's the franchise-owner's problem. The home-user may have to make a nominal payment like a $10 deposit, and of course if there isn't a reasonable usage of Telemeter—$3 or $$4 a month— the household runs the risk of either (1) of being charged a certain minimum, or (2) having the equipment removed. The phone company has a minimum charge regardless of moved. The phone company has a minimum charge regardless of how few calls under the fixed 66 are made; in excess thereof there is

Raibourn and Novins point to last tertainment."

Telemeter can transmit color, will offer three different programs for the price of one, pipe in gratis news, local announcements and marathon music (uninterrupted, and sans commercials) programs into the home, at pleasure, from morning until, for example, the evening's telecasts of pay-see pix start projecting via the scrambled signal.

The Telemeter execs see the fact that its programming can be "controlled," sans commercial interruptions and on a quality basis, as the best insurance for its horizons. Admittedly, the company's experiment in Palm Springs three winters ago was a missout because of the primary mistake of poor pictures, but Novins observes that a Veterans' Row of houses—not the swank Tamarisk Road mansions—complained when Telemeter went off the air. 'CREEPING INFLATION' VS. FILMS

SHARES SAG ON STOCK MARKET

Film industry shares were given one of their severest drubbings last week. Major issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange hit new lows in six instances as prices, which already had been regarded as deflated (at least within the industry itself) went down even further.

least within the industry itself, went down even further.

Only solace was in the fact that the entire market was off sharply. As for the picture stocks, traders offered some explanations: (1) if was a natural that show business would be hurt in any overall depressed market; (2) continued tight money conditions are bound to have a particularly adverse effect upon "speculative" offerings, the available investment coin being slotted instead to blue chips and conservative stocks, and (3) the uncertainties at Loew's, which for long was considered by Wall Streeters as the bellwether of the picture business, have caused a reappraisal of all film securities, mostly downbeat, some 'reasoning being that as Loew's goes so, too, could the others.

Despite this kind of economic climate, the fact remains that the film corporations aren't doing too badly on the fiscal front, certainly not so badly as to warrant the big Big Board slide that has mean multi-million-dollar paper losses. With the exception of Loew's, there's no apparent threat of lapses in dividend payments. Again excepting Loew's, there have been instances of lessened profits, such as at Columbia, but these are hardly construed as alarming.

The fallout at United Artists was particularly spectacular. Within a made the meulin, in past, hollywood's toignest competition.

Yet, if the citizens have become, or are becoming, somewhat disenchanted with television, there's still no evidence that they've found a new enchantment in theatres. Picture business continues to fluctuate in direct proportion to the merits of each picture in availability. The good pictures make the good money, and so on.

Some opinion in the film industry has it that more time will be required before definite trends can be spotted. Theatre business in the past couple of weeks actually has fallen off, but this is attributable to the normal post-summer drop in attendance at the drive-ins.

Further, it's noted, tv's hold on public attention

It's naive any longer to blame television for boxoffice disappointments. In some instances even well-made features are doing poorly at the playoff. Increasingly industry pundits in this area see the current villain as prevailing economic conditions. Their name for this is "creeping inflation."

this is "creeping inflation."

Included in this term are such assorted but connected factors as tight bank money, constantly rising cost of groceries, the over-all pressure on the American consumers' pocketbooks. Rents are up, suburban drifts and general uncertainty about the political future all pull away from the baxoffice. As the industry leaders evaluate trends.

It's a cause of worry in exhibitor circles here and theatreowners point out they're helpless to combat it. In addition to cutting down patronage this inflation is doing them further harm by increasing their operating costs.

The seasonal decrease during the quarter was also the highest so far recorded. Admissions were 14% down from the first quarter of the year. Decline in attendances was general throughout the country and applied to theatres of all sizes.

Gross takings also were substantially down at $62,557,000. That figure represented a drop of 15% from the first quarter of this year and 12% on the corresponding quarter in 1956.

Although admission prices have been raised, the average price paid during the quarter was slightly lower than in the first three months of the year.

The BOT's statistics were compiled from returns submitted by 4,221 picture theartes with a capacity of 3,929,000 seats. In the corresponding period last year the returns were made by 4,424 theatres.

Ericson was based in Stockholm, working for the Allies, but so convincing was his counterespionage that Himmler gave him a "safe conduct" pass (which is one of his prized mementos) and financed him in a German-Swedish multimillion dollar, operation dealing with synthetic gasoline. Ericson is credited with saving petrol supplies for the Allies, but because of his realistic three-year operation, shuttling between Stockholm and Berlin, he was blacklisted in the States (where he was raised, educated at Cornell U.), ostracized by both Americans and the Swedish sympathizers with the Allied cause, had his credit balance in the U. S. frozen, etc., all of which tended to gain him greater haspht into the Nazi war plans.

Rome, Oct. 15.

A 15% drop in Italian boxoffice take for September, 1957, compared to figures for September of 1956, has been registered by SIAE, the Italian Society of Authors and Editors. The sharp drop in attendance has been especially notable in key city first runs, the report says. In some hard-hit Italian centers, the attendance cut during September reached an unprecedented 30-35%.

Various causes have been given for the slack seasonal start, among them the Asiatic flu epidemic, television, and inferior product. (Two principal money-makers currently are hold-overs from previous "season": "Giant" and "War and Peace." Both played advanced-price dates during the spring, are now going into repeat firstruns at normal prices.

Preminger: 'Why 30% to Distribs?' Sure Jean Seberg Is Actress Tho Admits 'Joan' a Nosedive

By HY HOLLINGER

Since independent producers and performers are willing to work on a percentage basis for their efforts, distribution must also be prepared to gamble. This is the view of producer-director Otto Preminger who strongly feels that there is a need for a wholesale reorganization of the present distribution system. Says Preminger: everybody else works on a percentage basis, so why not distribution. The fact that distribution fee is no reason for it to continue forever. Preminger commented. The producer-directors admits that some adjustments have been made in distribution fees, but he feels that only the surface has been scratched. He maintains it is incumbent on the distribs to overhaul their releasing methods and to determine if it's worthwhile to service 8,000 theatres if the major portion of a film's gross comer from only 3,000 houses.

Preminger made these observations to this reporter recently at Le Lavandou, France, a small resort community on the French Riviera where he is filming "Bonjour Tristesse." Elaborating on his observations, Preminger noted that "all business is in a state of change, but in our business more people get panicky." This preceded his comment relating to toll-tv.

"Anybody who can produce entertainment," he said, "can only profit if new channels of distribution are opened up. It won't make any difference to the producer, director, actor or writer if his effort (Continued on page 75)

Can't Forget Artificial Prosperity

U. S. exhibitors make unreasonable demands in expecting "to keep their houses filled 365 days a year," producer-writer-director Joseph L. Mankiewicz stated while in N. Y. It might be well if they were "crea'ive" and booked other art forms, such as ballet and music, instead of relying on films seven days a week, he added. Root of the industry's trouble is a "false panie" created by the use of the "artificial years" of 1942-47 as a gauge of success, commented Mankiewicz. He held that theatremen are always looking for a smash, whereas modest successes are not despised in Broadway legit.

DIVORCE-BUT ROLES SWITCHED

Which Paramount D'ya Like? WHO'S PARTY OF New French Fiscal Legerdemain: [DIVORCED COUPLE QUARRELING]

Paramount Pictures' opposition to circuits going into film production (see Washington dateline story) while itself recently entering motion picture exhibition via its trade-surprising purchase of the Esquire Theatre in Chicago which is expected to draw growis from exhibitors (as per still another story this issue, captioned 'Allied Again in Big Voice') adds up to more of the same perplexity-of-role in the currently mixed up film industry.

Paramount has placed itself in the curious position of claiming inability to turn out more production because of the limitation on adequate properties but, hand in hand with this, doesn't want "outsiders" to have the opportunity to engage in film-making. Par specifically has told the Dept. of Justice that the previously affiliated circuits which are decree-enjoined from taking on production should not have such restrictions lifted. Par is said to feel that otherwise there would be too much production and this would but the industry.

But how can there be too much production, some exhibs want to know. They point to Par exec statements to the effect that Par's product output is limited only to the number of suitable properties available. And, they further ask, if Par cannot come upon suitable material, what's there to fear about inexperienced, production-wise, circuit men moving in on the pictorial end?

According to some exhib sources, Par is doing a burn over the production program undertaken by its previous affiliate, United Paramount Theatres, which is not barred from such an undertaking under its antitrust decree. (Meanwhile the Esquire Theatre in Chicago is in direct competition with the UPT subsidiary, Balaban & Katz).

Par already is riled over the UPT operation and simply doesn't want other chains to follow the UPT pattern, according to some exhib sources.

Growth Seen Just Matter of Added Plant to Compete With Hollywood-Hi Brown's Views

Hollywood's huge investment in studio space and sound stages is delaying the development of New York as a major film production center although films can be made in Gotham for as much as $200,000 to $300,000 less per picture than on Coast, former radio program packager Himan Brown, who with his brother, Mende, operates the Production Center film studio in N. Y., charged this week.

Pointing out that 10 feature pictures were made in N. Y. in 1957 to date, "the greatest number in 20 years," Hi Brown declared that despite the opposition of the big Coast studios, independents were creating facilities in Gotham that could match Hollywood in every respect. "As soon as more space is developed," Brown said, "there will be more production in N. Y."

Brown cited his own experience with film production in N. Y. He could match Hollywood in every respect. "As soon as more space is developed," Brown said, "there will be more production in N. Y."

Brown cited his own experience with film production in N. Y. He noted, for example, that "That Night," a picture he made at his own studio for RKO and now being released by Universal, cost only $300.000. "It would have cost $500.000 in Hollywood," he emphasized. He pointed out that while in Hollywood a large share of a picture's cost is chalked off for studio overhead, in N. Y. "your investment is commensurate with what comes back." In Hollywood, he maintained, you get back 50c for every $1 invested while in N. Y. it's possible to get back 98c. for every $1. Citing the advantages of N. Y. indication, Brown contended that the money was in N. Y. in form of the banks that make major investments in motion pictures; that many writers and performers preferred to work in N. Y. "All the creative people belong to N. Y.," acry which was a picture in N. Y. because of the lack of cooperation, driving and work here."

Brown disclaimed the reports of some Hollywood producers that it is difficult to make a picture in N. Y. because of the lack of cooperation of municipal authorities. In addition to making his studio available as a rental lot, Brown is continuing to produce his own feature sinctures. Under his deal with RKO, he is set to make four pictures annually. In addition to "That Night," he has completed in the neighborhood of $300.000 with some sort of recognizable names." His studio, which has two sound stages and room for one more, can handle six features and three tv series annually. (38 S has fented one sound stages for the Phill Silvers' "Sgt. Bilko" series.

THE FIRST PART?

By HERMAN LOWE

Washington, Oct. 15.
In the aftermath of last Thursday's (10) Justice Dept. hearing on whether National Theatres circuit should be permitted to produce films, these, key points emerged:

emerged:

The Anti-Trust Division is on the horns of a dilemma because of the inconsistent decrees in the Paramount case. Three divorced circuits—National Theatres, S:anley-Warner and Loew's—may not produce features without specific amendments to their decrees. On the other hand, there is no barrier to production by RKO Theatres and American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatre, and the latter already is making pictures.

ready is making pictures.

The exhibitors, clamoring about film shortage, want the Justice Dept. to equalize all divorced circuits. But the producers and distributors contend this would decrease, rather than increase, the number of "quality" films, since the surviving studios would lose key showcase playing time and would cut back their output.

Notthen, tide the exhibitors would cut back their output.

Neither side—the exhibitors who urged a green light for National and the others or the producers and distributors who opposed production by National— is willing to predict what position the Justice Dept. will take. However, spokesmen for both factions felt the hearing before Victor Tanson, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Anti-Trust Division, was worth while.

The exhibitors said it gave them

The exhibitors said it gave them a chance to emphasize their contention of product shortage to Hanson who has not had much experience in motion picture experience in motion picture cases.

The producers and distributors say the chief value of the session was that it enabled them to "enlighten" Hanson. Explained one spokesman: "Up to the time of the meeting, Hanson and the Anti-Trust Division had been bombarded with exhibitor complaints about product shortage. But there, had never been an opportunity to explain our side. This hearing gave us the chance to clarify and explain our position. We feel we were the gainer from that viewpoint."

The hearing was conducted behind closed doors with newspapermen barred. About 70 men, representing over 20 firms and trade associations from every segment.

resenting over 20 in ms and trade associations from every segment of the industry, were admitted. Commented a somewhat bemused Hanson at the conclusion:

"There was a terrific difference of opinion expressed. It was a very healthly session. It was helpful in that it brought out the problems of the industry. These are very difficult problems and the motion

Hanson said considerable study Hanson said considerable study will be given to the testimony, before the Department lakes its position. While the New Tork trial court must approve any amendment to the decrees, the court will be guided largely by the recommendation of the Anti-Trust Division.

The exhibitor spokesmen were all for National Theatres getting an okay to produce. But there were shades of colinion on how "The Tin Star" is a quality west-ern with names of Henry Fonda and Anthony Perkins to give it meaning in both the sagebrush and general markets. Film has ingre-dients to maintain interest at a high key throughout its fast 92 general markets. Film has ingredients to maintain interest at a high key throughout its fast 92 minutes.

This William Perlberg-George Seaton production unfolds intersettingly under the smooth direction of Anthony Mann, who draws top performances from cast also headed by Betsy Palmer, Michel Ray, Neville Brand and John McIntire. Dudley Nichols screenplay centers around Perkins' insistence upon keeping his sheriff's badge despite the pleading of his sweetheart to abandon hazards of the Job, and Fonda, a former lawman turned human bounty hunter, reluctantly teaching him the tricks of the trade. A very credible story packs excellent dramatic values sharply handled throughout to lend a feeling of mounting suspense. For Fonda, character is one of his strongest in some time and he gives it telling authority as he waits in a small western town for a reward check, then stays on to help the over-anxious young sheriff. Perkins, in this role, asserts himself forcibly, his nemesis being Neville Brand, capable as a gunhandy bully who nearly forces him to back down in his authority. Betsy Palmer is in for suggested romance with Fonda as mother of young Michel Ray (the boy in "The Brave One"), half-breed Indian lad who awkaches himself to a willing Fonda, both convincing in their parts. John McIntire as the town's grizzled old doctor whose murder spurs on the eventual climax as Perkins faces a lynching mob out to get doc's killers, makes his work stand out. Good support, too, is afforded by Mary Webster, in love with Perkins, and Lee Van Cleef and Peter Baldwin as doctor's alman Macrorie's tight editing head and Feter Danum as Slayers.

Loyal Griggs' camera work and Alma Macrorie's tight editing head technical credits. Elmer Bernstein's music score also is effective in setting pace.

again of this interesting mechanical man, although film in ne wise is a follow-up.

The Cyril Hume screenplay, based on story by Edmund Cooper, has been directed with a ready touch by Herman Hoffman, who generates plenty of laughs with young Eyer and his robot before the chilling climax. Philip Abbott, the scientist whose super-computer is in constant use by Pentagon for solution of complex scientific problems, particularly in prepping space platform project, takes his son to the computer in an effort to further boy's education. Lad becomes hypnotized by brain, emerges a chess wizard and in a game with his father wins as a reward latter's permission to play with Robby, something of a wizard on its own. Through the robot the youngster becomes invisible so he can play sans parental objections.

Chilling aspects of narrative occur when the machine comes in the computer space, and becomes a threat to national security, using scientist's son as a hostage to gain its objective.

Young Eyer plays his part skillfully and actions of Robby are nearly human. Abbott capably fulfills father role, Diane Brewster qualifies as the mother and Harold J. Stone, Dennis McCarthy, Robert H. Harris, Alexander Lockwood and John O'Malley are okay in support.

Special effects by Jack Rabin, Irving Block and Louis Dewitt are expert and lead off quality technical credits. Merrill 'Pye's production designing is interesting; so are Harold Wellman's photography, John Faure's editing and Les Baxter's music score. Whit.

bers, Sweeney and March.

Produced, written and directed by Don McGuire, the film is hardly more than a 18-minute vaude sketch stretched to 80 minutes. Talk and more talk features the proceedings and the main purpose of the film appears to be the setting up of situations for gag lines. The latter run as thick and as fast as on a Bob Hope radio or ty program, but only a handful of the gags are capable of including genuine langhter.

The picture's similarity to a radio or tv show is further demonstrated by the number of product plugs that are spotted throughout the film. The picture, however, should find its niche in double feature situations where it can provide adequate amusement to keep the customers happy before the main entry hits the screen.

The characters in "Hear Mgod" are a bunch of pleasant Manhattan conmen vaguely similar to characters created by Damon Runyon. Work is an abhorrent word to them and they live by their wits. Their lingo is strictly Runyonesque. As the chief conman, March is preparing "to fix" a beauty contest so that the moll of Irving the Hammer, a hood never seen on the screen, emerges the winner.

Complications, of course, set in when March substitutes an imocent, wide-eyed beauty who succeeds in bringing out his better instincts. It's the usual boy meets girl, loses girl, etc. stuff that works out finely when March decides to reform and employ his conning techniques for legitimate activities. Love serves as the potton that brings about his reformation.

The performances meet the demands of McGuire's screenplay. March is okay, but he's been better as a straight actor-comedian as evidenced by his performance as the punch drunk fighter in Metro's irt's Always Fair Weather" several years ago. Joe E. Ross is fine as March's trusting sidekick as is Joey Faye as a comman who out: one for mad my play and set decorations, have an obvious cost-conscious feeling. The performances meet the demands of McGuire's screenlay. Jean Willies is Joey Faye as a comman who outcoms the master. Jean Willies is properly brash as the gangster's girl and Merry Anders display for the signal of a gangster is humorous although stereotyped. Technical aspects, including photography and set decorations, have an obvious cost-conscious feeling.

Tomlinson Loss on Loew Shares

As Loew's shares came tumbling down last week, Joseph Tomlinson, like it or not, went along for the ride. Big, independent, fighting stockholder Tomlinson held 180,000 shares in the film corporation at a reported average price of close to $22 per share, for a total investment of $3,960,000.

Last week's closing quotation was $14.25, meaning Tomlinson's paper loss as of that time was $990,000.

It's understood Tomlinson bought on margin and owes $1,120,000 on the Loew's stock.

Total valuation of Loew's outstanding issue on the basis of last week's closing prices on the New York Stock Exchange, has fallen over $40,000,000 since 1957's high was reached.

3 Different Courts Pro-Vogel; Tomlinson Fails to Prohibit Already-Delayed N.Y. Meeting

Three-decisions from three dif-ferent courts, all coming on the same day—Friday (11)—removed the legal threats which Joseph Tomlinson had hoped would delay or enjoin yesterday's (Tues.) spe-cial meeting of Loew's stockholders as called by prexy Joseph R. Vogel. The rulings, all coming within the period of a few hours, were the following:

(1) In the Federal District

(1) In the Federal District Court of Delaware, Judge Wil-liam H. Kirkpatrick denied Tomlinson's request for a tem-

Tominson's request for a tem-porary injunction to postpone the special meeting.

(2) The Supreme Court of Delaware, a three-man panel, unanimously upheld the deci-sion of Chancellor Collins J. Seitz of the Delaware Chan-erry Court that Louis B. Mayer and Samuel J. Briskin were and Samuel J. Briskin were illegally elected to Loew's board of directors at the so-called Tomlinson rump meet-called Tominson rump meeting in July.

(3) The Appellate Division of the N.Y. Supreme Court upheld the ruling of Judge Morris Spector enjoining Tominson, "his associates, employees or agents" from interfering with the halding of the special meeting.

Decisions followed a week of charges and counter charges as each faction in the fight for con-trol of Loew's stepped up its bar-rage of statements in an effort to rage of statements in an effort to influence the company's stock-holders. Tomlinson, who so far had made no direct appeal to the share-holders, issued his first proxy solicitation on Wednesday (9). His pitch, sent out with the approval of the Securities & Exchange Commission, represented, a last-diffed drive to presented. formmission, represented a last-ditch drive to prevent a quorum at yesterday's meeting.

Contending that he represented a "majority" group on the board of directors, Tomihason asked the stockholders to revoke the proxies originally pledged to Vogel. His aim, Tomihason noted, was to "prevent the actions proposed to be taken at the meeting or, in the alternative, to secure revocation of sufficient proxies to prevent the adoption of the by-law enlarging the board."

Tomihason's Pitch

Tomlinson's Pitch

Tomilinson's Pitch

Tomilinson's solicitation pointed out that the Delaware Court of Chancery had removed from the agenda of vesterday's meeting the attempt to oust Tomilinson and Stanley Meyer from the board. "This means, for all practical purposes, that the abortive removal attempt has been struck down, said the Tomilinson statement, "and the two items of business before the special stockholders meeting will be a proposal to enlarge the board of directors and the filling of vacancies on the board."

of directors and the filling of vacancies on the board."

Tomlinson's solicitation asserted that he is a member of a group of directors constituting a majority of the present board. This group, consisting of Tomlinson, Meyer, K. T. Keller, Ray, Lawson and Louis Johnson, it was noted, "is dissatisfied with the present administration of the company's affairs and wishes to replace Vogel as president." If was pointed out that there is a split in the board and the solicitation is not being made on behalf of management but that in a sense "it is made on behalf of the group constituting a majority of the board."

In a letter accompanying the proxy solicitation, Tomilinson said that he and the "directors who support me" believe that the call for the special meeting "was not in the best interest of the corpora-tion and that the campaign which has been conducted is a cynical nas been conducted is a cynical attempt to mislead the stockholders into putting in control of this company a man and a group who, in my judgment, have not the remotest chance of putting it back on its feet."

It's a Secret?

Tomilisson informed the stock-holders that they have not been told that 10 of the 11 duy elected stockholders present at the board meeting in Los Angeles on July 12 held the view that Vogel should be replaced as president and passed a resolution appointing a committee to find a successor. According to Tomilisson; it was only after the committee could not agree on a Tominson; it was only after the committee could not agree on a successor that the resignations occurred creating the vacancies on the board. Since then, said Tominson, Vogel and the three directors allied with him have prevented a quorum of the board from assembling.

Charging that the attempt "to pack the board" is unjustified on any basis, Tomlinson asserted that pack the board" is unjustified on any basis, Tominson asserted that the proposed increase would cost Loew's an additional $60,000 annually. He pointed out, too, that few of the major U.S. corporations have a board as laffge as 19 and that Columbia has eight, Warner Bros., 20th-Fox and Universal have 10, and Paramount has 12.

Tominson retterated that he had "no desire to control or dominate" the company. As a large stockholder, he said, his only interest "is to see it earn money, pay dividends and increase, through retained earnings and bright future prospects, the value of this stock, my investment and yours." He said he opposed yesterday's meeting because he believed it to be "a means by which Yogel and the old quard seek by propagandizing the stockholders for perpetuate themselves in office."

Vogel, in an immediate answer to Tomlinson's first proxy solicitation, declared in a letter to stockholders that the Canadian industrialist was attempting to take away from the investors the privilege of voting at the special meeting.
He described the Tomlinson move as "an obvious effort to dany you as "an obvious effort to deny you (the other stockholders) the oppor-tunity to choose the management tunity to choose the management of your company."

In a series of moves and countermoves on Thursday (10), Tomlinson issued what he purported to be the text of the transcript of the July 12 board meeting on the Coast at which he charges 10 of the 11 Loew's directors "held the view" that Vogel should be replaced as president.

that Vogel should be replaced as president.
Vogel's letter to the stockholders fiatly declared that this was "absolutely untrue." Vogel also stated that it was also "absolutely untrue" that the board passed a resolution appointing a committee to find a successor "for me." He declared that four of the directors present—George L. Killion, William Parker, Ogden R. Reid and George Brownell—had affirmed under oath that they were opposed to the resolution to "replace me." In addition, Vogel noted, Fred Florence, another director present at the meeting, told him personally that he was opposed to the Tomlinson faction's move to replace Vogel.

JOE VOGEL WINS-BUT NOT ENTIRELY; BRISKIN ON, THAU OFF LOEW'S BOARD

Loew's Inc. scored a major, but not complete, victory in the fight for corporate control in which he was pitted against dissident stock-holder Joseph Tomlinson.

At 6:33 p.m. yesterday (Tues.) following a full day's meeting of stockholders, the chief exec amounced it "appeared" that all his candidates for election to the board had been voted in with one exception, Benjamin Thau. Vogel later stated Thau had withdrawn voluntarily because of difficulty to commute from Culver City to New York.

mute from Culver City to New York.

Representing a setback for Vogel was the election also of Samuel J. Briskin, who had the support of Tomlinson and the banking firms of Lehman Bros: and Lezard Freres. It was immediately made clear that Briskin's election will be subject to a challenge of the votes cast. He received 442,618 ballots. Vogel management's nine directors totaled 3,512,486 votes. The Vogel proposal to enlarge the board to 19 members was carried by a vote of 3,449,446 in fabor and 519,435 opposed.

At session's end, the Vogel group appeared elafed. The Tomlinson faction was absent. Legalists for management expressed themselves that "after our atforneys get.

that "after our attorneys get through, we are not at all sure that even the Briskin election to the board might not be lenged."

West For Briskin

Meeting, which was intermittently marked by individual stockholder outbursts and calls for order, had a surprising development in the nomination of Briskin, producer whose last studio affiliation was Paramount. Akthough not new to the Loew's lineup of proand con forces, having previously been named to the directorate in a Tomilison-dominated meeting—since declared illegal—Briskin at yesterday's session had the out-inte-open support of Lehman and Lazard.

Vogel made a call for from-the-

Vogel made a call for from-the-floor nominations and this immedi-ately was answered by Eastman Burkett, attorney with the N. Y. law firm of Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett, who named Briskin as a candidate. Burkett said he represented the 2,000 shares owned by Edwin L. Weisl, senior partner in ST&B and a Briskin supporter through most of the corporate warfare.

Candidacy of Briskin was seconded by R. R. Rusmisel, representing 150,000 shares held by Lehman and Lazard.

Spokesman for ST&B said the firm was not backing Tomlinson per se, but because of the two opposing factions on the board wanted someone with broad picture business experience. Complying with a ST&B request, Vogel took it upon himself to issue a ballot with Briskin's name on it.

Support for Vogel at this point was voiced by Judge Louis Goldstein and Ben Javits.

Briskin's name went into the hopper after Vogel, confident of a quorum, succeeded in winning an okay to increase the board. The prez said a "great majority" voted his way, and with that William A. Parker placed in nomination the Vogel candidates, including: Washington lawyer Elisworth C. Alvoged C. and the vogel candidates, including: Washington lawyer Elisworth C. General tenor of the session was one of endorsement of Vogel although there was scattered apnlause, too, for Tomilinson's men.
Tomilinson himself got a good salvo.
Neither Briskin nor Thau were in were present in the morning but failed to show in the afternoon.

Investors were given box lunches during the midday recess. Following the lunch, screening of a new M-G picture "Don't Go Near the Water" kept the investors occupied during a protracted ballot-counting period.

Among the outbursts was one involving John Gilbert, familiar (and outspoken) figure at many stockholder conclaves. He raised a fuss about Vogel's failure to introduce board members

Oppose Big Board

A bombshell was dropped at the morning session when Lehman Bros. and Lazard Freres, in effect, came out in support of Tomlinson. A few moments before the vote on the resolution to enlarge the board, Rusmisel read a statement in which le said that the two Wall Street banking firms were opposed to the expansion of the board from 13 to 19 and urged the stockholders to vote against the resolution.

Noting that the banking firms were "seriously disturbed" with the record of the company and that they were not part of either faction and were only interested in the "welfare" of the company, Rusmisel declared that a "large, unwieldy board" is not the solution to the company's problems. He added that a large board would only cause confusion and added expense for Loew's.

Rusmisel sat in a row of seats occupied by members of the Tomisson faction and several lawyers from the law firm of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett.

Early in the meeting, two representatives of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett attempted to place a cloud on the legality of the meeting by seeking to determine if there was a quorum present. They claimed that Tomlinson has received "a bale of revocations" of earlier proxies pledged to Vogel and they demanded a count before the meeting proceeded any further. Vogel maintained that there was a quorum present at the Sept. 12 meeting and that yesterday's session was simply an adjournment of that meeting, In addition, he stated that he could predict that there was a quorum present.

Attorney Ben Javits, who previously represented Tomlinson, asked that the meeting continue as scheduled. He pointed out that even if there were no quorum present those who desired to could seek "a remedy" in the courts after the meeting. Louis Nizer, special attorney for Vogel and Loew's, said the efforts of the representatives of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett were another effort to "obstruct the mee'ing and cause confusion." He cited court decisions which ruled that the stockholders had a right to determine the issues involved and (Continued on page 23)

WB Rubs Out 40 Ad-Pub Staffers In Mass Overhaul

In one of the most thorough housecleanings in the history of the company, Warner Bros. dramatically skeletonized its homeoffice publicity - advertising department on Monday (14) with more than 40 staffers being pinkslipped. Completely eliminated was the company's 32-mar art department. As part of what WB terms a streamlining and realignment of everyphase of its global operation, adchief Gilbert Golden and his assistant, Richard Lederer, will shift their headquarters to the Coast.

All staffers associated with the Screen Publicists Guild will be paid double severance pay. The art department, according to terms of the contract with the company, was given a 60-day notice. Publicists were given two weeks.

Although there have beeff frequent rumors of a drastic upheaval in the WB pub-ad setup, the final blow came as a shock to staffers as they reported for work on Monday morning. They were summoned to a meeting in the seventh floor board room at which pub-ad chief Robert Taplinger announced the drastic shakeup. Later those earmarked for dismissal were handed their notices.

Payment NSG $6,500,

Not much exciting here this stanza, with newcomers generally mighty thin. Music Hall held "Jet Pilot" for five days in fourth week for nice returns. "No Down Payment" is rated okay at Fifth Avenue but "Black Scorpion" is not so strong. "Seven Wonders of World" shapes big in eighth Paramount stanza.

"Chieago Confidential" (UA) Good $7,000 or over. Last week, "40 Guns" (20th) and "Deerslayer" (20th), $8,200.

Biz is on a sturdy, even keel this week at downtown houses. "Helen Morgan Story" shapes sturdy at the Michigan. "Portland Expose" looks loud at the Palms, "Tammy" is landing big trade in second exposure downtown at the Madison. "Naked Sun" is rated routine at Broadway-Capitol. "No Down Payment" is having trouble getting the coin at the Fox opening round. "Seven Wonders" is still sharp in 63d week at Music Hall.

Aside from "Joker Is Wild," the skimpy lineup of newcomers holds little to help the boxoffice here. Flu outbreak also hurts. Exhibitors and distributors are out on a limb this week. Not many of last week's starters look better than fair for second frame. "Helen Morgan Story" continues at the Chicago until replacement product becomes available with very sad outlook in second frame. Much stronger is "Story of Esther Costello" at the Woods. "No Down Payment" promises little for second installment at Oriental Second round of "Quantey". "Public Pigeon No. 1" shapes fine at Roosevelt. At the World. "Stella" is boff in second week. "Third round of "Joker Is Wild". Shapes okay at United Artists, as is same set of "Jet Pilot" at State-Lake. Roadshows are holding well through general slump. 3,000-Seat Tel Aviv Concert Hall Opens Huston Still Seeking

Ends Musicians' Former Agony of Repeating Each Program Seven Times-Bernstein Conducts

By PETER VERNON

Tel Aviv. Oct. 8.

Thanks to the money gift of a Philadelphian, this Israeli capital has its first concert hall, the Frederic R. Mann Auditorium. There on Oct. 2 the Israel Philharmonic presented a three and a half hour first concert for which the audience paid $15 to $60 a seat.

Leonard Bernstein flew in from New York right after the Broadway premiere of his new musical "West Side Story"—I did not even wait for the reviews"—to conduct the for the reviews"—to conduct the gala event with the Israel Philharmonic, which he has regularly guest-conducted since 1947. Isaac Stern, also a regular visitor to Israel for the past eight years, came to play Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto. Artur Rubinstein, on his second visit to Israel, made the trip for a three-day stay only, playing Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto in two concerts. The third scheduled soloist. cellist Gregor Piatiin two concerts. The third scheduled soloist, cellist Gregor Piati-gorsky, had to cancel due to illness; replacing him was Paul Tortelier, the French cellist (who has built himself a second home in an Israeli communal settlement "Kibbutz").

Bumpy Decades

The meriorable opening concert of the Palestine Orchestra (as it was then called) in December 1936 of the Palestine Orchestra (as it was then called) in December 1936 under the magic baton of Arturo Toscanini and in the presence of Bronislaw Hubermann, founder of the group, was, of course, recalled. The Orchestra's career began in a hastily-converted exhibition shed in Northern Tel Aviv, not far from the port, but the 2.400-seat hall with its creaking clairs and outside noises had to be abandoned during the war. Concerts were then given subsequent y in a 700-seat theatre and an antiquated 1,100-seat structure, while in Jerusalem and Haifa—and in colonies and villages—cinema halls have still to be used. Bad acoustic and seating conditions, as well as the small capacity of the Tel Aviv hall—which forced the Orchestra to repeat each program seven to nine times in Tel Aviv alone, to satisfy local demand—made life unbearable for the musicians, and the completion of the Fredric R Mann Auditorium seat. cians, and the completion of the Fredric R. Mann Auditorium, seat-ing almost 3,000, is the fulfillment a dream.

Ing amost souto, is the full mind of a dream.

Hall is conceived in a style of mobtrusive modernity, shaped like a glant fan. In the analysis of its architects—Z. Rechter, D. Karmi, and J. Rechter—"it grows out of the ground, spreading outwards with its balconies and galleries, projecting through its broad foyer, and reaching up unto its great coper domed roof which also conforms to the needs of acoustics." Building materials and interior decorations are almost exclusively israeli-made. The building forms part of a block of 'partly unfinished) structures serving all the arts and also containing the Orchestra's offices and archives and a music library.

a music library.

During the present season, the Philharmonic's 22nd, the following talent is scheduled to appear: Leonard Bernstein, Paul Klecki, Alfred Wallenstein, Charles Munch, Sergiu Celibidache, Carlo Maria Giulini, George Singer, Rafael Kubelik, Michael Taube, Gari Bertini, Eytan Lustig, Dimittr Mitropoulos, Alexander Brailowsky, Claudio Arrau, Pnina Salzman, Frank Pelleg, David Bar-Illan, Varda Nishry, Isaac Stern, Erika Morini, Yehudi Menuhin, Nathan Milstein, Zvi Haftel, Yona Ettlinger, and a group of singers from New York's Met, Milan's Teatro alla Scala, and London's Royal Opera House.

Beethoven's "Consecration of the House" and "Festival Prelude" by 22-year-old Israeli Noam Sheriff, who had won the $550 prize given by Sol Hurok.

Acoustics in the hall proved almost perfect and also stood the test of the first solo recital, when Artur Rubinstein, overwhelmed by the ovation of the capacity audience ended the gala concert by playing the most famed of Chopin's Polonaises in his inimitable interpretation.

126 Shooting Days To Can UA's 'Vikings' Despite 49 Rainy Norway Days

Munich, Oct. 8.
With 126 shooting days by Technirama cameras of the first unit on n barren, isolated "The Vikings" Hardangerfjord of western Norway. director Richard Fleischer this past weekend canned his final take on weekend canned his final take on the Kirk Douglas Bryna production. Despite 49 rainy days out of 60 in Norway, and almost as bad weather in France, the UA-scheduled release ran only a week over time. Co-stars Douglas, Tony Curtis, Ernest Borgnine and Janet Leigh are now headed for California and home. Some will stop off in Paris for a few days. for a few days.

Budgetwise, according to Douglas, the picture didn't do so well, having gone $1,000,000 over the original estimate to fill the Edwin Marshall book. Douglas places final cost at $4,250,000.

mainant notes. Douglas parkes at final cost at $4,250,000.

"But we had no precedents. No Viking story has ever been shot; a major film has never been made in Norway," said producer Jerry Bresler. "As we progressed we discovered that to give the film scope and values which it had to have, we would have to spend more money—and more time." As an example, Bresler cites the vastness of the fjords which made the original 30-acre set and number of extras look like Lilliputians. It was, he said, necessary to hire more players, and to transport all of them over water from nearby fishing village homes.

According to Bresler there is not ing village homes.

According to Bresler there is not a miniature in the film. "Nor did we process a single shot nor use even one traveling matte. We shot everything against its original background. This involved the use of barges for water shots—and shooting on water js, at best, an ulcer-maker."

ulcer-maker."

The biggest problem was the French and Norwegian weather. Near-constant rain in both places forced filming in rain and fog of scenes which should have been shot in sunlight. Thus, sequences started in bad weather, had to be finished in bad weather. But indirectly, the weather resulted in better picture. Photography by Jack Cardiffreveals a brooding moodiness which heightens drama and suspense.

Femme Lead for His 'Harris' Pic in Japan

Tokyo, Oct. 8.
Although the femme lead of Okichi has not yet been cast, John Huston was anxious and optimistic before moving south to Kyoto which will be location headquarters for 20th-Fox' "Mr. Townsend Harris," John Wayne starrer due to roll this month. Less than affirmative on script possibilities when here earlier this year, Huston, who knuckled down to the writing chore in Mexico with co-scripters Charles Grayson and Alfred Hayes expressed complete satisfaction with the first script that emerged.

Film subject is a delicate matter to the Japanese whose romantic notions have been frayed by previous U.S. locationers. Story involves the first American consul in Japan and geisha Okichi who was assigned to care for Harris' needs.

In searching for an Okichi, some 10 screen tests were conducted by Huston and producer Eugene Frenke in Hollywood with others staged here.

Frenke was very high on a test he made of Miyoshi "Nancy" Umeki, pop singer who plays straight in "Sayonara" He also mentioned terper Sono Osato as a possibility. In Japan, Keiko Awaji, who apeared in "Bridges of Toko-ri," (Par) was among those interviewed. The problem of casting a distaff Japanese lead is not new to American filmakers. It has been a puzzler to most locationers here

American filmakers. It has been a puzzler to most locationers here and result has often been settling for secondary choices or worse. Huston pinpointed the problem when he told VARIETY "Tve seen a number of Japanese girls who are fine actresses, beauties and who can speak English, but to get all three in one is quite an order."

In addition to the title role, only three Western parts will be in the film. One, a Dutch interpreter named Huskins and the other two, sea, captains.

named Huskins and the other two, sea, captains.

Huston said he will try to keep the film at about $2,500,000, and bring it in within three months. Picture will be shot mostly in and around Kyoto where some of the over 900 shrines and temples will be utilized as cover sets.

Huston said there is "no truth whatsoever" to a New York story quoting indie producer Steve Parker as saying that Huston will be associated with him on a 50-50 basis in a Daiei co-production of "Fourth Bureau." This denial follows a similar negative reaction from Daiei prez Massichi Nagata who said that Parker's announcement of Daiei's participation in the co-production was unfounded.

Play has some good moments and fancy set by U. S. designer Jack Youngerman, but hardly constitutes satisfactory evening. Renaud does not appear in this one, but will be seen later in year with Barrault in both Pol Quentin's dramatization of Franz Kafka's novel, "The Castle" and in revival of Claudel's "Satin Slipper."

Michel Duran's 4-character comiedy, "Mon Coeur Balance" at Arts, tale of a capricious young lady and the men she keeps or a string, is amusing stuff and may make grade as may "Ne Quittez pas" (Hold On!) at Nouveautes, tale of telephone operator who listens in and then walks into the lives of some of her frantic callers. "Ne Quittez pas" which has sound performance by Jacqueline Gauthier in star role, is Marc-Gilbert Sauvajon rewrite of Alfred Savoir's. "Passy 47-28," 1929 smash.

Fall of 23d French Govt. to Delay BELGIANS CHEER Issue of Export Visas for British Signing of Franco-U.S. Pix Accords

With the fall of the 23d French government since the war, the pending French-U.S. Film Accords can not be signed until the crisis is over and a new Prime Minister has been installed. This may take a month, but meanwhile the Mofion Picture Export Assn. is getting dubbing visas for the major pic companies which will go towards the amount handed out when the accord is finalized.

New accord, according to Marc Spiegel, MPEA rep, has been decided upon and it will give the Yanks 110 pix per year again with regular remittances of $125,000 per month for all the companies, plus capital gains conversions. The 20% loss in conversion due to the deloss in conversion, due to the de-valuation, will be incurred.

capital gains curversions. And the conversion, due to the devaluation, will be incurred.

However, Gallic sources maintain that face saving is in the offing with the French demanding some Yank concessions to help the French film in America, such as majors taking Gallic pix for circuit distribution, owning showcase theatres in the U.S., etc. If not getting this, the French Centre Du Cinema may still hold back a percentage of visas to give them out on a merit system to Yank companies helping Gallic production by investing in pix here or taking them for U.S., world or domestic distrib.

This would be done through MPEA, which would have to make the proper distribution of visas to the companies, plus awarding the special ones without the head-aches of intra-mural friction, This may be worked out beforehand, however. The new accord would be retroactive to last June, but has been extended until the new agreement could be signed. The Common Mart for Films looks definitely to be in operation next year which may be another head-ache for Yank companies.

In addition, Sabena, which operates the only hellcopter service in Europe, is extending this service to include extra flights from France, Holland, Germany and other Belgian cities.

Hitherto, licenses have been granted by the Board of Trade acting on the advice of the British Film Producers Assn. Recently, that monopoly situation was cracked by the Federation of British Film Makers which gets a proportionate share of available permits. In view of the friction that apparently exists, however, the BOT is likely to take the matter entirely out of the hands of the industry so far as the French and German markets are concerned. The Italian territory, however, is covered by a three-year Anglo-Italian Film Agreement, which has approximately two more years to run.

In view of the limited number of visas available for France and Germany, this could frequently mean that they have to be excluded from these territories as British pix and can only be entered in the American Agreement. Co-Prod Activity Way Up in Italy

Rome, Oct. 8.

Co-production is bigger than ever currently in the Italian film industry. A recent tabulation shows that such production efforts with France, Spain, and Germany have been steadily on the rise since 1950, and the trend is still up.

Notable spurt in co-prod pix is noted with Spain, Forty-six pix have resulted from Italo-Spanish teamwork, 22 of them to date this year. In the past, three feature films were co-produced with Spain in 1954, nine in 1955 and 12 in 1956. The French partnership, which started the whole movement some time back, has been the busiest, Figures recorded are as follows, adding up to a total of 227 to date, with 13 back in 1956, and 32 to date this year.

COAST CAN'T DELIVER STARS TO INDUSTRY: SHOWMEN BLUSH IN JUBILEE AFTERGLOW

A large part of the American film industry has been left looking silly. Exhibitor representatives, as well as studio officials, by the hundreds, are red-faced with embarrassment as a result of the cancellation of the long-projected cross-country tour to be undertaken by "20 stars." The latter is in quotes, for while that number of junketeers had been romised right along, there never had been any meaningful number of top personality commitments.

of top personality commitments.

The promises had been made by studio sources, including reps of the Assn. of Motion Picture Producers, It was on the basis of these that the Council of Motion Picture Assn. of America in New York and theatremen in 17 key cities went ahead with laying the groundwork for what they truly expected to be a gigantic celebration of Hollywood's Golden Jubilee.

They're burning because they feel the "20 stars" promises proved to be nothing but a not-so-gay deception. $100,000 For Costs

$100,000 For Costs

The project had been underway for many months. MPAA member companies put up $100,000 to cover the traveling expenses. Contacted by COMPO, the theatremen, mostly through their local organizations, set up a string of local celebrations tieing in with the anticipated visits of Hollywood luminaries. Contacts were made with community and state brass, receptions were arranged for, the complexities of protocol were at least partially ironed out.

And all the while, there were no stars, with such possible exceptions as Universal contractees Martha Hyer and George Nader. A possibility was Gary Cooper, but for only a week. Yet, the press handouts were coming in constant stream, alleging that all was well.

Collapse of all reality in connection with the Golden Jubilee came last week. A press release from the MPAA simply said "extensive production commitments" prevented any stars from going along for the ride.

Several months ago Motion Picture Assn. of America's Eric Johnston advised all top Hollywood and the industry's plans agents of the industry's plans for a Golden Jubilee, as part of which a number of stars would be called upon to tour the country. recriminations in many places. Taking the brunt of the criticism will be the stars. Due to exhibitor-complaints, it will be assumed that the stars did not volunteer in sufficient numbers or with sufficient stature to make the 22-day, 17-city tour practical from an exploitation standpoint.

"Actually, the stars are the least to blame. Chiefly at fault is the present nature of motion picture studio operation. No longer do the studios control the stars. In fact, it's indicated in some instances that the studios no longer fully control their own destinies.

"The film studios abdicated con-trol several years ago when (1) they lopped off their contract lists and gave virtually all the important players their freelance papers; (2) when several of the most important studies more developed. when several of the most important studios more and more developed what, for want of a better description, is the 'United Artists' setup of chiefly being in business to finance and distribute independent product; (3) the resignation of the studios from the responsibility of being the industry's creative force. More and more they became chiefly bankers and merchandisers of film packages, with no more interest in developing a new personality than would any branch of the Bank of America. Bank of America.

"That the system's harvest That the system's narvest or troubles have come home to roost has been all too obvious. Universal some time ago felt the pinch and instituted a vigorous new faces' campaign; 20th-Fox also has been courageously casting new talent. But it takes considerable effort and time to develop and promote a personality into star status—and hollywood hasn't taken quite enough time to furnish the needs of such an ambitious exploitation program as the Golden Jubilee.

"If the promotion was to be suc-tessful, most of the players would have had to be young, glamorous and solid boxoffice. The youth of America comprises the majority

Briefs From Lots

Hollywood, Oct. 15.

Along with the Golden Jubilee cross-country tour of stars, the Audience Awards project which was launched by the Council of Motion Picture Organizations a few years ago is being abandoned this year. Decision to drop the "audience-participation" gimmick was made quietly this week.

Audience Awards was designed to intensify public interest in pictures by simply having the public vote their favorite pictures and players. Ballots were made available in theatre lobbies and the customers checked their choices from 20 capdidates in each category. Initial acceptance was impressive, about 14,000,000 ballots having been cast, according to COMPO's count.

Reason for the scuttling is that the Motion Picture Assn. of America and COMPO now want to concentrate all attention on the Academy Awards Sweepstakes, which also has the man in the street for the theatre) as participant. With prizes (as promoted by exhibitors) awarded the winners, the public is asked to guess in advance the Oscar winners. Ties are broken via letter writing. letter writing.

All effort will be exerted for the Acad Sweepstakes this year be-cause the program, this year, takes on new potential through the indus-try's sponsorship of the Oscar tele-vision show.

Golden Jubilee Fund Remainder About $80,000

With the Golden Jubilee now but a well-pondered thought that failed to materialize, what happens to the $100,000 which the Motion Picture Assn. of America donated to defray the star-tour expenses? It's estimated that about $20,000 of this was used on preliminary work, leaving a bank balance of $80,000.

leaving a bank balance of $80,000. While the final decisions are up to the presidents of the MPAA member companies, suggestion has been made in top circles that the money be now allocated to the Academy Awards Sweepstakes. MPAA some time ago provided a budget of $75,000 as its share of the AAS overhead and if the new proposal goes through the sum climbs to $155,000.

The guessing game (the public is asked to call the shots on the Oscar winners) thus shapes as a fairtar witners; thus snapes as a fair-ity major project. Exhibs pick up the tab for all expenses on the lo-cal level and last year this item came to about $225,000 in cash outlay, plus the availability of their facilities, manpower and prizes which were promoted.
